STICKMEN BEGIN TO PLY TRADE IN INTERNATIONAL

In Two Games 52 Hits And 33 Runs Were Recorded

LEAFS AGAIN LOSE

Toronto Takes it on the Chin For Fifth Time in Succession

The International League's baseball men seem to have taken cognizance of the fact that the mound department was threatening to create a monopoly on early-season starvation.

Either in revenge for the opening blasts of fine pitching or because the supply of low-hit hurlers has temporarily run out, the stickmen began to ply their trade in dead earnest yesterday and in two games that escaped the ravages of cold, rainy weather piled up a total of 33 hits, good for 22 runs.

nly one of the day's four starting pitchers—Fred (Sheriff) Blake of Baltimore, managed to go the route and he did it in spite of a pounding. Although nicked for 10 blows including a homer by Rex Boone and a pair of doubles, Blake recovered from a bad start to gain a 12-3 decision over the Toronto Leafs.

Blake yielded eight hits in the first three innings, five of them in the third. He then pitched no hit ball for the next three frames, while his teammates belted Leroy Herrmann to cover in the sixth and continued against Murray and Mooty for 13 blows, good for 20 bases. Glenn Chapman, with a boner and two singles that drove in six runs, led the clout collection, that included circuit swats by Bill Hoffner and Eddie Mayo and a triple and double by Ab Wright.

18 Hits For Bisons

The Newark Bears, sticking one notch ahead of Ballimore in the standing, cut loose with a 18-inh assault on three pitchers to trim the Buffalo Bisons 10-5. The Newark Elbowers also had their difficulties as Cecil Spitler went out for a pinch hitter in the seventh after giving eight hits and four runs and Mahnky and Laflame finished.

A furious six-run attack on Ken Ash brought the Bears from behind in the fifth and they continued in the next frame to drive Ken Ash to the clubhouse and collect the rest of their runs off Johnny Wilson. Merrill May's homer with two aboard was the high spot of the slugfest while Ash, proving more effective as a batter than as a pitcher, accounted for two Bison tallies with a homer.

The Bears' infield combination of Richardson, Schalk and McCarthy again saved the hurlers trouble by pulling off five double plays for a total of 14 in ab games.

The Montreal-Syracuse and Rochester-Albany games were postponed because of rain and cold.

RESCUED RECOVERING, SCADDING AT HALIFAX

World Pays Tribute to Heroic and Self-Sacrificing Work of Miners

Plane Carries Scadding From Mine to Halifax To Undergo Treatment

Trench Foot' Condition Believed Reason For Removal

ROBERTSON IMPROVES

Both Men Reported as Likely to Recover Quite Rapidly

Halifax, April 23—(CP)—A Royal Canadian Air Force seaplane carrying Alfred Scadding to Halifax for hospital treatment landed at Halifax shipyards at 1.05 this afternoon.

The survivor of 10 days exposure and hunger underground was removed to an ambulance immediately.

Scadding was taken from his emergency hospital in the Moose River mine office at 11.00 o'clock this morning, 10 hours after he was carried on a stretcher from the mine prison.

A Canadian Army Medical Corps ambulance took him over five miles of boggy country road from Moose River to Long Lake from which the plane took off.

It could not be determined if complications had set in, but it was believed he was suffering intensely from "trench feet" which could be given greater relief here.

Doctors had said last night he was in good physical condition except for his sore feet and that he would recover.

Dr. D. E. Robertson, who was rescued from the mine with Scadding early this morning, remained in Moose River where he was believed to be gaining strength rapidly. He slept late this morning.

DOCTOR HONORED — Another Canadian doctor has won international fame. Dr. Marvin A. Archibald of Montreal has been awarded the coveted Trudeau Medal of the National Tuberculosis Association of New York for his contributions in the battle against the dread disease.

DUKE OF KENT'S BANNER IS HUNG

No General Commemoration of St. George's Day in England

(By Thomas A. Champion)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)
London, April 23 (Cable)

Although St. George's Day received no general commemoration here, its significance attached to today's annual service of the Order of St. Michael and St. George held in St. Paul's Cathedral.

The Duke of Kent, appointed a Knight of the Order, cross last year, wore for the first time the cloth mantle of Garter blue with the elaborate collar and chain over his naval uniform. The presentation of the high altar consisted of other high officers as Privy Councillors and the Chancellor of the Order, which is part of the cathedral, the Duke of Kent's banner was ceremonially hung, and the banners of those Knights who had died during the year were taken down.

The Queen, in Church in the heart of the city, the Lord Mayor and Sheriffs attended in state a special service at which David Blaiberg of Liverpool outlined his first hand knowledge of the Fairbridge Farm Schools to plead support of their work for boys in Australia and on Vancouver Island.

The Fairbridge Farm School was established as a provincial testimony legatee in the will of Rudyard Kipling and has admitted to probate April 9).

VETERAN TRAVELLER DIES

Brockville, Ont., April 23.—(CP)—Robert Johnston, 74, veteran commercial traveller, died at his home here last night, after a period of declining health. He was well-known on the road in Eastern Ontario and Quebec.

Doctor Held Magill in Arms For Hours to Give Warmth

Halifax, April 23 (CP) — The Halifax Herald in an extra edition this morning carried the following story concerning the heroic — "Death of Magill is related".

"The surgeon which has shrouded the death of Herman Magill in the Meagher shaft was solved this morning.

"For hours in that dark prison Dr. D. E. Robertson held his companion in his arms, seeking to give life-saving warmth.

"Pneumonia developed.

"While he was in the throes of this disease the rescuers above pierced the roof of the level.

"Magill knew this, but he never communicated with the people on the surface.

"Five hours later he died.

"The smoke which smothers for the mine disaster saw on Easter Monday formed signals.

"During a dearth of air, Magill, Robertson and Scadding burned the only two bits of dry wood in the shaft.

"They knew this was their only hope of indicating to the world above they had not been killed in the first crash.

"As time during their imprisonment was hunger a chief factor in the suffering.

"They did not suffer severely from this cause.

"They drank water freely and to this attribute their present fine condition.

"Their uncomfortable position and the fear they might not get to the surface gave chief concern.

"In the early days of their entombment the victims were able to sleep.

"When they did, they locked themselves in one another's arms to preserve what little foodless bodies would generate."

ANXIOUS ONTARIO STAYS UP TO HEAR LATEST BULLETINS

Newspapers Besieged With Calls as To Progress Made

SONS ARE HAPPY

Nurses in Hospital Wake up Patients to Give News of Rescue

Toronto, April 23 (CP)—Anxious Ontario, probably never before in its history so concerned over the fate of two residents, went to bed early today happy in the knowledge that Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding were safe on the earth's surface.

The province stayed up late—be-yond midnight—to learn that the two Toronto men who mocked death in a gold mine level 141 feet underground at Moose River, N.S., were rescued. Prayers had been answered, and cheers went away.

An incorrect report from the mine that Scadding had already reached the entombed men in the afternoon served to increase the tension during last night. Hundreds of thousands of persons stayed up to get the bulletins. Newspaper offices were besieged by calls.

"How long," they asked, even as Dr. Robertson had made the same plea for days through the communication tube to the surface from the damp cavern which he and Scadding had entered when Herman Magill were stretched.

When word flashed across the province shortly after midnight that the men had been brought out, there was general jubilation. "The gang in Toronto's city hall tower rang for hours and everybody knew the tidings.

Sons of Doctor Happy.

"Thank God, it's true as I had whispered, Donald Robertson, 17-year-old son of the courageous doctor, said this brother Graham was partly fervent in his rejoicing.

"It is wonderful," said Dr. Duncan Robertson, brother of the rescued surgeon, who came here from his home in Orillia to be near his wife and his young nephews, Mrs. Robertson was at Moose River.

"It's wonderful, wonderful!" gasped Mrs. W. J. Stewart, sister of Alfred Scadding.

And the rest of Ontario thought it was wonderful, too.

"I'm delighted to hear it," said Lieutenant-Governor Herbert A. Bruce, "and we'll up late like everybody else to hear the good news. The heroism of the rescuers below is immensely relieved. Ontario is delighted with the success of the rescue efforts."

Premier Rejoices.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn was one of the first to know of the rescue.

"Splendid, splendid," he demanded when a Canadian Press reporter telephoned him.

"That's great," he said, when he was told Dr. Robertson was strong enough to help himself up the shaft and that Scadding was in better physical condition than his rescuers had expected.

Mrs. Scadding for Sick Children, Dr. Robertson's "second home", Toronto's sick children-child, was wildly excited at the news. Nurses broke all the rules of hospital decorum by waking young patients and telling them of the doctor's rescue.

"Hal many of them heeded waking," laughed one nurse.

FEARLESS DRAEGERMEN WIN RELENTLESS DEATH BATTLE—Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding owe their lives to the heroism and hardiness of the draegermen of Stellarton and the four hard rock miners of northern Ontario, who risked their lives and worked themselves to exhaustion in opening a shaft to the entombed men below. Here is the scene at the head of Reynolds "suicide" shaft, down which a human chain carried out, rock by rock, a passageway, though imperilled by loose earth which threatened at any moment to cave in on top of them. The only protection they were were the helmets, and boots discarded these. Note the life line shown in the picture. This is attached to the miners below, ready to haul them to safety should there have been a cave-in.

RESCUE RESULTS FROM CONFIDENCE

Two Men Owe Lives to Sense of Mine Manager Henderson

Moose River, N.S., April 23 (CP)—Confidence of mine manager F. D. Henderson that the men trapped in the Moose River gold mine had not been killed instantly by its cave-in was a determining factor in the rescue of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding.

"I am sure they are alive," he said day after day for a week until communication was definitely established with the trapped men after Sunday morning. Those words spurred miners to super-human attempts to reach the men and obtained the assistance of the Nova Scotia and Ontario governments.

Rescue Organized.

Rising from a sick bed when informed of the cave-in late Easter Sunday, he immediately organized rescuers from nearby mines and directed the early attempts to reach the men. He had barely a series of sleep during the 10 days it took to effect a rescue.

Big and gruff, with steel-gray eyes piercing the shadow of the wide brim of his Mounted Policeman's hat, he broke down and wept when he learned of Herman Magill's death. He had worked side by side with the Toronto barrister for months and become devoted to him.

Wives Are Relieved.

Timmins, April 23 (CP)—Relief at rescue of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding was expressed here today by Mrs. W. J. Hannigan Beamsmeeter, wife of "Bill" Hannigan, captain of rescue team sent to Moose River by McIntyre Gold Mine.

"We certainly were worried. We know they were in danger," Mrs. Hannigan said. "I'm so glad for those men's wives."

She said she had not received word yet as to when her husband would be home.

Mother of Dead Twins Sentenced to Death

London, April 23—(AP)—A poverty-stricken mother, Mrs. Gladys Amelia Yarley, was found guilty of manslaughter and sentenced to death today on a charge of strangling her five-month-old twins.

Mrs. Yarley claimed the children starved to death.

The police, who said they found the bodies with cords around the necks, quoted the mother as saying that the landlady provided food for another child "but the other two, well, they died."

The jury recommended mercy for Mrs. Yarley, separated from her husband.

What They Said

(By The Canadian Press)

Dr. Robertson—

Through the drill-hole telephone: "The men are here!" His first words to rescuers: "Good boys. Where are you from?" When they asked could he walk—"I think I can undertake it myself."

To rescue workers on the surface: "Thank you, boys."

Alfred Scadding—

At rescuers carried him to the surface: "Now, boys, take it easy."

Jos Nearing, Rescuer—

"When I wriggled through (to the men's prison) the two men were sitting up laughing. They sure were tickled to death."

Jack Simpson, Rescue Crew Captain—

"We would have had them up long ago if we had been allowed to go down the Reynolds shaft when we first came. We don't care about the risk. That's what makes the job worthwhile."

Hon. Mike Dwyer, Reeveer, Minister of Mines—

"The job is finished. "We've got them out.

Dr. Ed Callie, Hfx-leng friend of Robertson—

"It's marvellous. Why the doctor walked out of the mine and demanded a big meal of beef steak. We'll be able to run him for a day or two and then he'll be running it again."

Donald Robertson, 17-year-old son—

"Thank God, it's true at last."

Mrs. W. J. Stewart, Scadding's sister—

"Happy! Happy? You don't know the half of it."

Ethel Scadding, Scadding's 15-year-old daughter—

"Swell!"

Premier Angus Macdonald—

"The world applauds the courage and fortitude of the men who effected the rescue."

Premier Mitchell Hepburn—

"This undoubtedly brought the people of our two Provinces closer together than any other event or circumstance in many years."

The Rescuing Miners (singing)—

"Nearer, My God, From Whom All Blessings Flow."

BRITISH LABOR BACKS LEAGUE OF NATIONS

Windsor, Ont., April 23.—(CP)—The British Labor Party is 100 per cent behind the League of Nations, Herbert L. Morrison, chairman of the London city council and Labor leader, said here today.

Mr. Morrison, visiting here briefly prior to a lecture in Detroit tonight, said "we are 100 per cent behind the League of Nations, and are therefore opposed to any partial allegiances or regional pacts outside the proper system of the League."

'A GOOD JOB, BOYS' SAYS ROBERTSON

Talks to Rescue Men All Way Out of Workings

Moose River, N.S., April 23 (CP)—Although weak from his entombment for 11 days in the Moose River gold mine, Dr. D. E. Robertson of Toronto wasn't missing anything even with rescue at hand.

Leaving his underground prison, Dr. Robertson, who purchased his mine jointly with Herman Magill, suspected the rescuers were going a way carefully and remarked with emphasis: "You did a good job, boys."

Cause of Magill Death.

Dr. Robertson talked to the rescue men all the way out of the workings while being taken to the surface after his 11-day entombment. Jack Simpson, chief of the Scotaron Draegermen, said.

Dr. Robertson referred to his friend, Herman Magill, who did not survive the days of strain following the cave-in April 13.

"Magill said, 'who hit me in the stomach?' Dr. Robertson told the men during the climb up 135 old Reynolds shaft, and "I suspected he had had a stomach ulcer, which had broken."

B. C. TO MEET MATURITY

Ottawa, April 23—(CP)—Premier Patullo of British Columbia, have to commit with Finance Minister Ilsley during discussions on matters affecting his Province, announced today the Province would meet on May 18 maturity of $3,500,000 without any help from the Dominion."

Hours of Work Taken to Clear Way For Stretchers

Moose River, N. S., April 23 — (CP) — Saved from death by exposure and starvation in a recess of caved-in Moose River Gold Mine, Dr. David Edwin Robertson, noted surgeon and Alfred Scadding, both of Toronto, were carried out of the black pit early today before the eyes of cheering hundreds.

The rescue stirred two nations. Climaxing an epic struggle of 10 days by miners and governments to reach the rock-locked 141-foot level of the old mine, it broke a tension, that had gripped Canada—and the United States since early Sunday, when communication was first established with the deep shaft.

Forty-four minutes after midnight, happy draegermen carried Dr. Robertson from the pit on a stretcher. The 62-year-old doctor, whose amazing vitality carried him through more than 240 hours with only one meal, was strong enough to have waited, but he jokingly demanded "a big meal of beefsteak."

ONTARIO MINE SQUAD DID USEFUL WORK

By R. L. WILLIAMS

Moose River, N.S., April 23 (CP)—W. J. Hannigan, leader of the Mine Rescue Crew from Timmins, Ont., who helped rescue Dr. Robertson and Scadding disclosed their drill lived and food was sent to the entombed men.

Saturday, April 18—Diamond drill penetrated prison tunnel and drillers believed they heard signals.

Sunday, April 19—The voices of Dr. Robertson and Scadding disclosed their drill lived and food was sent to the entombed men.

Monday, April 20—The prisoners heard the drill but feared that thundering water threatened them. Abandoning all caution, rescuers redoubled the dangerous Reynolds shaft.

Tuesday, April 21 — Rescuers reached main operating shaft. Dr. Robertson asked for a fountain pen, presumably to write a will.

Wednesday, April 22—Dr. Robertson estimated he could last another 48 hours. Rescuers talked to the imprisoned men through the last thin rock wall, then broke through.

Thursday, April 23—Rescue completed. Dr. Robertson and Scadding brought to the surface, the former crawling part of the way. Magill's body recovered.

Brown Corn Industry Set Up

Simcoe, Ont., April 23—Steps were taken for the establishment of a new Norfolk industry at a meeting of farmers here last night when a number signed contracts for the growing of brown corn under contract with a Chatham concern.

FATHER RESCUED— Urging her father on, Donald Scadding, Most Scadding of Waukesha, Wis., 15-year-old daughter of Alfred Scadding, is today overjoyed as word was flashed of his rescue.

MAGILL DEATH PROBE BEGINS

Body Will Be Taken To Toronto After Inquest

By R. L. WILLIAMS

Moose River, April 23 (CP)—"I believe to the best of my knowledge Herman Magill died of pneumonia in all probability brought on by exposure to cold and damp when his body was in a low stage of vitality from lack of nourishment." Dr. Glenn Donovan of Halifax testified today at the inquest into the death of the victim of the Moose River cave-in.

Dr. D. E. Robertson who was rescued early this morning on the 11th day of imprisonment in the mine, asked Alfred Scadding to relate the surface rescue of a standard drill hole 230 Monday morning that Magill was dead.

Apparently Magill died just before Scadding yelled the sad news.

Dr. Donovan said he had examined Magill and found no sign of skull fracture and no sign of any bleeding from his ears, nose or mouth.

The inquest was adjourned until 2.30 o'clock today.

Odie is testifying today besides Dr. Donovan is Mine Manager Percy D. Heilerson and S. Higgins.

Magill's body will be taken to Toronto immediately after the inquest.

Brantford, Ont., April 23 (CP)—The family of Herman Magill, who died of imprisonment in a Nova Scotia gold mine early last Monday, was well known in Brantford as his father, Robert Magill and an uncle William Magill were both born and resided in this city.

Mrs. Walter Hawley, second cousin of the Toronto lawyer who died before rescuers reached him and his two companions, said today she recognized him when she saw his picture in the newspapers. "He looks so much like his father, like the Magills," she added.

Win Prize Greater Than Gold—Vindication of Human Fellowship

New York, April 23—(CP)—The press of the United States this morning saluted the rescue of Dr. D. Edwin Robertson and Alfred Scadding from the mine at Moose River, N.S., with flaring head-lines.

Sunday, April 26 at 8 o'clock in Chalmers United Church. Changes in the heroic progress of the Draegermen in the bowels of the earth in stories of human fellowship and tragedy, paying larger than critical European or American affairs, testified to the intense interest of the entire country.

Today the New York Times with apparent satisfaction made its head a "thank you" from Dr. Robertson to his rescuers. The Herald-Tribune quoted him as "thank you, boys."

In an editorial the Herald-Tribune says the rescuers reached a prize "worth more than all the gold that ever was or ever will be taken from that mine the vindication of—human fellowship, human integrity and human sacrifice. It was in their service that the miners worked today, that the whole Province of Nova Scotia helped and that the whole world watched for victory."

A number of interesting prizes will be given away during the Cooking School on Friday afternoon to lucky program holders.

Superintendent W. T. Rendell, public school board, took a boy to the Training School and also was in Toronto in connection Monday with Mr. W. B. Hales, Provincial Superintendent of Education. Mr. Hales expressed himself gratified with the annual report and the progress which Belleville Schools made during the past year, and was hopeful that the new high school and other boarding house programme to take effect this coming autumn. Secondary school pupils under the age of 16 years will be present at the Conference in Belleville on April 27th to be held on the 32nd and 34th of this month. Those taking part among the prominent speakers will be Miss Violet McNaughton, O.B.E., President National Council of Women and Mrs. Nora Henderson, Member Board of Control, Hamilton, also Mrs. H. J. Cody and Prof. J. J. Tilley.

POWER CONSUMPTION SLIGHTLY INCREASED

Whether a slight raise in the peak load of the local Hydro Electric Power Commission yesterday was attributable to the fact that "nearly every working radio in it" in the city was in operation, during broadcasts from the Moon River sites, was not stated in the report. Or it. Scott, today questioned. "Power consumption, however, did jump slightly," added the manager.

DOZEN APPLY FOR FREE GARDEN PLOTS

So far about one dozen men have applied for free garden plots, on which they may grow their own garden produce, as a means to lessen consumption at the office of the city engineer, it is revealed by records. Donations of land from private citizens in suitable locations are still requested by officials.

Constructing Engineer Pays Plant Visit

Paying a friendly visit to the city yesterday, Mr. N. G. MacDonald, engineer, and member of the firm of Geen, Gilbert and Russell, Toronto, who was chief engineer, in charge of construction of the local filtration plant at the time it was built, called at the Intelligencer through the plant during the morning, and commented favorably upon the excellent condition in which the efficient operation. The local plant is held by the firm as one of the best equipped and operating plants in the country.

BLACK BASS TAKEN FROM INNER WELL

Twelve frisky black bass and a few rock fish of a size to delight any fisherman's eye, and ranging up to four pounds in weight, were recovered from the inner well of the local filtration plant by workmen engaged in the annual clean-out of the well yesterday. The fish which were carefully netted by employees were later liberated in the Bay of Quinte.

Apparently confined in the large well for several days after having followed the flow of water through the intake pipe to the plant, the fish were declared surprisingly active.

"Bass and a few perch and rock fish are about the only ones we find in the well during the spring clean-up," commented Mr. N. T. Austin, manager of the department. "Bass are particularly nosey and often swim up the intake just to see what they are going into. Some years we get record-breaking specimens which appear unhurt by their confinement. It isn't often that we find dead fish in the well."

White Shrine Elects Officers

Last evening in the Oddfellows' Hall the installation of officers of Bethlehem Shrine, No. 11, White Shrine of Canada, took place in the presence of a large number of members. Mrs. Hudlow was installing officer, assisted by Mrs. Chambers, Worthy Herald, and Mrs. M. Morgan as Worthy Chaplain, and Mrs. R. Naylor and Mrs. Thompson, Mrs. L. Hudlow sang during the evening.

Following the installation a presentation of a gift was made to Mrs. Hudlow, installing officer. Officers' jewels were presented to Mrs. Flood, past matron, and Mrs. Naylor, retiring principal officers.

A feature of the interesting event, was the gift of a White Shrine Bible, on which the ceremony was held, by Mrs. Naylor to her daughter, Clara. The presentation was made by Mrs. F. Naylor.

RESIDENT WANTED ALL BELLS TOLLED

In a low voice, that was somehow reminiscent of old lace and tender, gentle things, Mrs. Lee Jones, a feminine resident of this city shortly after noon yesterday, telephoned the report of the near-rescue of the two entombed men at Alderdale. She was confident that the only way this news should have been received was by way of the 911 alliance advised by the ringing of bells.

"Why not ring both bells, the town clock and the fire bell on the police station?" asked the resident of the office of the Mayor at the city hall.

"We don't know yet that they are really saved," replied an assistant in the office.

"Isn't it wonderful!" sighed the unknown voice as the receiver was replaced.

POLICE BLOTTER

Three alleged transients, who gave their names as Joseph Graham, St. Pierre Gabriel, and Hamilton Jacson, 27, were arrested by Constables Izard and Arnold last evening and placed in custody on charges of intoxication. The trio were brought before Magistrate Meyer, K.C. this morning and remanded for 24 hours for trial. When arrested by Constable Izard officers that Graham was in possession of a part of a large bicycle frame which is being held as evidence.

Percy Thomas, 79 College St., reported the theft of his bicycle to his authorities last night. Mr. Thomas stated he had parked his "bike" at the lower end of Front St. Upon his return the bicycle had disappeared.

Two more transients and three inebriates occupied the men's cell block at the police station last night, while two lean age boys were placed in the women's cell. The youths had run away from their Toronto homes and on arrival in Belleville were allowed their liberty this morning, while the two boys and the visiting drunks were held in custody.

A local motorist was stopped, as he "stepped on the gas" yesterday and which will likely result in a court case, it was intimated by the officer.

TEEN-AGED BOYS HELD BY POLICE

Run Away From Home And Were Stealing Tram Ride

Stories of western and cowboy scraps were heard around the police cell block at the police station early today from what seemed to be high-spirited youths, but who were well deserve consideration and attention. Investigations revealed two teen-aged Toronto youths were having held after having run away from home to explore the wonders of the world. The lady kiddies seemed quite satisfied with their surroundings in the cell room and were singing such songs as "Home on the Range" and "I'm a lonesome cowboy" with a degree of gusto.

Late yesterday afternoon, C.N.R. Constable Fred White observed two small figures secluded in a box car of a freight train, that was proceeding easterly out of the C.N.R. yards in Belleville. The officer removed the youths from the train and after checking their stories, handed them over to the local police. The boys gave their names as Stanley Thomas Barnes, aged 13 and 14 respectively. The youths told the police a fantastic tale about running away from their home in Montreal and riding freight trains to Toronto. "We're on our way back home after visiting our aunt in Toronto," they told the local police authorities.

After listening to their stories, however, the local authorities came to the conclusion the lads' stated did not "ring true" with the result that it was later discovered that the lads had ran away from their home in Toronto, yesterday and were headed easterly, caught on the train. Later Toronto police were communicated with and the lads' were Howard Kennedy, 13 and Robert Farquhar, 14, both of Toronto. The boys are being held until their parents claim them and they will be taken to Toronto juvenile court for the boys' parents this morning.

"We've been home in a day or so most likely, that is if we hadn't ride on", explained young Kennedy as both he and his chum bedded into song once again after being given a substantial dinner at noon today.

FORMER RECTOR GOES TO HAMILTON

Very Rev. Archdeacon Blagrave, D.D., Exchanges Parishes

Venerable Archdeacon J. C. Blagrave, D.D., will about the end of May exchange parishes with Archdeacon Renison, Rectorship of St. Thomas Church, Hamilton, with the approval of Archbishop Owen. Through the Bishop of Niagara, Archdeacon Blagrave has been in Peterborough for about fifteen years and has built up a splendid congregation in old St. John's there. It will be remembered, that he was rector of Christ Church in Belleville for nearly seven years. Peterborough papers express great regret at his approaching departure where he will succeed Doctor Robertson as rector of St. Thomas Church.

CONCERT ASSOC. PLANS ARE LAID

Organization Effected For Membership Drive For Next Season

A dinner meeting of the executive and committee of the Belleville Concert Association at the Quinte was held last night at the Queen's Hotel to open the drive for membership, W. Maughan, president, of the local association was chairman. Mr. H. C. Sisley, treasurer, read the financial report for the year and stated that due to the balance carried from the first year's budget it was possible to cover the deficit incurred by a portion of the bus not collected on the 1935-36 membership. The bus on the entire number of memberships was paid to the government at the beginning of the season.

Mr. MacLaurin welcomed the guests, referring especially to the out of town representatives, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar, Trenton; Miss Florence Barber, Picton, and Mr. Jamieson, Napanee. Mr. MacLaurin spoke of the splendid co-operation of the committee and executive which made it possible to bring to the city some of Canada's outstanding artists, who were given not only by the association members but by the children of the schools. The programme, under the direction of the Board of Education for providing the auditorium, was one of concerts during the past two years.

Miss Lorna Birch, membership chairman, spoke of the fact that the aim of the association to secure seven hundred and fifty members this year, and if one same effort was expended this aim would be reached. Miss Westerman of the Canadian Concert Bureau, Toronto, addressed the meeting mentioning the artists available for next season's program among whom are Reginald Stewart, pianist, more than likely to appear with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra of the Promenade Symphony Concerts, Miss Jeanne Dusseau, soprano, guest artist this week with the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Elie Spivak violinist and concert master of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra, Clifford Lott, baritone, soloist of the Canadian Radio Commission, Toronto, entered

QUICK THINKING BY CAR DRIVER AVERTS DROWNING

Motor Nearly Disappears in Murray Canal Near Trenton

ROTARIANS MEET

Trenton, April 23.—(Special)—The quick thinking of Stanley Chin saved his companion and himself from possible death by drowning, when he swerved his Buick car into a ditch to miss the open canal. The depth of the water in the Murray Canal at that point is eighteen feet. Mr. Chin is a resident of Main St., Deseronto and his companion, Lawrence Marcuse is a resident of Picton. The two were travelling in the direction where they had recently purchased a cafe, at Consecon, when meeting a slow moving truck on Old Dutch hitch, Mr. Chin decided to pass the truck on the left side of the road. Just as he was about to pass the truck, he realized that there was approaching car and swerving his car to the left, which proved to be just in the nick of time. The undercarriage and front of the car were damaged considerably.

Life Membership Given

A solemn service was held in the chapel of Canterbury Hall, when Mrs. (Dr.) W. B. Crowe was presented with a life membership by St. George's Senior branch of the Women's Auxiliary. Canon A. Smith acted in the absence of his son, Rev. F. A. Smith. Mrs. Crowe has for many years been a tireless and earnest worker in the St. George's Women's Auxiliary of which she is at present Honorary President, and for three years secretary of Prince Edward Deanery. Canon A. Smith placed the gold Whitchester Cross of a life member upon the recipient and Mrs. W. Ingram presented the membership fee. Mrs. Crowe thanked the branch for the honor bestowed upon her which she realized also carried with it high responsibilities.

Delightful Bridge

A delightful bridge and tea was held at the home of Mrs. B. Joyce, Dundas Street, yesterday afternoon, Mrs. (Dr.) W. B. Crowe presided over the tea table which was centred with a silver basket of stocks, baby bears and daffodils. Tall pink tapers and matching bonbons offered a perfect contrast. Those assisting were Mrs. Rd. A. Simmons, Mrs. H. D. Graham, Mrs. W. B. Bryson, and Mrs. (Dr.) E. A. McQuade.

May Secure Playground

Mayor H. C. Cory warned the Trenton Athletic Association at a meeting in the Town Hall, that some action must be taken regarding the Athletic Association in the municipality. He said that other towns such as Belleville will secure local athletes because of the lack of proper facilities and that Trenton will include the R.C.A.F. Athletic.

President H. Moore supported the Mayor's remarks and said that Trenton is the only Town of its size without proper playground facilities. Belleville has the proper facilities and all our athletic talent will assemble there," Mr. Moore stated. The main object of this meeting was said to receive plans for securing a playground for the children.

The association is going to look over several vacant properties of sufficient area for a hard ball diamond. Mayor stated that the town will be a large industrial center in a short time and a playground will be necessary to afford recreation for the workers and their children. The following is a list of the officers of the association for 1936; Honorary President, W. A. Fraser, M.P., Hon. Dr. J. A. Faulkner, Sheriff C. E. Bellerill, H. Ireland, Mayor H. C. Cory; president—H. A. Moore; first vice-president—Thomas Cain; second vice-president—H. McCaughey; secretary-treasurer, Sheriff Bellerill; Geo. Spencer, B.A.; executive committee—H. Cory, C. Carswell, R. Couch, O. Alpea, W. B. McClung, Cobby, Wing Commander G. O. Johnson, Dr. W. J. Farley and J. S. Cowan. The executive committee will act with the secretaries of the other local sports clubs.

Dr. Austin Heard

Members of the Trenton Rotary Club had a treat in store for hearing a very fine address by Dr. L. J. Austin, professor of Surgery in Queen's University, Kingston. Dr. Austin related his experiences, while he was imprisoned in a German prison during the Great War. Dr. Austin was one of the first prisoners of War which the German army captured and spent five months in a prison camp, in 1914. The address was introduced by Rotarian E. A. Simmons. A vote of appreciation was tendered the speaker by Rev. F. A. Smith, rector of St. George's Anglican church.

The Late Mrs. J. Carthers

The funeral of the late Mrs. J. Carthers was held yesterday from her late residence, Dufferin Ave. Mrs. Carthers passed away at her home late Sunday evening after an illness of a few days. The deceased was in her sixty-eighth year and had been a resident of Trenton for the past twenty-three years. She was a member of King St. United Church and an active worker in Rebekah Lodge, Quinte Queen

RELIEF MACHINERY NEARLY COMPLETE

Third Reading of Bill to be Given in House Today

Ottawa, April 23.—(CP)—Unemployment relief machinery for the present year will be advanced a step today when the House of Commons is asked to give third reading to the Bill authorizing grants and expenditures. The measure passed through committee stage yesterday with a bill to amend the Customs Act, implementing understakings given the United States and Japan in trade agreements.

This week the money votes for relief, expected to total $80,000,000 will be presented to the House. Meanwhile the Government is proceeding with selection of the personnel of the National Employment Commission, which will be headed by Arthur Purvis of Montreal.

Confessed Murderer Closely Guarded

New York, April 23 (AP)—A 36-year-old former convict who police said confessed the assaulted and killed Mrs. Nancy Evans Titterton was arraigned in a fast call today against the possibility of a sudden attempt.

Tied to the crime by a piece of cord used in the slaying, the acrobat mate, John C. Florenza, a small, tattooed upholsterer, was in a highly nervous condition, and could not be questioned. Police precaution lest he take his own life or somehow get word to a bomb-side charge late yesterday after an announcement by police commissioner Lewis J. Valentine that he had confessed the 11 day old crime. Florenza was arraigned in Jamaica him today and take his case to the county grand jury tomorrow.

THE RESCUE

Well might those red-eyed miners at the pit-mouth of the Moose River Gold Mine, having finished at midnight their good work of saving men, with tears in their eyes sing "Praise God from Whom all Blessings Flow"; as they saw the two men whom they have fought for days and nights against rockslide and barrier and treacherous possible shifting of broken rock and earth to save, emerge from the mine which had held them fast so long. It is one of the finest stories of human self-sacrifice, rarely if ever equalled and never surpassed as they wrought like heroes and like mules in the earth to rescue the pair. And like men they gave the praise to Him who is the source of all gifts, all human aspiration for good, and who is the rewarder of such brotherly love with the consciousness of a task performed with the last ounce of energy. God working through men, guiding, inspiring, wrought the victory over heart-breaking death. If man had not been what he is, no such deed could have been achieved, but man is what he is, man is he who will fight to the death for a fellow man. If anything could be needed to prove man's divine guidance it is in such heroic, united spirit.

Harold Dr. Robertson and his friend Alfred Readding, and their late comrade inspired the world. Everyone likes a hero as these men in the mine were. They fight for the men who battle fearful odds, and keep the flag of their country flying in despite all the ills and difficulties which surge upon them like tidal waves. Their courage rallied the rescuers and inspired them.

It was a victory for science as well as these modern inventions and discoveries were handled with man's great skill.

It was a victory for science as well, as Some Labor Day may well see jobs may not appear to give man the same outlet at least dramatically. How many tens of thousands of boys and men wished they were on the job and so well equipped by experience for the tunnelling and burrowing these miners carried forward in the face it seemed of almost imminent death to themselves. A wonderful task, a task that strikes the imagination and fires emulation. These men were prepared. It is a lesson to men, always to be ready for the great endeavour and opportunity to serve. Other men not so equipped would have taken the chances of death to help the imprisoned two but they could not have worked so efficiently. Efficiency with courage here meant life.

Canadian miners will go down in mining annals as true noblemen. Their name will not fade. And there are many other examples in our mining history where men have risked life and limb in deeds for others, whose deeds have not come to the world's attention. They have however served and done their duty.

This great story of Moose River is a lesson to the world to remember that there is a heroic nature in man, despite all temporal reflections of "softness". In the great task man is ready.

ST. GEORGE FOR MERRIE ENGLAND

This is a gala day for England, her national saint's and patron's day.

By a unique decision, England and so Britain chose the saintly warrior hero as her patron saint. Saint George sums up the attitude of that people, heroic fighting against wrongs and with a mission in the world.

England is fortunate in having her roots go back so far tapping civilization at many points and bringing to modern civilization a culture influenced by so many forms of culture under that peculiarly English gift of unifying men. In this Saint George, the Cappadocian hero, who died a martyr in Nicomedia, is a symbol of Christian civilization which are at the root of the British people, making them peculiarly a world people, suited to the present task of making the world over into one.

That geological fate which set apart the island in the silver sea and which yet drew so many civilizations and cultures thither in ancient days has made the modern Englishman with a cosmopolitan outlook. Strength, gentleness, ruggedness, courtesy, honor, and modesty—these factors are part and parcel of the English and British soul.

This makes us believe that this race with its roots so deep has been divinely directed to bring into the world that unifying influence, that adjusting agency that sense of balance which will yet save the world from the brute force of arms. Today Englishmen and, Britishers can look upon their patron Saint George as their symbol, the hero who went forth into the world achieving.

No grief is so acute but that time moderates it.—Cicero.

PORTRAIT OF AN ENEMY

His hate lunged at me with an eager sword;
The white of death upon its tempered blades:
He loomed above my fear, an overlord
Whose fury brooked no mortal barricades;
Defeated down, each moment now an age,
I watched in fascinated calm and saw
His mighty arm uplifted high in rage;
Against his strength I knew no skill, no law...

And yet . . . was this a dream within a dream?
During the very instant when I fell
I saw his eyes reflected in the gleam
Of his own steel, and only souls in hell
Reveal such mad torment when fiends pursue.
The stroke that cut me down had maimed his too.

SUNSHINE IS NOW AT A PREMIUM

—Old Sol's constant presence is urgently needed now for growth, for health and a return of that gay confidence which induces people to forget the winter and its heavy expense for fuel, etc., and walk right into the storms and do some hefty hurling. Call for Old Sol to get on the job and stick.

"JOBS OPEN", SPREAD THE GOOD NEWS.

Prosperity has rounded the corner when large display advertisement is inserted in this Great Family Journal stating that "Farm Help is Urgently Needed in Ontario". When the farmers need help times are definitely on the upgrade, for this agricultural industry, every other branch of industry quickly gets the contagion and business is busy all over, jobs multiply, confidence returns, happiness succeeds foreboding and the relief lines shrink because people will not accept relief when they can get jobs and be self-supporting. There may be some who might but relief sources will dry up in ratio to the demand for labor. "Jobs Open", hear the march of tramping feet back to the farm leaving smaller lineups at the factory employment windows. Now is the winter of our discontent made glorious, etc.

THE LIFE OF A DIVER IS NOT ALL BEER AND SKITTLES, nay, verily, far be it from so. This story is told by a local contractor who had a contract connected with laying an intake pipe for the waterworks system. A diver was employed. One day he was absent from the job through illness. His assistant who had never been down but professed to know all about it, volunteered to take the regular diver's place. He was dressed up in the regulation outfit with helmet and down he went. Before long there was a great commotion in the water and something shot up with a gigantic splash which resembled a sea lion, or whale, or something. It was the amateur diver, he had forgotten about the air valve which regulates the amount of air necessary for breathing purposes and too much air entered the suit, bloating it up like a balloon with the inevitable result that he was carried to the surface, willy nilly. When he was gaffed in with a boat hook and the helmet removed he resigned immediately and for all time, saying once was enough for him.

WHAT DO WE GET FOR THE TWO DOLLAR RADIO LICENSE FEE?—a question frequently heard in the past has now been rather definitely answered.

AN ANGLE OF THE MOOSE RIVER MINES SENSATION.

Theatre attendance has been seriously affected, people staying home to listen in to the radio broadcasts from newspapers and from the scene of the excitement. One theatre man estimated that Famous Players would lose about $200,000 in attendance receipts as a result of the radio broadcasts. Incidentally it might be as well to remind the public that the newspapers have been cheerfully spending thousands of dollars extra to keep readers informed, and doing a whole lot of overtime work without any extra recompense. That's a service the newspapers gladly render, never counting cost nor the expense, "Go Get It" is the order to the scribes, and never mind the expense. Perhaps the only business enterprise on earth which refuses to count the coppers, and is always on the bit and rarin' to go when emergencies arise. A daily newspaper costs the reader approximately two cents, rather a big two cents worth, by and large, day in and day out, in fair and stormy weather.

The young son of Mr. Thompson, furniture dealer, when passing the alleyway near Hannah's grocery goods store on Front Street, on his bicycle this morning was knocked over by collision with a horse attached to a commercial which was coming out of the street from the alleyway. The little fellow had a narrow escape from serious injury. The horse jumped over him and one of the wheels of the democrat passed over his legs, but as he was mixed up with the bicycle and was not moving at a certain extent, no bones were broken, but he had a bad shaking up.

This is St. George's Day, the patron saint of England. The local lodges of the Sons of England will celebrate the occasion by holding a smoking concert in the "Prentice Boys' Hall this evening. "HIS REVERENCE" WINS HANDICAP

Five-Year-Old Owned by G. F. Annesleys Goes Over At 100 to 7

Simon Downs, April 23 (CP)—G. F. Annesley's His Reverence, today won the City and Suburban Stakes, spring handicap over the 1¼ mile route. Lady Nutmeg, Mr. Annesley's two second, three lengths back, and Mr. Washington Singer's Nippon Tor third, a length behind Guiltes Gap.

His Reverence, a five-year-old by Demon Gray-Reverentia, started at odds of 100 to 7. Guiltes Gap, also a five-year-old, was quoted at 100 to 1. The favorite on the advance betting, Nippon Tor, was quoted at 9 to 2.

Eighteen ran in the handicap, coupled with yesterday's great Metropolitan Stakes as a spring double.

DIONNE QUINTS NEVER SPANKED

Physical Force to Make Children Mind Never Used

Niagara Falls, N.Y., April 23.—(AP)—The Dionne quintuplets have never been spanked, Mrs. Oliva Dionne, aunt, Miss Grace Demers, told relatives here.

Miss Demers said "no physical force is necessary. Children respond to suggestions by other means," and she illustrated the methods used by saying that one of the quints' babies who developed a habit of crawling out of bed had to be put back "11 times before the habit was broken.

She also told how Yvonne, who was the "clinger."

Miss Demers said she was housekeeper at the Dionne farmhouse at Callander for a year. She described Oliva as the "perfect mistress of the babies."

She said the parents had written them any time she likes, despite reports that they were estranged.

She visited a sister-in-law while here.

Students to Present "The Torch Bearers"

The Boys' Literary Society of the Albert College has chosen for its annual production on May the first one of the wittiest of modern comedies "The Torch Bearers." This clever play is a satire on amateur directors and actors who are filled with a sense of their own importance when in reality they are not even passably good in their work.

This play was one of the most amusing at the Dominion Drama Festival at Ottawa last year when part of it was given by the London Drama Group.

Miss Jessie B. Tuite is director of the production and a fine cast has been chosen.

RED-EYED MINERS SING OLD HYMN

Sing Boundary

Scadding, slender 44-year-old father of two children, followed Dr. Robertson to the surface 15 minutes later, also on a stretcher. As he was being carried to an ambulance, the gathering of tired, red-eyed miners sang "Praise God From Whom All Blessings Flow".

Then the dreary procession, heroes of the drama, went down in the black shaft once more and relieved the tiny body of Herman Magill, companion of Dr. Robertson and Scadding, who died early Monday morning. Relief arrived too late on Sunday to save Magill, partner of Dr., Robertson in the mine venture.

Little more than an hour after the rescue had been effected, the physical and mental condition of Dr. Robertson was reported "excellent" by three attending physicians from Halifax. They predicted his recovery would be rapid. Scadding's feet were cold and swollen, but his general condition was regarded as "surprisingly good".

Both Taken to Hospital

They lay today in an emergency hospital rigged up in the office of the mining company, not far from the mine-head. In a few days, when they have gained strength, they will be taken to a hospital at Halifax, 75 miles away.

Grimy, cheerful miners, who hurried from every mining centre in Nova Scotia to offer aid in the rescue, whose daring marked each stage of the dramatic fight through rock and gravel, returned to their Moose River and go back to their jobs.

Four rescue experts from Northern Ontario gold fields near Timmins, who dug into the mine with the dragermen, themselves trained mine rescuers, will go back home. Equipment from New Glasgow and Halifax will be moved out.

While Moose River and Nova Scotia and the rest of Canada waited with bated breath, the rescue corps worked throughout yesterday within sight of victory. 36 hours, during which no one rested, the miners ripped frantically at the last barrier ahead.

Worked Around Cribwork

Shortly after midnight they completed an excavation around the abandoned Reynolds shaft across to the level, where Dr. Robertson and Scadding waited. Cribwork they dared not cut down was the final barrier, they worked around it. It took hours and delayed the rescue.

Then a hole was opened by the crawling, dirt-covered, relentless crew and their leaders, Jack Simpson and George Morrell, stood up in the 141-foot level and peered at the prisoners about to be freed. Dr. Robertson grinned back. He and Scadding were in better condition than the rescuers expected.

"Good boys; where are you from?" the doctor asked. They told him they were from Stellarton and Goldenville.

"How boys, take it easy," Scadding said, when a miner suggested jokingly that they might be able to crawl to the surface themselves. Actually Dr. Robertson did crawl a great way up the slope to the top.

Doctor Walked Part Way

"Yes, I think I can undertake it," he said. Through the narrow, jewelled shaft, opened by a hundred hands and more of courage, he risked their lives for days, Dr. Robertson was laid on a stretcher face. There his rescuers refused to allow him to help himself further.

"Thanks boys," the doctor said as he was carried towards the ambulance through almost silent lines of miners.

His appearance was the signal for a demonstration, that continued until after Scadding, too, was taken to the improvised hospital, where Dr. Robertson and Mrs. Scadding waited. After long days and nights of waiting and hoping for this event, these two kinds of people did the work became nearly hysterical with joy.

Men who hadn't slept for days pounded each other on the back, cheered and sang. Some of them wept openly. Women in the joyous throng cried and laughed. They crowded around the ambulance. The survivors, who rode in a huge black carvern since Easter Sunday, were unable to recognize anyone. They stared straight ahead.

Cribwork Stubborn

Tension at the pit-head had become heavier than the atmosphere when those on the surface knew the diggers were within yards of their objective. Only a few could hear the knew, had almost opened the way. Yet hours passed, encouraging reports came from the rescue shaft, then reports that were not so encouraging.

The cribwork was stubborn. Dur. ing the afternoon a miner saw Dr. Robertson crawling on hands and knees in the hole. He called: "How are you?"

"How are you?" queried the doctor in return.

Some of the equipment was delivered to the surface and an excited rescue worker reported Dr. Robertson's condition soon. Immediately the cry was raised: "They're through. They're through."

But they weren't through. Engineering difficulties, the cribwork still work to do. While spirits dropped in the encampment the dragerman slipped back into the hole and labored on.

Found in Good Condition

Through late afternoon, evening and on into midnight they fought—and six more hours were needed. Medical supplies, stretcher, hot-water bottles and blankets, delivered into the pit once only to be brought back call came, there was no mistake.

Hon. F. R. Davis, Minister of Health for Nova Scotia, was at the mine-head, when the call was received and he, plunged into the operating shaft to administer first aid if it was needed before the men were brought out.

But the return to the surface was made in remarkably fast time. The survivors were found to be in such good physical condition that they required little aid before undertaking the ascent.

They spent exactly 10 days, one hour and 44 minutes within the broken mine level before release. Dr. Robertson and Magill, joint owners of the mine company, were with Scadding, their timekeeper, when the cave-in occurred at 11 o'clock Easter Sunday night.

MAKE THIS DELICIOUS CREAM SOUP FOR 1½ CENTS A PLATE

Here is soup that will make a fit every time you serve it! Rich and appetizing, with fresh, creamy flavor. Smooth, nourishing and satisfying, yet so easy to make with St. Charles Milk. Try it for lunch or dinner.

CREAM OF CARROT SOUP

4 medium sized carrots
1 onion
2 tbsps. butter
2 tbsps. flour
2 cups water
2 cups St. Charles Milk
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 tsp. sugar
¼ tsp. celery salt
¼ tsp. onion salt

Cook carrots and onion in small amount of water until tender. Drain, saving liquid. Rub carrots and onion through sieve. Melt butter in double boiler. Add flour and blend well. Add water and milk gradually. Cook until smooth and thickened, stirring constantly. Add seasonings, St. Charles Evaporated Milk and carrot pulp. Heat thoroughly. Allow to stand 15 minutes longer, stirring occasionally. May be reheated and served hot, or chilled and served cold.

This is only one of many delightful recipes you can make with St. Charles Milk. Try it too in mashed potatoes, puddings, cream sauces, cakes and cookies. You'll be delightfully better cup of tea or coffee!

St. Charles is rich, fresh, creamy milk, evaporated to double richness and fortified by extra Sunshine Vitamin D in special double strength form. To get the finest, creamy flavor, always insist on St. Charles Milk. You will know it by the "Gold Cow" on the blue and white label.

Grateful Public to Reward Gallant Crew of Rescuers

Halifax, April 22.—(CP)— The gallant crew of rescuers, who so readily responded to the emergency when tons of rock and earth trapped three Moose River miners, are not to be forgotten now that their mission has been accomplished.

For their untiring toil, most of the time against discouraging odds, the heroes of the grim battle will receive medals in acknowledgment of their bravery from the Nova Scotia Legislature.

While the men were still working frantically to reach Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from the lingering death that overtook their partners, Herman Magill, the Legislature gave unanimous approval to the suggestion of public recognition.

But that isn't all. Canadians from coast to coast, who lived at a distance the anxious moments endured by the men at the scene, will express their gratitude and admiration in kind. Already a sum of more than $12,000 has been contributed to a fund to be distributed among the rescuers.

A committee of the Canadian Red Cross Society, which is in charge of the fund at Toronto, has made arrangements with local committees at every chartered bank in the country. Norman Sommerville, K.C., chairman of the committee, said the sum raised would be large enough to repay the men for their courage and endurance.

"We earnestly hope, that any person or organization moved to contribute to this concrete expression of appreciation of what these miners have done, will not hesitate to do so, no matter how small or large it may be," Mr. Sommerville said.

May Erect Tablet

From Ontario, the home province of the rescued men, came promise of a permanent memorial as tribute to them, who risked their own lives in a mission of mercy.

Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario declared last night the province's expression of gratitude may take the form of a cairn, built from the last 90 tons of rock taken from the pit of the rescue shaft. The site of the proposed cairn will be determined jointly by Mr. Hepburn and Premier Angus Macdonald of Nova Scotia.

And, from Premier Macdonald came this tribute, "no praise can be too high for the rescuers, who risked their lives in the dangerous shafts of the Moose River Mine. The world applauds the courage and fortitude of the men, who effected the rescue.

Miss Sprung received many lovely gifts of linen, glass and silver. A delicious luncheon concluded the enjoyable evening.

The charm of an old-fashioned

home was reproduced at John Street Church Hall yesterday when the members of the Women's Association held a "Doughnut Tea" at which the grandmothers presided. The fragrance of home-made doughnuts greeted the guests as they entered the hall, and the popular delicacies, freshly cooked, were in such demand that those in charge were kept very busy all afternoon. Among the table in charge. The tables arranged about the room were very pretty with gaily-hued cloths, and the tea assistants were pretty gingham gowns, flowery pillows and old-fashioned sweet-smelling bouquets, with lovely old brasses and pewter, handsome decorative setting for the tea. The convenors of the tea were Mrs. Archibald, Mrs. John Cook and Mrs. Arthur Hill, and the guests were welcomed by Mrs. Elvins. Tea was poured by Mrs. McGie, Mrs. A. Miles and Mrs. H. McIntosh and those who served were Mrs. D. Bews, Mrs. A. Filchon, Mrs. Graham, Mrs. Mills, Mrs. Fry, Mrs. M. Buck, Mrs. Buchanan and Mrs. F. B. Foley. Mrs. J. E. McMartyn presided over the tea, Mrs. G. H. Chisholm arranged the tea. Those serving were Mrs. Crozier, Mrs. R. Chesnut, Mrs. Jas. Scott, Mrs. Jim Gibson. The home-cooking table was in charge of Mrs. Bowyer. A very interesting talk was given by Mrs. Allin Agnew of Toronto, who spoke of the great influence which sprung out of A. D. 1 not only in our own country, but reaching in its work overseas. The closing thought was the spirit of the Easter message. The interest of the listeners was held throughout the address. Mrs. Earl Hickey gave a splendid reading, "The United Thank Offering." In the collection over the coins dropped into the box, Mrs. Hickey brought close to the heart telling its story of thankfulness. The Rev. L. L. Gee conducted the good wishes to the members of the W. A., giving a personal touch to his interest in Missions. The moneys on the collection plate, counted by Mrs. Crozier and Mrs. Pauley revealed the singing of the Doxology.

King Edward Drinks Tea For Breakfast

Don't change doesn't need to worry about his health, which is excellent—but he has an obsession that he drinks tea for breakfast. King Edward the Seventh, became very much concerned about the Eighth, believing that prevention is easier than cure, observes, a definite regime. His liege is fit and slim by strenuous exercise—riding, swimming, golf, and eats only the simplest foods.

At state banquets he feels with the host and never eats a course through, for he has been well fortified with a simple meal and good strong tea before leaving the palace.

The cup King George helps his tea strong, with milk and very little sugar. For breakfast he has tea and toast—and the millions of his humbler subjects indulge in the cold cup of tea at any time of the day.

MOIRA W. A.

The April meeting of the Moira W. A. was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Emerson on Thursday, April 16th. The meeting was well attended—there being about twenty-five ladies present. A delicious dinner was served and two quilts were quilted. A meeting was held in the afternoon, led by the president, Mrs. O. Kaichenon. The opening hymn was sung after which Mrs. E. Emerson led in prayer. The Scripture lesson, taken from John, 19th chapter, Verses 1 to 32 was read by Mrs. Henry Emerson. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the secretary, Mrs. Le Vangester. During the business part of the meeting it was decided to buy new curtains for the church and attend to some repair work around the church. A hymn was sung and the president closed the meeting with prayer. The collection for the day was $4.30.

SALADA TEA

Stirling and District

Stirling, April 23—Surrounded by a host of well wishing friends and relatives Mr. and Mrs. D. Rodgers (nee Mabel Hall) celebrated fifty years of happy married life together at the Rodgers home at her daughter Mrs. Wm. Dewey on Monday, April 20th. Among the guests present were Mrs. Mrs. McKenzie of Sidney Township who acted as bridesmaid at the ceremony which took place at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. John Wannamaker in the Frankford road with Rev. Mr. Tamblyn performing the ceremony and the groomsman of fifty years ago Mr. George Smith, a local resident was also present to take part in the celebration. Married quietly on 20th of April fifty years ago Mr. D. Rodgers said "that it was time to start the spring's work as soon as the ceremonies was over, rather hasty marriage. The happy couple started their domestic relationship by getting right down to the groom's farm in Murray township, later taking over the position of guardians in the Peterboro Children's home from whence they designed and married a family, carry age, they are still quite young to be thinking of retirement and superior mentality and physically to many younger people in junior. Mr. Rodgers gave an example of his physical fitness when he played a lively game of bat with one of his nieces while the party were getting ready for the group pictures on the lawns. Dinner was served to the family guests seated at them with the tables and dining room gaily decorated with various kinds of cut flowers many of which had been sent in the honoured couple by friends in distant places. The happy smiling couple were the recipients of numerous lovely gifts both in silver and gold, and the happy event was a re-union for them with friends from Belleville, Pakenham, Frankford, Stockdale, Madoc and Foxboro."

Late Mrs. T. H. Matthews

The funeral of the late Mrs. T. H. Matthews who passed away at her home on Charlotte Street on Tuesday, April 14th after an illness of six weeks duration was held on Sunday afternoon April 19th from her late residence to St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and was largely attended by friends who gathered to pay their last respects. The service was conducted by Rev. J. A. Retford pastor of the church assisted by Rev. J. D. F. Knox of Belleville and was under the auspices of the L.O.B.A. No. 656. Mrs. Matthews died surrounded by comforting message to the sorrowing family and friends and during the service sang as a solo "No Burdens Down There."

The late Mrs. Matthews who was in her sixty-eighth year was formerly Miss Agnes Pelkey, being a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Pelkey. She was born in Rawdon township and had lived in Stirling for the past twenty-five years, prior to coming to Stirling she had resided at Wellman's Corners. Prior to her illness the deceased was an ardent church worker, being a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, a director in the Women's Missionary Society, an active member of the Ladies' Aid, and for many years a teacher in the Sunday School. She was also a past president of the Women's Institute, Rockcliffe Park Mistress of the Stirling L.O.L. No. 656 and at the time of death was President of the Ladies' Aid. She was also an active member of the Stirling branch of the Canadian Women's Institute. The wealth of floral tributes showed the high esteem in which the deceased was held by all who knew her.

Left to mourn her passing are two sons, Mr. Vernon Matthews of Rawdon and Mr. Edgar Matthews of Stirling; three daughters, Mrs. Clifford Baker of Stirling, Mrs. Leonard Darragor of Belleville and Miss Freda Matthews, Deaconess of the Presbyterian Mission in Red Deer, Alberta. Two grandchildren, Mr. Harold Baker of Stirling and Miss Lillian Matthews of Rawdon. There are also one sister, Mrs. Bridgar Reid of Rawdon, and one brother Mr. John Pelkey of Stirling. Mrs. Brock Her husband, the late Mr. T. H. Matthews predeceased her five years ago.

The pall bearers were Messrs. J. M. McVeen, H. Mathews, Chas. Mumford, A. Redmond, T. Reid and J. Hall. Interment was made in the Stirling cemetery.

St. Andrew's Y.P. Guild

The regular weekly meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Guild was held in the church parlour on Monday evening with Duncan Montgomery president, of the organization acting as chairman. The meeting was under the direction of the devotional department led by Mr. Lorne Johnson and opened with a song service followed by prayer by Mr. Johnson. The scripture lesson was read by Miss Helen Ward. A group of musical selections offered by Ray Williams was greatly enjoyed. Miss Dorothy Montgomery read from a clever reading "Rabbi". The gathering was then addressed in a most interesting fashion by Mrs Duncan Montgomery, the final number on the program was a vegetable contest directed by Miss Miss Johnson. The meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction.

Blade and Sole on Same Day

A couple of records were established in Hastings County on Saturday, April 18th, by a group of young men who enjoyed two hours of good fishing in the Crowe Lake arena which still contains several feet of ice, and immediately afterwards renewed their skates and motored to Oak Lake for their first golf game of the season. Realizing that fact might be doubted by their friends they sought out a local representative to take the trip with them and without the knowledge of Mother Nature's summer resort at about 10 o'clock they hurried out on the lake, ing where they changed into their bathing suits, as the reporter stood by with rod turned up, and hands in his pockets and trembling in the cool night air. With the change was in progress he heard the "swish" of the temperature of the lake with his hand which became numb with the cold. But boys had made up their minds, and in the darkness four scantily clothed figures stood for a moment on the edge of the lake and suddenly they hurried out on the ice, swam and came out trembling at first, but soon warmed by a brisk run down. Dressing they hurried to the car and drove back to Stirling where they gleefully enjoyed a hot lunch. The boys felt real good after their short exercise and after the party and felt confident they had established two records for Hastings County and perhaps all eastern Ontario, standing on ground on the 18th of April and swimming in the icy waters of Oak Lake on the same evening. As any rate it was an unusual sight to see the two bathing suits hanging from the side of the car as they drove back into town, while on the floor in the back of the car were their skates. Many onlanders question the story, doubtful. Those who took part in this novel event were Bill Morton, Fred Eagle, Frank Butler and Harry Lovibond and the trembling witness was Arthur Dun- can who suffered most from cold feet thinking about it.

St. Paul's Young People's Union

The regular meeting of St. Paul's Young People's Union was held in the church parlours under the direction of Literary Department, led by Miss Helen Mallory 3rd vice president. During the devotional exercises which were conducted by Miss Mary Hulin, president; Rev. E. W. Rowland led the meeting in prayer at the conclusion of the song service. In the place of the usual scripture lesson Miss A. Crawston gave a reading which was a portion of a communication read on 2nd. Chron. 30-22 in the book "Streams in the Desert" by Mrs. Chas. E. Cowan. Mrs. N. Wescott then gave the secretary's report of the previous meeting, and Miss M. Mallory was in charge of the remaining portion of the programme which was opened with a soprano solo by Miss Laura Mason, with Mrs. E. W. Rowland at the piano. One of the main features of the program was the reading of the Dutch paper which was the first edition of this term and read by the editor Mr. H. E. Hulin. This organ is always looked for with a great deal of interest because of the unusual talent of the editor in selecting the very highest type of material for publication. For two weeks he read and studies the editorials of all leading periodicals and when he presents himself there is always a wealth of material set forth that is of great value to the reader. Outstanding among the articles given this month's edition were "Just Awhile", "Life" and a brief article on the subject of future wars which contained a great deal of study on the matter and a fine composition. Article "Hidden Emotions" which was an exceptionally fine piece of literature. The article based on Mother's Day on the subject "Mother Ideal Womanhood" was a gem of journalistic genius, several fine pieces of poetry and stories of stories containing wit and humor, sense and nonsense was also a philosophy. Mr. Hulin has proved by his fine work in assembling this interesting paper from time to time is covering every phase of human life with stress on Christian, humanitarian church life and articles of world-wide interest that is especially adapted to this sort of work.

Directly after the reading of the association paper Irene Bronson and Iva Lumnicks offered a vocal duet "Throw another Log on the Fire" which was heartily enjoyed by all. The final number on the program was a Flower contest directed by Miss Mallory during which the meeting was closed with the Mizpah Benediction. The attendance recording system showing a total attendance of nearly forty members and visitors.

Illustrated Address at St. Paul's

A good deal of interest was taken in the evening service of St. Paul's United Church on Sunday when the congregation listened to a special illustrated address given by Mr. Arthur Duncan, his address Mr. Duncan gave a graphic word picture of the history of humanity and man, using an interesting arrangement of pictures to emphasize prominent events, such as the creation of man, his turning away from God, and the various phases in God's plan for man's redemption including the birth of Christ, His triumphant entry into Jerusalem, his trial before Pilate, His procession to Calvary and His Crucifixion. The address was an answer to the question of need of the Cross in Christianity, And as a fitting climax to the address Mr. Reginald Matheson sang as a tenor solo "The Old Rugged Cross."

Carmel Young People's Union

The regular weekly meeting of Carmel United Church Young People's Union was held in the church on Friday evening April 17th under the direction of the Social and Literary Departmentled by Mr. Wesley Brooks 3rd vice president. The meeting was opened with a song service followed by the Lord's prayer in unison. Following the secretary's report which was given by Miss Dorothy Holden, the scripture lesson for the evening which was taken from the 36th chapter of Ezaiah was read by Miss Eileen Eastman. A special musical number was offered by Mrs. Rowland and Mrs. A. Fryar in an instrumental duet "The Forge in the Forest." The address of the evening was given by Rev. E. W. Rowland and the attendance recording system revealed a good attendance at this meeting which was closed with the Mizpah benediction. During the social period Mr. Wesley Brooks directed a contest.

Giants Shaky in Victory But Handling of Substitutes Puts N.Y. Team on Top Rung

George Earnshaw Returns to Pre-Season Hurling Form

MANY HOMERS HIT

Tigers Swamped Under Avalanche of Hits by Bosoxs

By SCOTTY RESTON
Associated Press Sports Writer

Scrambling from one shaky victory to another, New York Giants are doing their level worst in the National League these days, but for all their staggering they can't get off the top of the pile.

In fact they keep climbing. They have five straight with 23 scored in eight games; their pitchers have squandered a big lead; their attack is riddled with injuries, but in assuming every emergency Manager Bill Terry has been so supremely confident that the substitute in almost every case has done better than the original.

First, he picked rookie Harry Gumbert to pitch the second game of the season. Gumbert pitched a four-hit game and won, then beat Bartell fell ill. Terry put in Joe Martin. This rookie had helped set up Fat Herd Sam Leslie reported with a fever and Terry put in Terry. The first day out, substitute Terry got three hits in three times out; yesterday against the Phils he got three more.

In spite of all these handicaps Jim Claxton did as well as the Browns and the Reds, who topped the day's slugging performances, or the Dodgers, who saw Big George Earnshaw stage a sudden return to his pre-season pitching form to Whitewash Boston.

The Terrymen won their second straight from Jimmy Wilson's Phillies, 7-2. It also was Carl Hubbell's second victory of the season and hurt to add to the general inconsistency of the New York scene. Carl hit three singles in four times up.

Mary Heaton Chopped

There were two home runs in the game, Lother smashing one in the first with two on, and Jimmy Wilson hitting one in the seventh.

The only other home runs in the making yesterday were hit by the Reds-Cards game at Cincinnati by utility outfielder Calvin Chapman and Lew Riggs, both of them Cardinal castoffs. The Reds, scoring three runs, enabled the Reds to defeat the Cards 7-6.

Big George Earnshaw turned in the best pitching job of the season for the Dodgers, a five-hitter, which shut out the Bees 5-0. Every man in the Brooklyn infield, Hassett, Frey, Cornelius, and Hacker hit safely twice out of four times up, and the Dodgers had only two errors hits.

In the American League, the Red Sox, outhit 12-6, still beat the Senators 4-3 and edged closer to the league lead. Fred Ostermueller, Red Sox pitcher, drove in two runs with his double in the fifth.

Hitting safely three times, the Browns won their second straight game from the world champion Tigers, 13-5, in the only other game played in the leaders.

The Pirates-Cubs, Yankees-Athletics, and White Sox-Indians games were postponed because of cold weather.

Hamilton, Ont., April 23 (CP)—

Despite efforts at police to picture the mystery surrounding a beautiful nurse, who "committed suicide" here, she "committed unidentified murder," Miss Mary Heaton Chopped Cay, when admitting to hospital Sunday, last about 7 o'clock. Attempts to care for her mother proved to be fictitious, police doubt it is her correct name.

DAY BY DAY

Still frantic efforts are being put forth to endeavour to stave off the senior baseball situation in Belleville by a comparative few. When the local diamond situation was first presented to the service clubs the suggestion was to induce them to foster the sponsor, as far as possible, a "home brew team." Subsequently, however, rumours have been out to the effect that players from the surrounding district are to be invited to Belleville with an idea in mind of strengthening or bolstering the local senior entry. If too many outsiders are brought into the picture, would such a set-up eventually assist in the advancement of local talent?

Surely a lesson in promoting the type of so-called baseball that was played here in Belleville during the past few seasons is taken. Initially, Of course it is a recognized fact that certain positions on a baseball team call for better players than others, and a few such players are needed. Personally we would prefer to see Belleville would come to the assistance of a senior league team" in its uphill fight to better times and a future continuing club.

At the present stage of the game Belleville baseball lovers want senior ball, and on the other hand the C.O.B.L. needs a Belleville entry to make it a complete group. We do not suggest that the C.O.B.L. could not get along without Belleville, but it is a recognized fact that the local club is the hub of the league, from the name carrying value in the circuit. In the meantime the players' committee, recently appointed to survey the matter of available material at hand, will report to the service clubs their findings later this week. Napanee, Peterboro and Oshawa have all commenced a brisk bit of spring training which should urge the local ballsters forward.

Over In Wellington the baseball minded personages are organizing a parents team with the idea in mind of eventually breaking into a major loop in Prince Edward County. George Carver, sports columnist and baseball authority in that district informs us that possibly a class 'C' intermediate league is in the making in the county to the south also. With no intermediate 'B' team at Picton this coming summer, there should be plenty of room for a class 'C' loop over in "Sparks". All of last year's Picton team is available except Vern Bishop, Bob Greer and Bill Treen.

Incidentally we understand that Bob Greer will be seen in action in the T.A.A.A. this summer. Bob has been signed by that veteran Queen City manager, Pat Downing. Originally intended to try out for an outfield position and endeavour to improve his hitting, Bob Greer's showing, upon hearing Bob was a catcher or note, informed him "nix" on the out-garden work. So it looks as though Bob will be behind the bat this summer. When Greer was moved by his employers, the Bank of Commerce to Toronto, his job as hockey it was expected he would return to Picton in the baseball season, but once the Queen City diamond moguls learned of his baseball ability Greer's chances of returning to his native haunts were nil.

With such pitchers as Russ Elliott, Bill Goldsmith and Spook Scriven available, the Peterboro sport scribe picks the Belleville City baseball situation as follows:

"It's a pretty safe bet that Eddie Stein will hold down the catching end of it again, unless the youngster has slipped. Further than that blinkety-blank stock we bought last Oy Whitby went great at third last summer and pounded the apple into cider to lead the league, Ike Batten who is also some slick several with a hot corner is available again. Red Kingsworth would be a good bet for shortstop if he remains in town, which is likely. Red wouldn't play baseball permanently for any town, but he's a swell guy to have around. Jack Keep good ball for Knobby Lee but he could also handle second base. With the idea of Russ Kingdon at second, but if he doesn't try out or doesn't make it, maybug Red at second, Oy at short and Ike at third would work okay. We know of three possibilities at first, Ralph Jeffries, a newcomer, Archie Weir and Clint Cadd."

Tomorrow evening Mr. John DeGraisy, President of the O.R.F.U. and Harold Bailey, Secretary of the Football Union, are to be the guests of honour at a Mr. E. MacLennan and members of the Belleville Rugby Club tonight at a special dinner in Belleville. Following the dinner Mr. DeGraisy and Mr. Bailey will give an impromptu talk on the rules and regulations of rugby football at which the general public is invited. Certain playing rules have been changed by the O.R.F.U. since last season and it is hoped as well as other knotty problems will be thoroughly explained. Managers and coaches of football clubs in Kingston, Napanee, Picton, Brighton, Lindsay, Cobourg and Kingston, as well as local football moguls, will be on hand for the talk. Considerable knowledge is available from each well-known source as Mr. DeGraisy, father of Canadian football, and Mr. Bailey. The school or meeting is open and any fan is invited to the public talk. It is a splendid opportunity to become acquainted with the rules of the autumn pastime, which we armed admit are more confusing than baseball.

Endeavouring to procure uniforms for the Belleville O.A.S.A. softball league entry management have hit upon a new scheme to provide their players with new uniforms. The idea is that softball aggregations are canvassing local merchants and procuring the price of a sweater from each business man, following which they promise to carry the name of the donor on the back of each individual sweater given.

Local wrestling fans were quite satisfied with the first two bouts on Tuesday night, but were set in a frenzy of excitement by the main mash bout terminated. It is firm in many minds, that Ed Meaks was not given a fair and square deal in that third round, which incidentally was far too short, the spectators complain. Directly following the bout show "Irish" Jack Donovan bopped the rattler for Chicago, which was served as the main bout attraction tonight. We asked Donovan if he would be available for the local show next week. "I like the town and will be back later, but at present I have three contracts in my pocket to appear in Chicago, Fort Erie and Detroit. After that I'm coming back to Toronto and finally meet any wrestler in a Belleville ring later," stated Donovan.

Eddie Shore, the perenial N.H.L. blown, was awarded the David A. Hart trophy for being recognized as the most valuable player in the major hockey circles last season. It was Shore's third time to receive such honorable mention. "Doc" Romnes, Chicago, was awarded the Lady Byng trophy, he being judged the cleanest and most effective player during the season just past.

ERIC CRYDERMAN WINS TOURNEY

Slim 170 Pounder From Sutton Victor in Four Bouts

Toronto, April 22.—(CP)—Make way today for Eric Cryderman in the ranks of the paleface fighters ready to meet lethal-faced Joe Louis.

Cryderman, a slim 170-pounder from Sutton, Ont., won the second Ontario Whittle Association tournament here early today before a laughing crowd of 2,000. Easily the best of 24 in the tournament, Cryderman didn't have a thing block immediately.

The Sutton boy fought through four bouts to win the final sponsored by Jack Dempsey.

It took Cryderman one round to dispose of Joe Salino of Toronto, in the opening bout, two-fisted punching to the head and body gave him a unanimous decision. Only a middleweight at 158, Cryderman packing enough power to knockout two or his opponents.

There were many laughs than good fighting in the 12 bouts as the leagues battled in all forms of styles. Joe Cayola of Brantford outlasted Bantamweight Jack Ellis in two bouts, tangling with the referee, getting headlocks, stamping on his opponent's feet and refusing to bite. He was the crowd's favorite fighter.

Two of the favored fighters, Ramsay Dillon of Orillia, Middle and James Sharky of Stratford, got past two rounds. Dillon then bumped into Fred Davis of Peterboro in the second and was knocked out by Cryderman.

Chauncey Bernhardt, an Indian from Caledonia, brought the only disqualification of the night, when his referee gave the decision to Davis because Bernhardt hit in a break. He knocked Davis out with the blow but the Peterboro boy fighter recovered in time to get into the third round.

BOYS know what to look for in a bicycle and they know in a couple of DAYS' riding whether or not they have got it.

That is why on every school day over 200,000 boys gaily mount their C.C.M. bikes and ride easily and swiftly off to school. They got what they expected in their C.C.M.'s and they told their pals.

When you go to buy a bicycle look for the things that over 200,000 boys have found in their C.C.M. Bicycles.

The "straight-line drive" is the final proof of C.C.M.'s precision methods of manufacture. You will find that the perfectly straight alignment of the two sprockets under all riding conditions causes the chain to run smoothly and with a minimum of friction. Ride the bicycle and you will see that the back wheel tracks in a perfectly straight line behind the front one. The chain runs true, so for smooth, effortless riding.

Check the pedals and crank hanger and note the easy-running qualities of C.C.M. bearings. Look for a real coaster brake that is free-running yet quick and smooth-acting as a brake. C.C.M.'s Hercules coaster brake is everything a brake should be. Look at the wheels and see that the spokes are rustless and that the tires are the famous Dunlops. Look the entire bicycle over completely for every detail of what you think a bicycle should be.

If you look for all these things, and remember also that 200,000 other boys have done the same thing and then bought a C.C.M., you too will buy a

Montreal Royals Have Three to Replace Trio of Last Year

BEARS SWINGING

Defeat Rochester While Leafs Did Not Play Due to Cold Weather

City the Associated Press Update of the Montreal Royals Three Replacements have been signed by the Clubs, Montreal Royals, International League Champions, appear to be having no trouble developing a new pitching "big three" to replace last year's triumphant trio of Fete Appleton, Chad Kinney and Harry Haynie.

The development of Lauri Myllyranta, the polyglottal pitcher who has been improving steadily in several seasons as a second string-er, seems to have been just what the Royals needed. As a result Smythe, only survivor of last year's big three, hasn't had a chance to pitch yet. The former Dartmouth flinger turned in his seventh victory of the season yesterday as the Royals trounced Baltimore Orioles 11-1 to cling to first place against Newark's challenge.

In between Myllyranga' two triumphs, Leon Chagnon, who came down from the Giants last season and Louis Polli, former American Association Ace, turned in a pair of four-hit shutouts.

Lauri was touched for nine blows three of them by Eddie Mayo, but whirled fine and didn't see a sign of trouble as his teammates hit early and late to pile up 15 safeties. He made three of the blows himself and drove in two runs, while Stu Dupas and Hal King smacked homers.

Bears Get Clout Wings

Newark Bears, who have lost only the season's opener, hung up their sixth straight triumph, out-scoring Rochester Red Wings 10-7 in a dizzy game, which saw 29 players in action. A three run rally in the eighth decided the struggle after the Wings had started off by pinning Don Miller's ears back with five tallies in the third. Roy Schalk had a perfect day at bat with four hits.

The uncertain Albany Senators sent Buffalo into a sixth-place tie with Toronto by gaining a 2-0 decision in a mound duel between Pair or veterans, Bob Burke and Bill Harris. The Senators got only four blows off Harris—his record low-hit game of the season—but a pass to George Blackerby in the seventh, followed by George Selkirk's double and long drive by Red Redmond and Sammy Bell did the damage. Burke managed to keep five hits and five passes scattered.

Cold weather again kept Syracuse idle with Toronto as the scheduled opposition.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know the real cause of piles? Is it on the inside?

Do you know you can be doctored from the inside?

Do you know you must get at the real cause of piles, to get rid of them?

The real cause of piles is poor circulation—a congestion of blood in the veins of the lower bowel. This makes the veins flappy, full of impure congested blood and weakens the rectal membranes.

So if you would have relief and piles you must use a medicine like HEM-ROID, a prescription written by Dr. J. S. Hemorrhoid—HOID combines piles by relieving the cause. It stimulates circulation, eases the pressure of blood in the veins of the lower bowel and helps to heal and restore the sore, tender parts.

HEM-ROID is so successful in even the most stubborn cases that Dr. McKeown or any other good druggist is authorized to take your money back if you are not entirely satisfied with the results from one bottle. You may have your money back.

The standard for Quality

ONE-WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCORD

"You are down early today, my dear." was his greeting, when he appeared to the dismay of his daughter's call. The words were stifled in a voice ag aot as the white fingers that closed on the heavy watch chain festooned across the protruding waistcoat. It was very nearly a pair.

"I'm broke," was Blythes complacent reply.

Cannon's inexpressive eyes moved to Stirrup, the owner of his mouth flickered.

"That's what it is to be a father," he volunteered. "I'll be with you in a moment, Blythe....Hm. The older man came forward, displaying a bunch of papers he had been holding during the talk. "Well, gentlemen, you would glance through these. They're in reference to.... But you'll have to read them. Perhaps you'd better have Nettie find you the complete file. There's one point particularly...." He spread a paper on the desk and traced the printed lines back and forth with a blunt forefinger, muttering under his breath. Mark observed that the pendant lower lip was wet.

Blythe strolled over to a mirror that hung above a cabinet, and busied itself with some repair to her red mouth. She tilted her head to one side and studied the result. "Yes, dear...." Cannon did not look up from his papers.

"Did you know that Sawyer girl is working here in the store? Dreadful looking thing, I noticed her when I came in."

"Yes? Who's that? Sawyer, did you say?"

"Of course." There was a touch of impatience in the voice before the mirror. "You know, perfectly well I mean. I mean...."

"Yes, yes.....I must ask Mr. Stewart what he was thinking about. Here you are.....This paragraph, Mr. Cannon, please."

This new interruption came from the door of Spencer's room. His secretary, Nellie Howard, stood peering in apologetically. "Mr. Hodson is calling. He says you must see him."

"Tell him.....No. Wait. I'll take the call now. See me later, Stirrup. No hurry. And be a wedded bliss, hastily.

Blythe followed her parent leisurely. Before she closed the door she flashed a smile at Mark over her shoulder.

"Sunday at six," she reminded. "I'll send the car to your hotel."

That Cannon girl must have inherited her good looks from her mother." was Stirrup' thought as he reached for a fresh cigaret. The words were forgotten for the moment.

And she certainly was easy to look at.....but as difficult to figure. That listless air struck him as being assumed. The poise of Spencer's room seemed the social season had opened. A Sunday night supper in Arden Terrace....wherever that might be. The prospect was not to his taste with the uncomfortable feeling he had not been favored with an invitation, after all. It was a gumption.....no less.

And her chance remark about "that Sawyer girl." Or was it only a chance remark? Did Miss Cannon wish this girl to know that she had a finger on the employees here? It was very evident she had no liking for the girl in question. That would bear looking into.

As Sturges reached for a memorandum pad, he chanced to see a crumpled white glove lying on the desk. He picked it up and examined it idly. A faint odor of gardenia again. Tossing it aside, he scribbled on his pad:

"Sawyer.....see Stewart."

X X X

Within an hour from the time of leaving Sturges' room, Spencer Cannon and Blythe appeared on the fourth floor. The merchant made his way directly to the office of Henry Stewart. The latter chanced to be at his desk, dictating. Recognizing the visitors, the floor department head hurriedly finished his stenographer and came forward with alacrity.

"Good morning, Mr. Cannon.....How are you, Miss Blythe? Please come in."

"Yes."

Cannon stood staring around the display room. "I say, Stewart."

"Yes, Sir?"

"I understand you have John Sawyer's girl on your pay roll. Is that so?"

Stewart's tall form stiffened slightly. His lips compressed under his close-cropped moustache.

"That is correct, sir. Miss Sawyer has been with us for several weeks. She is doing some excellent work for us."

"Get rid of her," interrupted the soft voice. Cannon stared hard at his subordinate. "At once."

"But, sir....."

"At once, I said." The pale eyes could be harden. "I am very much surprised, Stewart, at your lack of judgment. That is all." He moved away, followed by Blythe.

Stewart remained near his desk for a moment in deep thought. Then color flooded his face in the realization by the steady regard of a pair of brown eyes studied him from across the big room. He beckoned with a rebellious finger and a girl, Jean Sawyer, came hesitantly forward stacking by the window, she flashed a smile at Mark over her shoulder.

"Come in, Jean. I want to talk to you."

Stewart closed his door against a chance intruder and pointed to a chair beside the desk. The girl sank into it, her eyes on his face in fright.

"It was afraid I might get you into some trouble," she remarked in the same deadened manner. "I'm ever so sorry. Mr. Stewart, I'll never thanks a lot."

There he is, baby Jean. You're quite right.....about the hose. He wouldn't let me explain.....but he was very cross. Some how unfair is it, I'm sure....."

"It's rather unfair, didn't Mr. Stewart. It's all right."

"But of course I will! It's an odd position for me to be in. Once I be snapped irritably, as a knock sound. bear looking on the door. "Oh.....Mr. Stewart."

Mark's eyes lighted with sudden interest as he recognized the artist.

"Mr. Sturges, I want you to meet one of my girls.....Jean Sawyer. She's doing some fine work for us as an artist and clever. Which reminds me, I must leave and I don't see how we can spare her. Perhaps you can persuade her to change her mind." A sudden inspiration in Stewart's lean face. "May I ask you something first?"

"Of course."

"According to a letter I have on file, the matter of the store personnel is under your direction. Am I right?"

"Quite." Sturges looked steadily at his questioner. "Why?"

"I wanted to be sure. Please see if you can't make Miss Sawyer remember her duties. I'll not have to discuss me....."

He turned and left the room, carefully ignoring the appealing gaze in the girl's brown eyes.

"All right, Miss Sawyer. Let's talk it over."

Sturges smiled in his friendliest fashion and seated himself informally on Stewart's desk in an effort to put his companion at her ease.

"I'm afraid there's nothing to talk about," was the grim reply. "I have made up my mind to leave."

"Sorry to hear it. I'm rather a crank about such matters.....you're always worries me to lose a good employee. Make me think perhaps the firm has fallen down on the job."

"Oh, it isn't that at all...." Jean Sawyer admitted with a sudden flash of earnestness. "I like it here." She caught herself. It was evident she had not intended to admit as much.

"Fine! Mr. Stewart has just given you a good recommendation.....very good. Is it a question of money?"

"Oh, no."

"A better job somewhere else?"

"No, sir. Please....."

"Pardon me if I seem a bit personal. Do you need a position?"

"Yes."

"Then wouldn't it be fairer if you gave me your reason for leaving me?"

Her eyes evaded his steady gaze.

Jean dragged a stool close to his chair and seated herself, clasping his repaired hand in both of her own. "Here I are." She looked at him as she said it. It was her boyhood greeting to him, still employed when the two of them were alone.

"Mr. Cannon requested it." "I happen to know that.....I mean, I suspected it." A steely look came into Mark's blue eyes. "And why I pinned you down. Miss Sawyer?"

"I'm, sir?" She looked at him in surprise.

"Sit down there." There was a tone of command in his voice. As Jean seated herself, he dropped into Stewart's chair and looked at her across the desk. "I'm going to put my cards down," he said slowly. "I like to do that with people whom I think are playing fair. I want your help."

"My help?" It was said in a puzzled fashion.

"Exactly. When I took over the management here, I made one very specific stipulation. I was to be responsible to and for my employees. As long as I am here, it has to be that way. I do not wish to criticize Mr. Cannon or you, but it seems he must have.....forgotten. If you have left under these circumstances.....Well, you can see where it puts me. I can't afford it. You'll have to change your mind."

Jean shook her head.

"I see what you mean, Mr. Sturges. And I thank you, But I can't stay now. You don't understand."

"I understand as much as I need to be assured of. I want you to tell me about your work as if nothing had happened. Give me your word you will be subjected to no unpleasantness. If anything should happen without my knowledge—see me. Or tell Mr. Stewart, if you'd rather. Is that fair?"

"You don't understand," Jean repeated in a low voice.

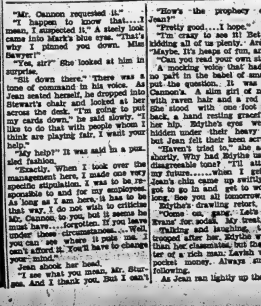
She leaned forward against the desk. Her arms were folded on her lap and through one of the small hands were tightly clenched. But Mark's eyes were fixed on the ring on her finger as she added, after a slight pause:

"I think it would be best for me to tell you about—us. You would have to know."

"About us?" he echoed doubtfully. "Jean, I....may my friend?"

"Please....." Mark raised his hand impulsively. "My dear girl, it isn't necessary. I'm not a busybody about your family. Your father and I....."

"Yes. He.....he's in the penitentiary."



CHAPTER II.

For a long time now, Jean Sawyer's dreams of a Oak Street house Where she was born concerned themselves with a vision of white, concrete pillars, a porch, and a shaded porch. The cement crack in the floor filled with particles of sand that blazed in the sun's rays like tiny diamonds.

An afternoon in late May, and Jean seventeen.

As nearly as she could recall, she never had seen the sunlight on the porch floor again.

Commencement, with its alluring possibilities, but three weeks away.

ing steps she sensed a sudden chill in the contrasting gloom of the vine-shaded porch. Almost hesitantly she opened the screen door and passed into the dim hall. The chill seemed to pervade from somewhere—was it upstairs—the front bedroom, she caught a sound of stifled sobbing. Hurrying through the deserted living room, she paused at the head of the stairs to listen for help.

There sat her father in his favorite chair at the window. He was alone.

John Sawyer apparently had not heard Jean's quick footsteps and she stood startling at him. Although she had encountered a stranger in his home.....He sat rigidly, upright against the chair's cushioned back. His thin hands, one of them clutching an empty pipe, rested stiffly on the dark oak arms of the seat. His head was set at an attitude of conscious precision, close together, small feet, the shoes polished brightly, as always.

"Daddy, Jack!" Jean called softly. "Jack! Are you ill?" She pitched her voice confidently at a convenient.....as one hurried to her father's side.

Sawyer's dark eyes moved slowly to scan the girl's anxious face. He did not turn his head. Its wavy hair was in strange disorder; one lock trailed low across the white forehead.

"I'm all right." His voice was curiously flat, dull. "Jill, dear, I want to talk to you."

Women's Meetings

KELSO WMS.

The Melrose Missionary Society held their Easter Thank-offering service in the Union Church on Easter Sunday night at 8 p.m.

There was a large congregation present. Mrs. F. Benson, president of the Society, took charge of the service and opened with a piano solo by Mrs. C. Bates followed with the hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Scripture Reading by Mrs. C. McFarlane and prayer.

The choir rendered special Easter music.

Rev. R. Farnsworth, Mrs. Farnsworth and Mrs. Moore of Bellville, were present and contributed to the program.

Mrs. Moore gave an Easter message followed with a duet by Mrs. Moore and Mrs. Farnsworth.

Jean Badgley, a member of the Melrose Mission Band gave a recitation.

Mrs. Farnsworth gave a musical reading entitled "Dreaming in the Twilight," also had a solo on "Christian Stewardship."

The offering was then received amounting to $30. Mrs. Bennett offered the dedicatory prayer.

Mrs. C. Bates then favored with another piano solo.

Rev. Mr. Farnsworth closed the meeting with a few appropriate remarks on the text of our Redeemer living in this day, the reality of Christ, and the Holy Spirit.

The president then moved a vote of thanks to all those who had so kindly contributed to the program.

HALLOWAY W.M.S.

The April meeting of the Halloway W.M.S. was held at the home of Mrs. George Cadman, a sumptuous dinner was served and presided over by Mrs. Tom Reid and Miss Beata Reid.

The meeting was then called to order and Mrs. Herbert Townsend read the scripture lesson taken from the 8th Psalm. Hymn 33 was then sung. Mrs. Peter Kelly read Paul's letter to Philemon followed by silent prayer. After singing hymn 18 in unison, the roll call was taken and also the roll call and answered.

Miss Beata Monahan read an invitation to the March Hill program. It was moved by Mrs. P. Kelly and seconded by Mrs. Arthur Wilson that the secretary-guild be put together at the next meeting.

Mrs. Arthur Wilson moved that the offering be held for the church and seconded by Mrs. Ernest Cadman.

Mrs. Embury Hough and Mrs. Arthur Reid gave an interesting synopsis of the proceedings at the Belleville Presbyterial held at Foxboro. Hymn 37 was sung. Halloway W.M.S. Mrs. E. Hough presented Mrs. Arthur Wilson with a beautiful bound hymnary for her faithful and efficient work during her two year office of president. Mrs. Arthur Wilson thanked in very fitting address. The meeting closed by singing hymn 336 and the benediction.

THEFTS OF ORE POSSIBLE CAUSE SHAFT COLLAPSE

Miners Say People Often Pull Out Chunks of High Grade

OLD WORKINGS

One Miner Nearly Entombed Once 180 Feet Underground

Timmins, Ont., April 23 (CP)—Thefts from ore pockets around the Magill shaft of the Moose River gold mine may have been responsible for the shaft's collapse, Jack Redding, who worked at the mine last year, said today.

Redding, employed at the Hollinger mine since shortly after coming from Nova Scotia, helped prepare the Moose River mine for operations by pumping out water.

George Steadman, Timmins, said he worried in the same Nova Scotia district 28 years ago.

"That mine is honeycombed with old workings," said Steadman. "People pull out chunks of high grade and knock down timbering, falling to pay it up again."

Steadman told of a time he nearly was entombed 180 feet underground when part of a shaft caved in. His companion was buried under the debris.

What Miner Endured

Moose River, N.S., April 21 (CP)—Here are some of the experiences survived by Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding in 'No. 3 Hole' where they were trapped underground:

On Hunter Sunday they with their companion, Herman Magill were imprisoned when a cave-in sealed the only exit from the Moose River gold mine which they were inspecting.

In the darkness and cold they existed without food for seven days and had to quench their thirst with dirty water.

For six days they were without sunlight, fresh air, warmth or a bed. Affected and in addition to their physical torture the men suffered the mental agony of the thought they would slowly die of starvation.

On Sunday, April 19, although they had completely lost track of the hours of time, the first lights from the drift hole was observed and they found a rubber tube had been forced down toward them.

Magill's Illness

A few hours later, Magill, who had been feeling the effects of cold and privation more than the others, became dangerously ill. Scadding did what they could for him, but even an outstanding surgeon like Robertson was unable to help very much in that unbeautiful pit.

On Monday to add to their peril there was a rush of water and they heard the fear of drowning. Magill was unable to withstand further agonies and Dr. Robertson sadly told his death to the listener above.

Keeping Minds Occupied.

The hours dragged on and Robertson and Scadding chatted away to each other about anything and everything to keep their minds off their peril. Meanwhile Scadding's feet were giving him trouble and Dr. Robertson recognized the symptoms of Trench Foot caused by dampness and cold. To add to the misery of the entombed men, the water had risen to the stretcher, leaving to the slippery and they deprived themselves of food rather than risk contaminating it.

Then a telephone line was thrust down the drill hole and the two men were able to send their voices to the surface without clambering up to it, but although they could not hear anything over the telephone. They were both suffering colds.

Every hour that passed Wednesday the sounds of the approaching rescuers became louder and a movement of air told the imprisoned men their deliverance was approaching.

The earth suddenly fell away as the rescuers' dimmy picks drove through the 'wall' of their prison Thursday morning and the grimy, cheery face of a Draegerman appeared.

They were saved.

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Two Feature Picture Bill—A Vivid Drama of a Crook, a Boy and a Dog—Double Comedies of Rare Human Quality

And Realism

Crashing to a new high in adventure, and bringing to the screen the latest and most unusual trio, "Tough Guy," Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer's stirring story of underworld and Secret Service, is the new attraction now playing at the Capitol Theatre. It is a human story of a hunted crook, a boy and a dog. Jackie Cooper, as the Cockney lad named Calista, of "Riffraff," and Rin-Tin-Tin, Jr., Alsatian dog actor, are the three comrades amid the hectic pursuit and hair's breadth escapes in a chase which thrills and grips.

Jackie's role is his most "grown up" to date, as a youngster who runs away to save his pet dog, accidentally falls in with the crook, unknowingly becomes involved and figures in a breathless series of adventures, which the former has planned to escape the clutches of the man finds reparation through the comradeship of the youth and the faithful animal.

Chester Franklin, director of "Sequoia," brought the famous Byron-Rigar Allan Wood story with deft skill. Tackle, as the crook approaching his teens is ever more interesting than in younger roles, and Jackie's consistently fine characterization of Joe Calerno, The dog, one of the famous star of silent days, bids fair to follow in his father's footsteps.

"Stormy" on the Same Bill

Heralded as one of the comically most beautiful pictures ever filmed and said to relate a most unusual and engrossing story of animal life, "Stormy," Universal's spectacular drama of the great outdoors, featuring Noah Beery, Jr., and Jean Rogers, opened yesterday at the Capitol Theatre.

Stormy, the title character, is a horse-thief who runs off with valuable horses. Thrown from a speeding train, on which he has been caught by a posse, he is found colt he has cared for since birth, he later saves the colt from the train wreckage, and its mother is killed. Stormy, himself, is branded as a rogue, chased by two brothers, one of whom loves horses so much he maintains a huge herd of wild horses on his share of the range. The other brother, a leading character of ominous character, wants to kill the herd of wild horses and use the range for cattle.

Stormy builds a secret corral for the colt, where Tucker uses a wild horse, and trains it, but permits it to run with the wild herd. The colt eventually comes to him at his whistle or call, although no other man can get near him. The part this colt plays in the life of the oddly associated pair of pioneers and their primitive struggle for the survival of the fittest, makes a most engrossing and fascinating story.

AT THE REGENT

"Prisoner of Shark Island" The Picture That Will Be The Talk of 1936, Thrilling Human Tragedy is fact stranger than fiction?

With the publication of "The Prisoner of Shark Island," 20th Century picture today and Friday, matinee daily, at the Regent Theatre, the screen again proves that the material of life is a mine of gold for talented imaginings of playwrights and motion picture writers. Darryl F. Zanuck was preparing this picture, now a production of unusual power, a roller for his plot, but went directly to the plain, unvarnished facts of American history to find the core of the most tragic figure America has ever known.

"The Prisoner of Shark Island" tells a story of the events that led following the Civil War. After Lincoln was assassinated his murderer Dr. Samuel Mudd, played by Warner Baxter, and he was convicted of being an accomplice in the murder of the president.

The picture depicts the trial at which Mudd, held with the assassination, the imprisonment, the rising tide of mob hatred, the three long hours he was in the dock of his fate while others deemed him and escaped with his life, and finally his dreary journey to the Dry Tortugas prison under life sentence.

On the island the real drama began for Mudd. Despite the unworldly man fights against the degradation, and spiritual starvation, against the bestiality of the labor he is forced to do. Desperation drives him to attempt an escape with the aid of a negro guard. In the breathless, gripping, swift sequence of the picture, he swims with his negro friend to a reef where his wife awaits him... only to be vanquished by the pursuing guards.

When fever ravages and prostrates the island, Mudd is given the opportunity to regain his former standing as a doctor. In the fight against the epidemic, drives the prisoners to aid him. The famous ship captains to land supplies by threatening to fire on them.

The close of the picture, which shows Baxter portrayed by the same actor returning to his loving wife and the freedom of the mainland, is moving.

Gloria Stuart plays the leading feminine character in the picture, Rosanna Johnson, Hollywood's foremost scenarist, prepared the screen version of the biography of Dr. Mudd.

Twice-Daily Comedy

Thelma Todd and Patsy Kelly bring their comedy to the screen in the guise of the governesses of the famous Brewster family, "Top Flight Modern Tokio" a story of travels, is also be exhibited. Performances are daily at 1.30, 3.30, 5.30 and 8.30. "The Prisoner of Shark Island", starts at 3.00, 7.30 and 9.40.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Hinchley, Buckinghamshire, April 23 (CP Cable)—Police Magistrates today ordered a 13-year-old boy sent to go to the reform for six months. The boy admitted having stolen broken bolt the local theatre to take films by a movie camera his mother gave him.

Fromm, Calif., April 23 (CP) — Firemen raced to an alarm box to find two curious children seemingly unscathed on fire. They never had seen a fire signal box before, they explained.

"What do they have for fires back in your country?" asked a fireman.

"They don't have pastils," was the answer. "They just let the houses burn.

Lawrence, Kas., April 23 (CP)—Grandfather "sparked," failed to "spoonsed," and in the 1850's big brother called it "pitchin."

Now, with spring coming on at the University of Kansas the students are occasionally "pitchin" during the week.

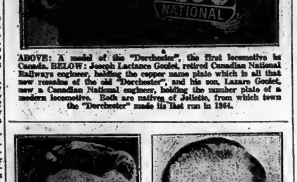
Chicago, April 23 (CP)—Terms of Mrs. Elizabeth Jarchow's divorce from Wilhelm Jarchow, as approved by Judge Randolph F. Desell: (1) Mrs. Jarchow to pay her husband $368; (3) Jarchow to be back in Germany.

"He was a pigeon," Mrs. Jarchow testified. The charge was cruelty.

Dundas, Ont., April 23 (CP)—If anybody wants to buy an obelisk and fountain, he should apply to Mayor Manning of Dundas, who has owned them since 1911. But the purchaser who buys the plant must then empley 100 men.

MERCHANT'S SON KIDNAPPED TODAY

$30,000 Ransom Demanded For Return of Allentown, P. A. Boy



Allentown, Pa., April 23.—(AP)—Ten-year-old Henry T. Koch, son of a department store executive, was kidnapped on his way to school today but escaped as his father received a demand for $30,000 ransom. Police said a man they arrested admitted the kidnapping.

Young Koch, bound and gagged with tape and left in a woods on the outskirts of Allentown, cut the tape on his legs with a rock. He ran to a farm nearby and got aid.

A man seized near the scene declared himself as John James of Chicago, but police expressed the belief that was fictitious. They said a roll of adhesive tape and four prepared ransom notes were in his pockets. The notes were arranged in orderly fashion, each succeeding one stranger in tenor than the preceding.

What apparently was intended to be the final demand said:

"If you try to double cross us this time you can go home for you will not get your son back." It was signed "Final-Warning".

HON. MICHAEL DWYER HAROLD GORDON

HEROES AMONG HEROES AT MINE—Heroes among heroes are "Mike" Dwyer and Harold Gordon, who showed scant regard for their own lives in the rescue of Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from their prison in the depths of Moose River mine. Though he collapsed once and was warned by physicians several times, Hon. Michael Dwyer, minister of public works in the Nova Scotia cabinet, stirred himself in miner's clothes and kneeled at the pit head of Reynolds shaft, aiding and directing the rescue work. Harold Gordon, brother of Peggy Gordon, Ottawa, finance Commissioner, who, as one of the reckless dreagermen, led on his stalwart Stellarton miners to super efforts in clearing a way to the entombed men. Hour after hour these dreagermen clawed, scratched and dug by hand in the narrow passageway, working until human flesh could stand no more. Then they would be hauled out, revived, only to rush back again into the death pit.

POLICEMAN ON BEAT NOTICES DIFFERENCE

Keen student of psychology and human nature, which he encounters daily on his beat, Police Constable William Evans today rejoiced a new angle into the past several days of ordinary routine on the part of local residents.

"Another week of this rescue work down at Moose River and the whole city would have had the Blues," commented the Constable as he surveyed traffic at a downtown point this morning.

Never the last ten days people have been going without sleep. They've had their cars and eyes glued to radios. They've had their meals interrupted with flashes from their radios telling of the progress. And they've been telephoning friends back and forth, as well as the police station, dozens of times a day. It's been on their minds constantly. Now I guess they're getting back to normal. They appear more cheery to me today, anyhow," he added.

'They're Through' Shout All As Rescue News is Spread

Universal Sigh of Relief and Sense of Joy Felt as Men Are Reached

REACTION IN CITY

No church or city bells were rung, no shouting men and women filled the streets, and after a brief pause its business was soon resumed as usual but underneath there was that feeling of long sustained tension now released. And hopes that had at times dimmed and faded and risen again in the hearts of those citizens to whom the entombed men in a Moose River mine had become a real and living actuality during the past days gave way to outward fears and interest again were cheered.

"They're through! The rescue workers have broken in. The men are safe!"

It was that first flash-over clacking teletype in the Ontario Provincial Police headquarters in Toronto, ignemor editorial room, spelled out in letters and words with staccato taps, and a flash also that reached out to nations and relieved the thousands of homes of radio equipment owned and tuned to the first surcease of painful interest that had been held since the first grim hint, days of disaster last Easter Sunday.

"They're through!" was the word that flew to all people's lips on the streets and in the stores and offices and homes of the land following that first pause at noon.

Then, over the thousands of telephone lines throughout the Province the same word was spoken. Calls that almost jammed the switchboard of the local office and stations relaying were placed to confirm that first flash. Calls were placed by members of the staff and the score in the offices of the Daily Ontario Intelligencer.

And around those radios that had been specially installed for listeners in the doorways of shops in the city, where interested listeners crowded to hear the latest report at intervals since the morning men and women turned away sorrowfully, as the first news was received, but hopefully, with the belief that inner glow of hope and faith in the realization that brave miners knew that there was something to live for, to save men trapped almost hopelessly from the depths.

To the newspapers of the nation it was a great, heartwarming and pathos and interest and tragic realities and unforeseen happenings with their editorial rooms deserted since the war. To the man on the street and housewife at home it was a grim and stark check in a long struggle of realization and hope through which sags for the past days were glued hourly to the loud speakers in their homes.

But it was a story with a happy ending, breathed hundreds of local residents when the news came to them freely after their period of intense waiting.

SUGGESTS MINER FUND IN CITY

"There is an agitation for raising a fund in Belleville for the relief and benefit of the miners, who formed the rescue line, if anything should and I had one enquiry last evening as to the possibility of organizing it," declared Mayor Harry Hill this morning.

"But, we of city council are really up to our necks in work at the present time. I suggested that the initiative that the matter be taken up with some service club. It's a worthy project, and has full official sanction, and I'd be glad to see it undertaken by one of the clubs," he added.

Down into the shaft went the dreagermen last. It had been ordered too dangerous before—cave-in might occur anytime and kill miners. But in the emergency they tore down the rock and "live earth" blocking the passageway and carpenters went in to erect new timbers to hold the shaft.

They started early Monday and they finished a few minutes after midnight today without mishap. It was a race between the diggers and death—the miners striving to reach the surviving prisoners before the underground exposure could complete its work of destruction.

Refused Food After Sunday

Resting hours dishonored from the end of the tube, Dr. Robertson and Scadding refused to take food after Sunday because it was too dangerous, they said, to climb a ladder to the point where the drill hole entered their cave-in.

On Tuesday Dr. Robertson asked for a fountain pen and watched it felt his spirits were sinking, that he intended writing his last testament. But the same day the diggers got through solid rock, tumbled into the operating shaft and went to work through loose earth.

They sighted their objective at last. They were heard by the untombed men and spirits rose again on both sides of the barricade deep in the earth.

"Hello, Charlie," Dr. Robertson called jubilantly up the communication tube late last night to his brother-in-law, Charles Ivey of Lower Sackville.

"Everything O.K. I'll be up in a few minutes. The men are here."

It wasn't very long after that when the boys did get through, led by Mr. Simpson, leader of the dreagermen.

"My boys went down with the hope and of staying there until they brought out Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding," said the chief, said Simpson.

"I am proud of them. We don't care about the risk—that's what makes the job worthwhile."

JUMP FROM SKIP TO ESCAPE ROCK

Routine Inspection Was Completed Just as Cave-in Occurred

Moose River, N.S., April 23 (CP)—Two men who jumped from the skip in the mine they hoped to rework was ended on Sunday night, April 19, and Dr. Robertson and Magill were in the skip, waiting to be pulled to the surface from the 180-foot level, when the shaft fell in 40 feet over their heads.

Dr. Robertson and Magill jumped from the skip just in time to evade falling rock and earth. With Scadding they retreated deep into the cavity until the worst period of fear subsided. Then they managed to climb to the next level, 141 feet from the top.

"Rescue work started the following day and the 100 miners took over the first assault on the old mine were encouraged when smoke curled from a crev on the surface. They knew then there was something to fight for. And they knew they must reach the 141-foot level.

It was a grim fight with death and pathos and interest and tragic realities and unforeseen happenings with their editorial rooms deserted since the war. To the man on the street and housewife at home it was a grim and stark check in a long struggle of realization and hope through which sags for the past days were glued hourly to the loud speakers in their homes.

But it was a story with a happy ending, breathed hundreds of local residents when the news came to them freely after their period of intense waiting.

Student Poet 'Psychiatrized'

Columbia, S.C., April 23 (CP)—Apparently it's up to Peter Moody, College boy author, who caused the ire of the United States House of Representatives to say whether he will submit voluntarily to a psychiatrist's probing of his mind and his writings.

Moody, a Wofford College junior, wrote a piece of free verse in imitation of Carl Sandberg's lusty style for the College Literary Magazine. It described cotton mill workers as "ignorant, diseased and dirty" and said they were mired at their meetings by "mealy-mouthed hypocrites."

The poem brought a storm of protest from the top-side leaders of Spartanburg and the House, by resolution, requested Dr. O. F. Wilkins, Superintendent of the State Asylum, to send a psychiatrist to examine the young poet.

Order in Palestine Preserved — Thomas

London, April 23—(CP)—Liberal Secretary Wedgwood Benn, M.P., said today in Palestine at all costs, said will not be deterred by "political risk" or threats of any kind, J. H. Thomas, Secretary for the Colonies told the House of Commons today.

"Maintenance of law and order is a matter exclusively for His Majesty's government and will be enforced against any one breaking the law," he said.

Mr. Thomas gave the official list of casualties in the Palestine disorders as 16 Jews and five Arabs killed, 75 Jews and 73 Arabs injured.

LOCAL VETERAN PULLING FOR DR.

Dr. Robertson M. O. For The First Canadian Battalion

"He was a great surgeon, you see he was the Medical Officer in our battalion and all of the boys were simply relieved, when we heard the good news of his rescue," stated Thos. W. Horton, 15 Gordon Street who served in the 1st Battalion C.E.F. as a private, while Dr. D. Edwin Robertson, who was today reported safe from the cold at Moose River, N.S., was the medical officer of the same battalion. "The crew five officers of the old 1st Battalion sent a telegram to Moose River earlier in the week assuring Dr. Robertson, then ottomed in the snow, of their great concern. He was a great surgeon and a friend of all the entire battalion and we simply can't know what a feeling of relief and satisfaction it is to me and other members of the old battalion to know our old friend and M.O. has been spared from what seemed certain death. Many a wounded soldier Dr. Robertson saved over seas and we were all pulling for his safe release," added Tommy Horton.

'Sage' Broadcasts Come Under Fire

Ottawa, April 23 (CP)—Col. W. A. Steel a member of the Canadian Radio Broadcasting Commission since its establishment, today told the House Commons Committee that had no personal knowledge of the alleged Drew-Sage broadcasts during the Dominion general election campaign of 1935.

He was asked to call Donald Henshaw and J. J. Gibbons of Toronto at the scene of the Drew commission, to obtain evidence on the broadcasts. Investigation of these was arranged by the Gibbons firm on behalf of the Conservative party during the election campaign last fall.

Where is Our Navy?

Ottawa, April 23 (CP)—Where is the Royal Canadian Navy, and are any of its units in Mediterranean waters? Such is the question appearing on the order paper today by T. L. Church (Toronto, Spadina-Greenview).

Mr. Church wants to know if the government possesses any record of the proceedings of the naval conference and armament conference in London and if Canada has been consulted by Great Britain relative to reduce naval armaments.

Accuse One Another of Killing Child

Alloona, Pa., April 23—(AP)—The Rev. Father Peter Podershaft accused Mrs. Margaret Karmendi, 24, and Roy Lockard, both had signed sworn statements here today accusing the latter of striking little Sonny with a heavy bolt or railroad spike.

EXPECT COMPLETE RECOVERY OF MEN

Amazement Felt at The Stamina Exhibited by Dr. Robertson

(By The Canadian Press)

Every confidence is held by physicians Dr. Robertson and Alfred Spedding will completely recover from their experience of being entombed more than 10 days.

Amazement is felt by physicians and nurses at the men's endurance, stamina. He crawled part of the way up the shaft without aid.

x-x-x

"Dr. Robertson's physical and mental condition is phenomenal. We feel he will make a rapid recovery," stated a medical bulletin. "Spedding's condition is surprisingly good. We do not anticipate further trouble."

x x x

The trapped men laughed and joked when rescuers broke through to reach them. "I'm sure you've tickled to death," reported Draegerman Joseph Nearing of Stellarton, N.S.

As miners carried the men from the shaft, Spedding, his face caked and mud-stained, weary man gave thanks in song. "Glory to God From Whom All Blessings Flow" rang out.

x x x

Dr. Robertson and Spedding were hastily placed in an ambulance to be taken to the field hospital, when miners returned to the death level and brought out Magill's body.

x x x

It was huddled in the pit, when the three men were found about 1 o'clock last night. Magill died after more than seven days' confinement.

x x x

The diamond drill hole, that meant reassurance to the two since Sunday almost missed them, Nearing said. It struck into the slope barely at its edge. Tribute was paid Billy Reid and Jack Chaisor for striking the slope as he worked blind from the top.

x x x

Two members of Nova Scotia's Government were among those at the finish. Dr. F. R. Davis, Health Minister, carried a hypodermic needle in case of need and was ready to administer medical care.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 23 (CP)—The early stage on Toronto Stock Exchange this morning saw a display of strength in a few of the golds, including Lamaque and Sladen, the oilled concerns, but under the influence of international share markets, most of the gains were dropped. Trading was continued mainly by the floor professional share markets.

Coniagum sold at up 3-16 and Aquarius at up to 1.30 and both held their gains. Conjecon held to the up side, supported by the annual statement out today showing heavy depreciation on investments. Beattie Gold Mines was another early gains and in the senior gold group Dome and Wright Hargreaves held gains.

Lower prices were posted for Falconbridge, Sudbury Basin and Sherritt.

Pacific Eastern Developments. Pacific Eastern officials throughout have been silent on the construction policy of having a geologist's report, but it is understood that they are making public statements and more work will be done on the new find before an official report is available, comments The Financial News of Toronto. Meanwhile it is of interest to record that an exploratory shaft 100 feet from a geological contact has entered a much more favorable formation than a geological standpoint than the area penetrated by the main 15,000 shaft.

In this favorable zone the quartz showing was picked up and had been followed for 30 ft. at last report. In contrast with the broken zone in the region of the main tunnel the zone now being explored is free, and is described as having certain material comparable with that in which the gold producing veins of the district occur.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, April 23.—(CP)—Caught in the wash of a New York decline Toronto Industrial Market shares moved lower on slim volume. International Nickel touched 46 1-2 down 1-4 from more than two points and fractional losses ran through the Interlisted section. Volume was about the smallest of the year, less than 15,000 shares changing hands in the first three hours.

Utility, Distillery, Bank and Food stocks sold off. Distillers-Seagrams touched 31 1-4 for a loss of 5-8 in low price for the year. Gains in losses were about the same size, group and British American and International Petroleum weakened a fraction.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 23.—Wholesale butter prices were slightly easier on the Montreal market yesterday. Potatoes held steady at the five cent reaction which occurred Tuesday. Cheese, eggs and poultry were unchanged. Receipts for the day were: Cheese 3 boxes; 75 crates as 1,615 cases of eggs, 94 boxes of butter and 6 cases.

The butter market was generally quoted 31 1-2c to 31 3-4c per lb. for No. 1, but reports ran higher. No. 2 fresh pasteurized about 1-4c less.

The potato market was steady at prices as follows on No. 1 grade, per 80-lb. bags; P. E. Manitoba $1.70 to $1.75; P.E.I. Cobblers and N.B. Mountains, $1.65 to $1.70; Quebec Mountains, $1.55 to $1.60. Per 10-lb. sacks of P.E.I. or N.B. Mountains the top is $1.85 to $1.90. No. 2 Quebec whites the range was $1.40 to $1.50 per 80-lb. bags. There were no new potatoes quoted.

On the egg market local shipments arriving in cartons or 1-1 lots were 30-30 1-2c for A-large, 28 1-2c to 29c for A-medium, 27-18 1-2c for B, and 17-17 1-2c for C.

Livestock

Toronto, April 23 — (CP)—Cattle sold at steady prices on the Toronto livestock market today while no calves were offered. The hog lamb division ruled unsettled.

Receipts reported by the Dominion livestock branch were cattle, 40 calves, none; hogs, 40; sheep and lambs, 230.

A few handyweight butcher cattle sold from $5.50 to $5.90 and a few good cows brought $3.50 to $3.75.

The hog situation remained unsettled. Yesterday truck hogs sold 10 cents higher at $9.35, but today were unchanged yesterday at $8.50 F. O. B. for bacons and $8.75 off cars.

One load of export lambs were not sold in early trade.

U. K. BUTTER

Ink bottles are always the same shape but ink stanes are liked to servises you.

Any kind of ink is one of the worst things you can spill, but the most popular kind to spill on other peoples property is indelible.

The most awakening thing you can do with ink is to pore water on it, the most optimistic thing is to leave the bottle on the edge of the table with the cork out, and the most unexpected thing is to drink it.

When you're writing with a pencil if you stick the point in your mouth it often helps you to think better, but if you stick a pen in your mouth while you were writing with ink it would probably ony take your mind off the subject. This proves life is quirkly easier for people who use their imagenment.

The first time you are allowed to use ink it takes advantage of your innocence and gets all over your fingers, but this parsely only lasts the first few years and seems more peaceful to others than what it does to you.

Scratchy pens make some people nervius, generally not being the people who are writing with them at the time.

Black ink on your hands or face makes your mother sad, and red ink makes her scared first and even madder afterwerd.

AMELIASBURG

Ameliasburg—Mr. Albert Istead and family moved on Wednesday to Mr. Hendrick's farm on the York Road, where he will be employed in caring for the big orchard.

The local blacksmith, Mr. R. C. Sable reports business in his line, the most encouraging for several years, and he was obliged to have the former blacksmith, Mr. Albert Crosby help him for a few days.

Mrs. Mordey Hodge and family, are spending the Easter holidays with her mother at Tamworth.

The directors of the Ameliasburg Agricultural Society met at the Masonic Hall on Tuesday evening, to formulate plans for the annual Exhibition in September.

The Maple Leaf Mill is unusually busy at present, and the proprietor, Mr. Arthur Corfield, reports the largest tonnage of custom grinding in the history of the mill.

Mrs. S. D. Pile of Oshawa, is visiting relatives and friends in this vicinity this week.

There was a large congregation at St. Alban's Church on Easter Sunday and the service was bright and inspiring. Mrs. M. E. Wood presided at the organ to her usual efficient manner and the hymns were appropriate, breathing the spirit of the Easter festival. The rector gave an inspiring address based on the text in St. Matthew 28th chapter 1. "The first day of the week cometh Mary Magdalene early when it was yet dark, unto the sepulchre and seeth the stone taken away from the sepulchre". The service was followed by a celebration of Holy Communion after which the rector gave instructions to the class of candidates to be presented to His Lordship, Bishop Lyons at the Confirmation Service at St. Alban's Church on Sunday, May 10th, at 11 a.m.

The following pupils of St. Alban's S.S. were successful in the recent written examinations in church history and Bible Story. The figures denote percentage:—Florence Kirby 74; Helen Lough 88; Percy Lough 98; Connie Wood 86; Harold Wood 97; Audrey Carmon 84; Janet Sable 80—Bible Class.

Intermediate Class—Dick Kirby 78.

Prizes were awarded to the pupils obtaining over 75 per cent.

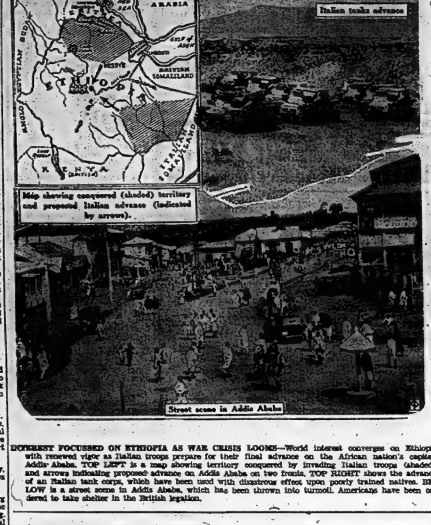
Infant Class—Mary Lough.

The stork visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Corfield on Sunday evening, and left a fine baby boy. Congratulations.



The Ladies' Guild of St. Alban's (Church met at the home of the President, Mrs. (Dr.) V. L. Taft on Thursday afternoon, when a very enjoyable time was spent after which a luncheon was served.

Quite a number of the Loyal Sons attended the annual S.S. Convention at Mountain View Church, on Monday evening and all report it one of the most successful ever held in the township.

The Social evening at the Orange Hall, Ameliasville, on Friday evening last under the auspices of the Ladies' Guild was a great success both socially and financially. The popular laughable comedy entitled "Uncle Dick's Mistake" was staged by Messrs. Charlie and Ralph Marsteen and Misses Helen Lough and Connie Wood and made quite a hit. The ladies served a delicious luncheon after which dancing was indulged in until the wee small hours.

At the Easter Service at St. Alban's Church the following members donated bouquets of flowers as follows—Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dillon, Easter Lilies, in memory of her father and sister, Florence. Daffodils in memory of Dr. and Mrs. Pile, from the family. Calla lilies from Lewis McPhail in memory of his wife, Easter lilies from Mrs. Strother in memory of her parents and from Rev. Arthur Strother in memory of his father and step-Hilda. Easter lilies in memory of Robert Lough from his [illegible] and family. [illegible] Florence and Mildred from their parents, Mr. and Mrs. [illegible] and sister Helen.

The play entitled "For Pete's Sake" staged in the Town Hall on Tuesday evening, by East Lake Young People, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid of the United Church, was a decided success and the large audience thoroughly enjoyed the performance.

CANADIAN DOMINICAN BECOMES BISHOP IN JAPAN—Canadian Dominican Fathers were honored when Rev. Joseph-Marie Lemieux was elevated to the bishopric of Sendai, Japan. He is the first Canadian Dominican to be appointed bishop in a foreign country, and at 34 is one of the youngest bishops in the world. Father Lemieux was born in Quebec City. He was ordained in Ottawa in 1926. He studied a year at Rome, and later spent some time at Oxford. From Oxford he went to Japan and later named parish priest at Hakodate, Japan, where he remained until his elevation to the bishopric. Sendai has a population of more than 200,000. It is the centre of a diocese administered by Canadian Dominicans for the last 10 years. Father Lemieux, who will be consecrated May 28, is shown above with his church at Hakodate.

GERMANY COMPLETES PLANS FOR ELABORATE TRANS-ATLANTIC AIRLINE—The German air ministry has announced that within a few months trial flights for a transatlantic air service between Germany and the United States will be begun, and that plans for the permanent airline have been completed. Dr. Heinrich Sohnrey, of the German airline system, discussed their plans with air officials in Washington last December. Principal stops between Berlin and New York will be Lisbon, Portugal, the Azores, Bermuda, and Charleston, S.C. The Germans are building huge Dornier planes for the DO-X type, capable of flying 3,000 miles with a 1,200-pound payload. The ships will weigh close to thirty-five tons and will be luxuriously appointed.

GERMANY NO LONGER HIDING HER ARMAMENT PROGRAM—Ominous of terror, indicators of what is to be in future warfare, these aeroplanes fly over the picturesque city of Nurnberg, Germany. They are bombers; latest additions to Germany's air force, and visual proof that the Reich military authorities intend to go all the way in re-armament in the air as well as in other branches of service. Bombers had been expressly forbidden by the Versailles treaty. Their first flight in formation took place on the day that memorial services were being observed for Manfred von Richthofen, famed leader of Germany's wartime "flying circus." BELOW, not up her sleeve, but in her van, rocket, Germany sprays a trump card that will undoubtedly play an important part in any future war. The trump consists of her fleet of vast pocket submarines, marvels of efficiency, despite their lighter weight. This latest picture shows a fleet of these U-boats beside their mother ship in the harbor at Kiel during the celebration of Kiel week.

THESE CHAMPS ARE THE CREAM OF U.S. AMATEUR BOXING TALENT—Basking their way through three nights of amateur competition in which 267 lads competed, these seven champions gained United States A.A.U. titles in Cleveland and are among the group to qualify for the U.S. Olympic trials to be held in Chicago in May. LEFT to RIGHT, the champions are Jackie Wilson, 112, of Cleveland; William Joyce, 118, of Gary, Ind.; Joseph Church, 126, of Buffalo; Thomas Palkaitis, 135, of South Bend, Ind.; Leo Sweeney, 147, of Pittsburgh; Jimmie Clark, 160, of Jamestown, N.Y., and Johnny Lashmit, 175, of New York. The heavyweight champ, Wilford Dean of Shreveport, La., is not shown.

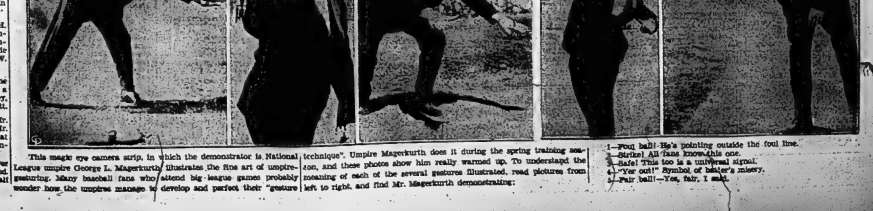
6TH SIDNEY

6th Sidney—Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rose entertained the L.U.D.G. class of Scott's Sunday School one evening last week. After the program lunch was served. There were forty present.

Mr. and Mrs. M. B. Scott were Sunday afternoon callers of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Scott, Foxboro.

Mrs. S. W. Lloyd and Magdaline were Sunday guests at the home of Mr. Ross Dafoe.

Mrs. Alton Sine is a patient in the Belleville Hospital.



Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Rose from Belleville and Trenton were Mr. and Mrs. Colin Bonisteel and children, Miss Marie Bonisteel, Miss Alice Clark, Mr. W. Mallory and Mr. Geo. Arthurs.

Miss Geraldine and Joyce Sine have returned home having spent a few days on the 4th of Sidney, guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Bartlett.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Paul, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Ketcheson also Mr. and Mrs. Horace Yateman called at the home of Mr. Gerald Sine Sunday afternoon.

The maple syrup season is over and farmers are busy on the land. The syrup season was hardly half of what it was last year.

How To Become An Umpire with Appropriate Gestures—Mr. Magerkurth Is the Teacher

This magic eye camera strip, in which the demonstrator is National League umpire George L. Magerkurth, illustrates the fine art of umpiring. Many baseball fans who attend big league games probably wonder how the umpires manage to develop and perfect their "gesture" technique". Umpire Magerkurth does it during the spring training season, and these photos show him really warmed up. To understand the meaning of each of the several gestures illustrated, read pictures from left to right, and find Mr. Magerkurth demonstrating:

1—Foul ball! He's pointing outside the foul line.
2—Strike! All fans know this one.
3—Safe! This too is a universal signal.
4—"Ye cod!" Symbol of batter's misery.
5—Fair ball!—Yes, fair, I say.

ITALY'S ETHIOPIAN CONQUEST—Though Italy is reported to have Ethiopia conquered, actually only a small area is under Italian domination. The map above shows where Italian armies have advanced making straight for Addis Ababa, capital city.

Rawdon and District

RAWDON— Mrs. A. Gridwood, of Peterborough, has been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Will Downey.

The Misses Lulu and Lealia Hoover were recent guests of Mrs. Dorothy Unsas.

Miss Madeline Reid spent the holidays with Mr. and Mrs. John Middleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Todd, Bewdley, visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George McGee a few days recently.

THE TARZAN TWINS

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As the two boys stood waiting the wrath of the savages to burst upon them following Dick's attack on Don's assistant, Dick said gloomily: "I suppose we're in for it now; but I had to do it.

"Gold Old Dick," the other whispered earnestly.

The savages were so surprised that for the moment they did nothing. Then they began to laugh and jeer at the discomfited youth who was lying on the ground nursing a bloody nose. The laughter broke the tension. And now Zogiba herded his young captives through the village.

Prodding them with his spear, he hustled them into the presence of a big black who sat talking with several fierce warriors beneath a large tree. "This guy must be the chief," Don commented. "Looks like a big shot," said Dick; "maybe he'd send us back to the railroad."

"I'll try," declared Don. "Say, Big Boy," he addressed the chief; "do you savvy English?" The black scowled and poured forth a torrent of words in a harsh dialect. Had the boys been less ignorant of African ways, they might have seen the glint of menace in his shifty eyes!

CARELESSNESS—that often brings UNHAPPINESS

YOU may know girls like the one on the left—at home, unhappy, while others are out enjoying life.

Often they are victims of ill health that results from unwise dieting—from eating meals that lack sufficient "bulk" to provide needed internal exercise.

Common constipation results. Too often it isn't regarded as serious. Yet doctors will tell you that common constipation can slowly undermine your health, leading to discomfort, lowering of bodily resistance, and disease.

Don't neglect common constipation. Usually it is due to lack of sufficient "bulk" in the foods you eat. When it is, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is a safe and pleasant corrective. Scientific tests in leading universities have shown that this delicious ready-to-eat cereal supplies the "bulk" needed to provide regular elimination.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN absorbs moisture in the body, forming a soft mass that gently cleanses the intestinal walls. It does not break down in the system as does the "bulk" in many fruits and vegetables. So it is often more effective.

Isn't it better to use this natural laxative food in place of patent medicines? Two tablespoonfuls of ALL-BRAN daily, served with milk or cream, are usually sufficient. Stubborn cases may require ALL-BRAN oftener.

Kellogg's ALL-BRAN is not a "cure-all"—but it does correct common constipation. It is guaranteed by the Kellogg Company. Enjoy ALL-BRAN as a cereal, or cook into appetizing muffins, breads, waffles, etc. ALL-BRAN has a tempting nut-sweet flavor. Eat it regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Serve ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity

DR. D. E. ROBERTSON TAKEN BY PLANE TO HALIFAX

Temples and Mosques in India Threatened with Fire in Religious Riots

200 Men, Machine Guns Posted on Poona Bridge; 85 Persons are Injured

Discord Breaks Out Over Music Played Before Hindu Temple

5,000 JOIN IN RIOTS

Famous Kashapet Mosque is Under Guard By Police

Bombay, April 24—(AP)—Telephone messages from Poona today said troops have been called out following communal rioting between Hindus and Moslems in which 85 persons were reported injured.

The report stated that attempts were made to burn temples and mosques.

The telephonic advices were that the riots had occurred both in the morning and afternoon and that 200 soldiers armed with machine guns have been posted on the bridge in the centre of the city.

Mosque is Guarded

Soldiers and police were ordered to guard the famous Kashapet mosque.

The trouble started, it was said, in a dispute over music being played in front of a Hindu temple.

A crowd estimated at 5,000 and composed of both Hindus and Mohammedans gathered and rioting soon began.

The troops were called in after 300 policemen had been unable to disperse the fighters.

TRAGIC END TO BOYHOOD DREAM

Windsor Youth Skips as Seaman And Washed Overboard

WINDSOR, Ont., April 24—(CP)—A tragic end to a boyhood dream of adventure was concluded today in a telegram from Montreal received by John F. Brown, masked man, telling him his 21-year-old son, John, Jr., was lost at sea the night of April 5.

The young man, six-feet tall, one of the best athletes ever produced by Kennedy Collegiate, had shipped as an ordinary seaman on the motor vessel C. O. Stillman of the Imperial Oil Company, returning from the Dutch East Indies.

With a companion he had hitchhiked to Halifax, leaving here Aug. 20, arriving there five days later. Both young men got jobs on ships that were separated. John Hurley, 21, was reaching a boyhood dream of which he often spoke during High School days—in travelling to the Dutch East Indies.

He was on his way home to see his parents when young Brown was presumably, washed overboard.

No Date Has Been Set For Gov't Investigation

Halifax, April 24.—(CP)—No date has been set for the Government's investigation into the cave-in at Moose River Gold Mine which trapped three Toronto men Monday, it was learned today.

On April 27, five days before Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding were released and the body of their dead companion recovered, Norman Mackenzie, Deputy Minister of Mines, announced the investigation would be held.

He added the mine had been operated contrary to regulations. The department had not been informed the miners were taking out ore, over a period of 70 years the area had been weakened by prospectors taking out ore from below.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Arrivals, Ont., April 24 (CP)—Rosebon Rendezvous of Sportsmen Township, five miles from Arnprior, is 60 miles from the bungalow he was visiting Friday last ended in tragedy when Dr. Robert Bruce Scott, 30, Toronto physician, died of a bullet wound he received in the head. Coroner Dr. J. A. Hutchison, Arnprior, said the wound was self-inflicted.

Aurora, Ont., April 24 (CP)—Traffic officer Gilbert Robertson won a race with a motorcycle he had just before his motorcycle speedometer indicated 70 miles an hour, he claimed. He laid a charge of reckless driving against Donald Desautels, 21, of Portland, Ont., after a nine-mile chase.

Fort Erie, Ont., April 24 (CP)—The famous Peace Bridge, rebuilt after the fire that destroyed it, and the immigration building are in the news again. Reason: the recent chilly weather. Despite the fact that the bridge is 1,800 feet long, heat keeps leaking in the warm air from the customs.

Montreal, April 24 (CP)—David Llewellyn, 22, should have remained in the police lockup here after he was put there last night and relieved him of $2.35 and the ring he had on his finger, one of the thieves threw a pocket knife and wounded Llewellyn in the arm.

Green Bay, Wis., April 24 (CP)—Lukas, high school student, will write the opening chapter of the State law by 25 times in his own handwriting.

O'Donnell Seeks Leave to Appeal To Supreme Court

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Leave to appeal to the Supreme Court of Canada on the grounds the decision was against the weight of evidence, is at variance with a decision by a higher court of another province and in a similar case will be sought on behalf of Harry O'Donnell, convicted to hang May 5 for the revolver murder of Ruth Taylor.

Although the decision had been announced, it is understood the application to have the Supreme Court review the case will be presented in Ottawa next week by W. McKeown, one of O'Donnell's solicitors.

The Ontario Court of Appeals unanimously dismissed O'Donnell's appeal last week.

'FIGHT TO LAST MAN' SAYS ETHIOPIAN

Addis Ababa, April 24 (AP)—An Ethiopian government spokesman declared today his nation would fight the Italian invaders to the last man.

Seven U. Addis Ababa fails into Italian hands, he asserted, the war will be carried on with the Patriots and with assistance from exiled Ethiopian guerrilla tactics.

Men Badly Hurt in Pit on C. N. R. Tunnel Work at London

London, Ont., April 24—(CP)—Three members of the crew was not crushed and injured this afternoon when a gravel bucket weighing two tons, went crashing down into a pit where they were working on the Canadian National Railways tunnel. They were rushed to Victoria Hospital.

The three are: Walter Deering, Bill Richmond, Mike Flannagan.

Condition of the three was not immediately determined, they were suffering from head and body injuries. They were being attended by Dr. H. O. Foucar.

TUNNEL IN MINE SLOWLY CAVES IN, ALL AREA SINKING

To Get To Tube Entombed Men Had to Go Through Water

TWO MEN TALK

Dr. Robertson Has His Joke With Scads Doctor Mac-Donald

By RALPH MORTON

Moose River—The four-by-three-foot burrowed tunnel, which Nova Scotia miners dug through to reach the trapped men in Moose River Gold Mine is slowly caving in.

Whether it will be in time big enough for a rabbit to pass through, Monday night's deadline, April 27, only yesterday as he was eating his first full meal in many hours.

Dr. Robertson, 41-year-old physician crawled to the entrance early yesterday morning he had to crawl through the tube's hole at times. Dragsmen, carrying Scadding's stretcher, had to crawl on strong rope sides had a difficult time in pulling him through the narrow passage. Stretchers made with rods were discarded because at any time it was feared, because of the danger the sides might jab the loose earth or stone, while the patient was being put on a stretcher, which would send the ceiling down upon them.

"By the end of the week" the whole structure will be completely caved in, he said, completely" the miners shrieker said.

The Dragsmen never spoke of the danger. Every time they came to the scene of rescue activity they saw one way to actually effect rescue. It was to dig through the old Reynolds shaft to the men above.

In the pit for several days, Herman Magill was too ill to worry about the chances for rescue.

After communication had been established through the drill hole he did not talk to his wife. Although he knew that Mrs. Robertson and Scadding spoke often.

Magill did not want his wife to know he was in serious condition, suffering from stomach ulcer and pleurisy and pneumonia.

Monday morning, April 20, he sat up suddenly, spoke incoherently. And in two minutes he was dead.

Dr. Robertson and Alfred Scadding suffered from "trench feet." They lost surprisingly little weight through the drill hole they had drinking water.

The pilot spoke through some distance from the dry cavern where they had made themselves as comfortable as possible and after it reported great difficulty in climbing up and down twelve rungs of ladder through a tube from the surface.

When they wanted to report that all was well they had to go to the tube be hoisted so their voices would be carried to the surface. Then they lowered they refused to make the trip to the drill hole to get it.

Climbing Too Difficult

The severe physical exertion of climbing up and down twelve rungs or timberwork leading to their surroundings, and the extra drain for food even after a week in the pit, Dr. Robertson said, was why they decided to conserve their strength. They had to get wet to reach the hole and the first thing made was to get the telephone speaker through. Then they had to get men at the surface until the miners broke through every yesterday.

Over the week-end they feared a flood when water poured in from the surface. Pumps were put in from early on the morning of April 20, they shouted they were in danger of being drowned unless help arrived within three hours.

Flooding Feared

They could not tell the whereabouts of the miners and for some time it appeared the pit would flood before rescuers broke through except right where the men were trapped.

Magill died soon after the water began to look menacing and until yesterday afternoon, when miners dug as far as a crib-work through which the two could be seen, Dr. Robertson and Scadding were in growing gloom.

It seemed like years since Miss Robertson and others at the surface had first told them "it will be only a few hours now."

Walked About in Dark Never Expecting Rescue

Wisps of Smoke Were From Wood Fire Built on 141 Foot Level

By RALPH MORTON
(Canadian Press Copyright)

Moose River, April 24—Describing stories of their experiences in the Moose River mine were told here today as Dr. Dexter Robertson, back to physicians and those close to him. For five days they walked about the pitch black underground never expecting to be found alive.

The wisps of smoke that came up through the crevices the day after the crash and the "thumping" that were from fires they lit at the 141-foot level. It was these gifts of smoke from woodfire that convinced rescuers the three were still alive.

Magill died in the arms of Dr. Robertson. The Nova Scotia barrister and part owner of the mine was suffering from pneumonia. The attempt to get through water to speak through the tube and the consequent fear that mine waters were rising and might drown them in this vain was the final blow that took his life.

Stepped Into a Hole

The doctor would not permit them to sleep longer than an hour or at a time and then the three huddled together to preserve the warmth of their bodies. Old-time miners who believed the fires would not be found alive said it would be the cold that would take their lives.

Very few laymen have any conception of the darkness that comes to the mine of a cavern so far below the ground.

2 ARE REPRIEVED AS HOUR NEARS

Request of British Gov't. Postponed Executions in California

Sacramento, Calif., April 24 (AP)—Governor Merriam today reprieved Alexander Kennedy, British subject, and Joseph Krisky, an hour before the time for their hanging at San Quentin Prison.

He took the action in response to a telegram from the British government upon the urging on Secretary of State Hull.

MacKay and Krisky were to have died at 10 a.m. P.S.T. standard (1 p.m. E.S.T.) for the kidnapping of prison officials in a daring attempt to escape from the penitentiary.

In a statement to the press Governor Merriam said:

"On the request of the Honorable Cordell Hull, Secretary of State of United States, and upon the urgent request of the British Government in respect to Alexander MacKay and Joseph Krisky, I have filed in the California Supreme Court a petition that a writ of error be heard and decided I have granted both men a reprieve."

Lieut.-Governor's Wife Calls on Mrs. Magill

Halifax, April 24.—(CP)—In this time of rejoicing at the rescue from the Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding, Nova Scotians have had sympathetic concern for Mrs. Herman Magill, whose husband died in the Moose River Gold Mine before miners dug through the cave-in.

Mrs. W. H. Covert, wife of the Lieutenant-Governor of the province has called on Mrs. Magill at her hotel here. Nurses and many others are doing their utmost to make her stay in the city as bearable as possible under the circumstances.

Mrs. Magill will leave for Toronto today.

MUTINY IS DENIED BY ETHIOPIAN LEADER

Addis Ababa, April 24 (AP)—An Ethiopian government spokesman said today that Emperor Haile Selassie again was in control of all Ethiopian territories outside the Italian line.

The spokesman denied reports of a mutiny in the north but admitted that a chaotic situation arose during the rapid advance of the Italian vanguard to Desaye saying that the emperor's armies were forced into disorderly flight by gas attacks.

France Agrees To Discussion On Dardanelles

Paris, April 24 (AP)—France agreed today to discuss with other signers of the Lausanne Treaty Turkey's request for permission to fortify the Dardanelles.

The Lausanne Treaty of 1923, attempting to settle Near East questions arising from the Great War, demilitarized the Dardanelles Strait between the Aegean and Marmora seas.

RADIO AMATEURS ARE PAID TRIBUTE

Canadian Group Will Little Food And Sleep For Four Days

By A. D. MERKEL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Halifax, April 24 (CP)—The Halifax Branch of the Canadian Radio Relay League today is a group of Halifax radio amateurs who went with little sleep and food for four and eight to transmit news from the Moose River Mines to the bureau whence the story was conveyed by telegraph printer to newspapers across the continent.

Newspapermen were up against extraordinary odds at the scene of activity. When the cave-in occurred early Sunday night, April 19, there was only one telephone line connecting the village with the outside world, and practically all information of the rescue progress came from there by word of mouth or rural party line, with nearly thirty newspapermen all with the receiving end of the hooks, proved totally inadequate.

Line up In Queues

It was in continuous use day and night and reporters had to line up in queues to await their turn to get a word through to New York, Toronto, Halifax and elsewhere.

Early Sunday morning, April 19, when it was definitely established that three men lived below ground the Halifax Bureau appealed to the amateurs to help solve the problem. Response was prompt. It was made Thursday and Friday by others to erect a wireless station at Moose River, but had to be abandoned.

Instead, at eight Sunday a car left Halifax with three of the amateur radio men, Fred Tupper, Bill Hoare and Trevor Burton. They had with them a portable transmitter, receiver and other equipment for the establishment of a temporary station.

They had arranged before they left that Cliff Short listen for their signals and act as receiving station at Halifax.

An hour after they arrived at Moose River the amateurs established a two-way communication with Halifax.

Rome, April 24.—The advance of the main body of the Northern Army on Addis Ababa, capital of Addis Ababa, has begun, Marshal Badoglio reported today in a communique.

The Commander-in-Chief of the Fascist forces in East Africa announced the occupation of Dorra 12th, about 38 miles south of Desye, on the road to the capital.

Today's was the first communique mentioning a general advance against Addis Ababa from Desye.

MR. SAGE' ACTOR CALLED TO STAND IN 'SAGE' INQUIRY

R. Lucas Says He Appeared in First Two Broadcasts

PAID BY AGENCY

'Ever so Slightly Sick of Whole Thing' Says Witness

Ottawa, April 24 (CP)—Stanley Maxted of Toronto, regional director of Ontario programs for the Canadian Radio Commission, today corrected the statement he made to the House of Commons Radio Committee yesterday that the so-called "Sage" broadcasts had been transmitted by station CFRB, Toronto.

In his evidence before the committee Maxted had said that although some of the "Sage" broadcasts during the last Dominion election campaign were put on the commission's station CRCT at Toronto, the final transmission was from CFRB.

When the committee resumed today, Mr. Maxted said he had found himself in error. The "Sage" broadcasts had been put directly upon the Bell Telephone wires which carried the program to the various network stations.

Questioned by Paul Martin (Lib. Essex East), Mr. Maxted said he understood the "Sage" broadcasts were sponsored by Mr. H. Wright of the J. J. Gibbons Advertising Agency, which staged the broadcasts. He had taken no personal part in the broadcasts. Mr. Wright and Rupert Lucas had played the part of Mr. Sage.

One of the first three broadcasts the program was removed to another studio and for the last broadcast, on orders from commission headquarters, the facilities of CRCT were used.

Witness is Sworn

Rupert Lucas was called and Mr. Martin asked him to be sworn. This aroused a storm of argument from all sides, some members objecting that he had already appeared as most Moose River gold miners. Mr. Lucas was eventually sworn.

"Did you take part in the first 'Sage' broadcast?" asked Mr. Martin.

"Yes, in the first two," Mr. Lucas said. He had been asked by representatives of J. J. Gibbons. Donald Manson and Mr. Wright to appear.

"When he mentioned J. J. Gibbons I knew," replied the witness. "He was the head honcho of the Conservatives.

He was arranged that he (Lucas) would take the part of Mr. Sage but that Miss Grace Macinnis, Mr. Sage. George Young, Toronto actor, was also a character.

MAGILL BURIAL WILL BE SUNDAY

Military Honors Will be Paid Victim of Mine Disaster

Hamilton, Ont., April 24. (CP)—Burial of Herman R. Magill, victim of the Moose River mine disaster, from which Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding were rescued, will be made Sunday in Hamilton cemetery.

A military funeral will be held in Toronto and the cortege will then proceed to Hamilton, followed by mourning relatives, friends and brother officers of the Toronto Scottish Regiment, of which he served here at three o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Beyond stating the approximate time for the arrival here of R. B. Stonehouse, uncle of Mrs. Magill, no definite arrangements for the service here were not definite.

J. H. Gibson, superintendent of the Hamilton Cemeteries, said today the Hamilton Cemetery would be closed to the public from one o'clock in the afternoon until six o'clock.

"Due to the sorrows of the ground we will be forced to exclude the public," he said.

Mayor William Morrison and the cemetery board have granted special permission for the interment Sunday, a procedure not allowed for many years.

No Cause For Alarm in Robertson's Condition Says Dr. MacDonald

SCADDING'S CONDITION

Trench Foot Trouble Giving Some Concern

Halifax, April 24—(CP)—Rosy-cheeked and smiling, Dr. D. E. Robertson arrived in Halifax today by seaplane.

A huge cheer swung out at the Halifax shipyards to lift the Royal Air Force plane to shore. An ambulance was backed up to the door of the plane.

"How are you, Doc, how do you feel?" chorused shipyard workers. The man who had been trapped 10 days underground smiled and laughed his acknowledgement.

"He's all right," a Canadian Air Force officer remarked as he slammed the door of the ambulance and it moved slowly away to hospital. Twenty minutes later the ambulance had not yet arrived at the hospital. To-for it was moved carefully and slowly through city streets.

No Cause of Alarm

Halifax, April 24—"There is no cause for alarm over the condition of Dr. D. E. Robertson," one of his attending physicians, Dr. Ian MacDonald who accompanied the Toronto doctor on the seaplane flight from Moose River, told The Canadian Press this afternoon.

His condition was about the same as that noted in a bulletin issued at Moose River last night, Dr. MacDonald declared. That statement said Dr. Robertson was showing continued progress. He had slept and had taken nourishment and "no complications are evident."

Dr. MacDonald said he had left Toronto first case caused doctors a little concern today. Otherwise the patient who was brought to hospital here yesterday is progressing.

The Canadian Press bulletin issued as photographers dazzled him with flashlight flares at the dock.

Upon his arrival at the hospital Dr. Robertson was met by doctors and nurses and then conveyed to the private pavilion where he was given immediate medical care.

Doctor Looks Well

The doctor looked as if he had got back from a fishing trip," one of those who met him said. The Toronto doctor's appearance belied the fact that he had been down for 10 days and that he was not at first as "fit as a fiddle" as he appeared to be. Listening to reports of the rescue."

London, April 24 (C.P. Cable)—The King has telegraphed Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada, asking that his congratulation be extended to those who rescued the Toronto men entombed for ten days in a Moose River, N.S. gold mine.

His Majesty also asked that his sympathy be conveyed to Mrs. Herman Magill, widow of one of the entombed men. Magill died of exhaustion before the rescuers were able to burrow through the 141-foot level where the trio were trapped. Dr. R. Robertson and Alfred Scadding were brought out alive.

London, April 24 (C.P. Cable)—British newspapers today paid tribute to the courage and skill of those who rescued from living death two Toronto men entombed in a Nova Scotia gold mine.

The dramatic struggle at Moose River which ended when Dr. D. Robertson and Alfred Scadding were brought safely out of the mine, evoked widespread editorial praise.

At the same time there was deep sympathy expressed for the widow of Herman Magill, of Toronto, the third entrapped man who died before miners reached the trio.

TRAFFIC LINES TO BE PAINTED

Council Decides to Carry Out Work Discontinued Last Year

Sealed tenders addressed to the Chairman of Market and City Property and received at the office of the city clerk not later than five o'clock Thursday, May 7, for the collection of garbage and ashes in the city for the year 1936, commencing May 15, were recommended called by city council at its regular committee meeting last evening. The successful tenderer must furnish surety bond, he must also carry Workmen's Compensation Public Liability and Property Damage and agree to pay his help not less than 36 cents per hour, it is stipulated.

Traffic lines will be painted on main city streets this year, it is probable following a recommendation, that the city engineer be instructed to call for quotations on various grades of zone paint. No lines were painted last year.

Other recommendations were:

That Alderman Bateman be added to the special Gas Committee.

Repairs to Be Called

That tenders be called for the supply of sewer pipe, castings, sand, cement and cement for the various civic departments.

That three multiple lights be placed on Victoria Avenue, between Front and Pinnacle Streets.

That the city obtain particulars of the property constructed for the Fire and Wild property, on Pinnacle Street and report in regard to the owners.

That the tiny, former little grimy grocers and fruit stand now vacant.

A return of the purchase price to Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Property situated at 32 Great St. James Street, and that the sale be saved for the entire property known as 32-34 Great St. James Street, as the city is desirous of disposing of the entire property as the same is old, dilapidated or double dwelling, was further recommended.

The various civic departments requiring supplies for various offices, be instructed by letter of the Chairman of Printing and Stationery, for the purpose of checking and supervising distribution of purchases.

That the city engineer be instructed to furnish council with an approximate cost of tiling and filling the ditch through the East Front property, also the cost of removing roots and levelling the grounds, before the sale is advertised.

That four heavy duty Firestone tires and tubes, size 34 x 7 be purchased for the Fire Chief's car from Mr. Walker Gritis at a quoted price of $43.60.

And that Aldermen Baragar, Denning, Thompson, Safe and city engineer Chas. Mott be named as a special selling committee, and that the tapechiling of roads in the city be made at once, were also recommended.

Prospective Home Builders May Obtain Loans Under the Federal Gov't Housing Act

Insurance Companies Provide 80%, Sum Required to Build Houses

INTEREST RATE 5%

Belleville Added to List Through Efforts of Chamber of Commerce Directors

The advantages of the Dominion Government's Housing Act of 1936 are now available to citizens of Belleville who may desire to use the great assistance it affords in building houses for themselves. Announcement to this effect was made by Mr. E. F. Bernstein, President of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce, at the regular weekly meeting of the Directors of the Chamber on Tuesday evening.

For some time past the directors of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce have been investigating the operation of the Housing Act in other places and as a result their efforts that the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada and the Canada Life Assurance Company have agreed to include Belleville in the list of places where they will make loans for building purposes in accordance with the provisions of the Act.

It is anticipated that the great benefits of the Act will be taken advantage of by numerous persons in this city and that an impetus will be given to building operations and employment created for many workmen in the building trades.

By Way of Illustration

As an example as to how the Act works the following examples may be cited:

In order to build a house to cost $6,000.00 the person building is called upon to provide 20% or $1,000.00 which shall include the value of the lot and the Insurance company provides the 80% or $4,000.00 which includes 30% or $1,000.00 provided by the Dominion Government. The same ratio would apply to a house costing a lesser amount.

Thus a house to cost $3,000, the builder would have to provide $500, including a lot and the interest charges would be $15.70 monthly for twenty years. Houses costing up to $20,000 may be built on this plan with costs in proportion.

All Costs Included

The cost of construction is defined to include not only actual building costs—labor and materials —but also the cost of the land, legal expenses connected with the loan and other expenses such as architects' fees, etc., necessary to complete the house. The value of the land shall be the actual value of what it actually cost or at its appraised value, whichever is the lesser. All houses built under the Act must conform to standards set by the Government, and must be specially in which the house is to be erected must be acceptable to the lending company.

The rate of interest charged on building scheme and selling such house costing $6,000.00 the builder will be called upon to pay $32.15 per month, which amount includes repayment of the loan and interest charges. The period allowed for repayment is twenty years.

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce desires to extend every assistance it can to citizens who would like to take advantage of this building scheme and willing corporation may be obtained at the Chamber of Commerce office.

DASH FOR FREEDOM IS SHORT-LIVED

Used Dinner Knives to Unscrew Bolt-Latch of Cell Door

Using an ordinary dinner knife that had been brought into their cell with the evening meal, two imprisoned Toronto boys unscrewed the bolt-latch of the women's cell at the police station adjoining the City Hall door and walked to liberty through it well filled, about 9.45 p.m., 9.45 a.m. this morning. The lads, Howard Kennedy, 15, and Donald Farquhar, 14, were being held for Toronto police authorities after having run away from their respective Toronto homes on Tuesday.

The two lads' dash for freedom was short-lived, however, as they were soon recaptured by Plainclothes Constables Ernie Wright after a hectic chase through the district north of the City Hall.

The boys, when first questioned by C.N.R. police, gave as their names as Joseph and Stephen Farman, Montreal, but subsequent check-ups proved them to be from this city to be rno Toronto lads who had run away from home. They were given a substantial breakfast at the police station this morning consisting of bacon and eggs, toast and toast. On the tray brought in from a nearby restaurant were steel knives and forks. The lads stood on the end of their bolt-latch and worked up to unscrew the screw-bolts that were sunk through the cell door, holding the bolt in the house part. Once they managed to unscrew the bolts, all that was necessary was to pull the door open inwards, and the bolt remained in its catch-hole. The lads removed the bolts and set out of the police cells unnoticed, during the luncheon hour, and made prior to police court. Little attention was paid to them owing to the fact Chief Ellis had decided to send them home by transport if their parents or the Toronto police did not come for them today. "We had been keeping them for two days," explained the Chief as he added no word had been received from Toronto up to noon. The local department had been told their parents would come to Belleville and claim their wayward sons.

As soon as they were missed, the information was relayed to the provincial and local police. Through the medium of radio station CJB Sergeant Hoath contacted the police car in which Plainclothes Constables Fred Izard was patrolling with the result that the driver hastened to the east end C.P.R. yard and there saw the youths perched on top of a box car. When the boys saw the officer coming they climbed down from their lofty hiding place and fled in a hasty retreat northward. They were soon captured.

Their second arrival at the police station brought them a severe reprimand and they were locked securely locked in the steel cells in the men's corridor. Shortly after noon, however, the strains of singing were heard coming from that cell block and investigations revealed the boys seemed quite at home and were again singing "The Pitcher's Song" with gusto.

"Aw, we was tired of sticking around that police station waiting for something to happen," added young Kennedy.

"You're in the hands of a MacDonald."

His sense of humor as sharp as ever, even after staring at death for days, Dr. Robertson said:

"No that's it. I'm a Robertson not a Campbell."

Eyestrain and general nervous fatigue are almost inseparable "partners in crime". Plenty of light and responsible sight-counsel will remedy what drugs or "bargain glasses" never have, and never can. Beware especially of the latter form of bait-advertising which the present law now permits; bearing in mind the fact that glasses are only as valuable as the diagnosis upon which they were based.

POLICE COURT

Edmond Saunders, 24, and Eric Palmer, 18, the two Montreal youths who were arrested in Bellville last Saturday in possession of a bicycle, which had been stolen by them in Ottawa a week prior, pleaded guilty to charges of the theft of a bicycle, when arraigned before Magistrate M. J. Beller, Tuesday.

"These lads have been in' bail awaiting trial for over a week, your Worship," asked Crown Attorney R. O. Donnan, K.C., prior to imposing out of town sentences.

Learning the stolen bicycle returned to its rightful owner in Ottawa, His Worship sentenced the accused youths to one week in jail, dating from the time of their arrest last week.

"You are at liberty to go now, as you have served your sentence already," stated Mr. Donnan, as he warned them to get out of town before sundown.

Laughing as though it were more of a joke, the two youths left the court room and were last seen in public—That's a break, I thought we were going to get six months," Palmer whispered to Saunders, who only grinned back.

Two truancists, who gave their names as James Belcher and Chas. C. Collins, both of Toronto, pleaded guilty to trespassing on C.N.R. railway property. The men were sentenced to serve four days in jail, dating from the time of their arrest on Tuesday. The men were instructed to keep off railway property. They both thanked the court for the lenient view taken in their case, and promised to vacate the city and burn railway property during their travels.

A number of motorists were summoned to appear on various charges of alleged infractions of the Highway Traffic Act. One citizen pleaded guilty to driving a motor car without having first obtained an operator's license. "Two dollars and costs, next case," sternly reterial His Worship, the same. This was assumed another motorist, who operated his car with defective brakes. "Two dollars and costs," was the highways safe for motor traffic and until it is safe, no motorist to operate motor vehicles not equipped with dependable brakes," terminated the Bench.

EUGENE O'NEILL (Toronto)

Marmora, April 24—Following an illness of several years, Eugene O'Neill passed away at his home in Toronto on Tuesday, April 21st. Deceased was a son of the late Captain and Mrs. John O'Neill and was born in Marmora and lived here as a boy and as a youth he lived in Marmora and his estimable qualities ensured him a wide circle of friends. For a few years he was freight agent at the Marmora C.N.R. freight shed under the supervision of Mr. D. E. Bell. Later he went to Bancroft where he married Miss Wilhelmina Kennedy who survives him. For the recent years, due to ill health, he resided in Toronto. The late Mr. O'Neill is survived by one son, Mr. William Hughes of Belleville and one brother, Mr. Frederick O'Neill, another brother John predeceased him a few years ago. The funeral took place on Thursday afternoon proceeding from the noon-hour train from Toronto at Rosedale to the Sacred Heart Cemetery, Rev. J. J. Keeley officiating. The pall-bearers were Harry Dunlay, William Shannon, Joseph Murray, James Sullivan, John Jones and Percy Gray.

Washington, April 24 (CP) — Representative Eyerett M. Dirksen of Illinois today declared war against "the bureaucrats and crackpots and brutes admirals.

He made the charges in the statutes retreat from the city's pirks in the suburbs, and convert the space into automobile parking lots.

SCHOOL CADET CORPS PRAISED

Queen Alexandra Pupils Inspected by Capt. Fanet

The annual cadet inspection at Queen Alexandra School was held this morning with the usual pomp and dignity. Captain Fanet of Military Headquarters District No. 3, Kingston, was the inspecting officer and following the usual routine military manoeuvres, congratulated the corps upon their general ability. The conventional platoon and company drill preceded the grand march past and saluting of colors.

The cadet corps at Queen Alexandra School is under the tutorship of Mr. C. Wallace, assistant principal of the school. Captain Wm. Stone was in command with Lieutenants J. Hall and W. Leland, company commanders. The platoon commanders were Sergeants Roy Sagw and J. Calbury. The color party consisted of Sergeant Ray Walker, standard bearer, and Ken Johnson and Robt. Armitage, guards. During the parades and drills, the school bugle band ably supplied the music for the marching, which was also commented upon—by the inspecting officer. The Company Sergeant Major of the day was Sergeant Don Davies.

Following the inspection Captain Fanet congratulated the corps on its splendid work on the field. A short gallery of interested spectators that included pupils of the school, parents of the children, members of the Board of Education and interested citizens applauded the work of the corps, following the inspection, Rev. Major A. Beauchamp Payne spoke to the corps and the crowd on the value of school cadets in the training of Canadian boyhood, Mr. Geo. Ostrom, chairman of the School Board, also spoke and lead applause both the school body, declared the remainder of the day a holiday.

nesday afternoon restored their courage, and Dr. Robertson and Sheddick got down to work as they approached.

Dr. Robertson, still practising his profession in the pit, explained to Sheddick just what food would be best for two men who had been starving for ten days. They asked for virtually the same meal when they were taken to the emergency hospital at the surface.

After he had walked across the rescue platform and the doctor asked for fruit sugar, that of pears or peaches, Zaichkoff, toast saturated with butter, something to chew on and Old Scalding in another room.

The two talked back and forth for a long time, showing strength in their voices and the anxious doctors and nurses.

"Phillips dear," exclaimed Dr. Robertson as he met his wife, who had hurriedly watched the rescue workers for days.

"Sidie!" was her only reply.

The distinguished doctor's fine, long friend, Dr. Gaiha of Toronto, telephoned Dr. Robertson's mother in Halifax at the hospital and said:

"You're all right now, Eddie.

Trenton and District

Trenton, April 22.—(Special)—A local man appeared on a charge of speeding, intoxicated in a public place and was fined $10.00 and $6.25 costs. On default he will spend ten days in Belleville jail.

A local woman was found guilty of being drunk and paid a fine of $16.25.

A Toronto man pleaded guilty in writing of speeding on Highway No. 2 and was assessed $5.00 fine and $3.25 costs.

Thomas Simpson of R.R. No. 3 Brighton, appeared on a charge of operating his motor vehicle without an operator's permit and was fined $3.00 and $3.75 costs. The car, which was travelling on the west side of the road from Trenton struck me for first time, knocked me four feet then followed me and knocked me into the ditch" were the words that the complainant revealed in the court. "Although you state that you went to the doctor, was it necessary?" questioned H. D. Graham, K.C., lawyer for the accused. "No", was the reply of the complainant who stated that he did not strike the accused twice and that he was running at a very low rate of speed and although he noticed the complainant standing with his back to him talking to the man in the truck he thought that he could step aside when he was about to pass. He stated that he was just about level ,when he struck him and as soon as he hit him his car was stopped". He was asked if he hire his horn and the accuser replied "No". The accused's hired man who was riding along in the car at the time of the accident, when questioned if the accused had sounded his horn stated that he had not. Magistrate Butler said that the complainant should be sounded his horn. So the complainant paid a minimum of $10.00 and the costs in the court and had to pay the costs of the doctor "The reason, that the charge was suspended was because you use your truck in marketing", stated Magistrate Butler to the complainant.

Non-Support

A local man appeared on a charge of non-support. This case started on Nov. 5th 1935, and has been remanded several times. The accused has a wife and five small children at home and all he has handed his wife during the past three weeks is $18.00, stated Mr. Graham, lawyer who acted for the accused man's wife. The accused is an A-1 paperhanger but has been idle for a long time, declaring Mr. Graham. "When you get paid don't get drunk and get fined", asked Magistrate Butler as to have some enough of you down there", stated the Magistrate, "just if have quit drinking." stated the accused. "Phew!" exclaimed Magistrate, "not Friday", was the complainant's reply. An agreement was entered into under Sec. 34, 1 of the Criminal Code was drawn up by Mr. Graham, K.C. that should the accused fail to comply with the agreement he will be sentenced to six months in jail. He will pay ten dollars a week to the court for the care of his wife and family.

Travelling on Wrong Side

A man of R.R. No. 6, Belleville, was fined $10.00 and 10c costs for travelling on the wrong side of the road, while proceeding past in the where-abouts of the Old Dominion Bridge. Although there were no cars travelling towards him, the Highway Traffic officer stated that if such had been the case he might have caused an accident as he thought that it would be a good lesson for him to learn. The man was being married next day.

Bicycle Recovered

Ma and poo was taking a walk before supper and - I said, Ma poo do you realise this is still Re kind to Animals Week? Have you been kind to any today? I said.

No by gollies I dont believe I have, pop said. In fact I was even a little hard on my poor dumb stenographer. How about yourself, he said, and I said, I haven't either, I kind of forgot. Let's be kind to a dog if we see one looking necessery I said.

Suppose we make it a horse, pop said, and we started to have a debate about which was most kind friends, dogs or horses, me saying dogs, saying, O wherever look at the record. Remember, they find frozen travelers in the Alps Mountains and shoe them the way back. Horse for a useful deed? I said.

I admit its pretty useful, provided the travelers aren't too frozen, pop said. And anyway that's a point for me because a Saint Bernard is almost a horse, he said, and I said, Well then a pony is almost a dog, and ponies are the nicest horses and can do the most tricks, so that's a point for me.

Granted, pop said. But you never heard of dogs pulling fire wagons, did you? he said, and I said, No sir, but they pull fishers on sleds, and if a horse tried that it would be dangerous.

That's true, and horses aren't even allowed to pull fire engines in these modern times, the poor beasts, which all goes to show that horses would exactly love to be each best friends, but they're not given half a chance, so you can't accuse the poor horse of antipathy, pop said. By all means let's be kind to a horse, he said.

And we started to look for one any we couldn't find any, nothing being passed on standing still except trucks and automobeels, and finaly we had to compromise on a little brown dog sitting on its top step and looking as if it wished it was in instead of out, and we both patted him at the head and rang the doorbell for him.

A PRINCESS'S BIRTHDAY

The world follows the important doings of the little British Princess Elisabeth, who this week has celebrated the tenth anniversary of her birthday. It is interesting news to the people that on that day she tried out a new bicycle, the gift of her grandmother Queen Mary. The Princess, second-in-line to the throne of the Empire, also went for a ride on her favorite pony Peggy and rode with her father the Duke of York in the new stream-lined electric motor which he has given her as a birthday gift. Her "Uncle David" known to the big world as King Edward Eighth, sent her a gold-mounted riding crop bearing her crest and it took her twenty minutes to find it.

Birthdays are birthdays even to little Princesses who may some day be rulers. She and her sister the Princess Margaret Rose had no long school lessons that day and Princess Elisabeth had breakfast with her parents and the Queen in honour of the birthday and was hostess at a party to which she had the privilege of inviting guests. She served generous slices of birthday cake to the older guests including her parents, uncles and aunts, and later entertained children of her own age in her model home. For this party she made the tea and buttered the toast herself.

It is not amazing that the eyes of the people are on this little girl, who is being trained against the time which may some day come when she may become ruler. Her child's delight on such an occasion can be understood by the world which wishes the little lady well and many happy birthdays.

MUSSOLINI TEMPTED

Mussolini at the present moment appears to be riding high in favor, even the god of war appearing to favour him. He will be tempted to take full advantage of the situation. Talking with the grandiloquence to which the world is accustomed, he refuses to treat with Ethiopia and he has become very domineering toward the nation he calls his enemy. Perhaps it is even the god of war tempting him to further extravagance of action. His nation has fought a poor example of a war against an unenlightened and unequipped people and he has blasted his way through this barbarian land calling himself a crusader of civilization even as his fliers choke the poor natives with poison gas as an example of what an enlightened modern at war may do. At least that is what the poor Ethiopians will understand by the poison raids.

Is the war working out to his favor? It seems so. He has used modern scientific engineering to advance his armies. But what has he got even if he gets all or is allowed to keep all he claims to have conquered? A land perhaps but even an Italian would scarcely want to live in it. He may send many there but not willingly will they go as pioneers of a new Italy for the surplus population of the old Italy. They may go but he will probably have to deport them from Italy. And that may not be a guess far from the mark. Eritrea which has been Italian for forty years claims no more than 4,000 Italians. What will Ethiopia claim in willing exiles a few years hence? Italians like cities, they do not prefer to live in waste places or in the open country. Unless the race takes a change of a very radical nature which is not to be expected, Italians who go or are forced to go to Ethiopia after it is conquered will still prefer Rome and the other Italian centres of civilization to the boiling clime where Haile Selassie's peoples dwell.

Mussolini must satisfy the Italians that they have inherited the mantle of Julius Caesar in him, or his hold may become slightly tottery. Even if he can convince the people of his land that this was one of the greatest conquests the world has ever known and can get rid of excess Italian population in some way, the rest of the world will hold its tongue in its cheek as it hears him talk of the great war against Abyssinia.

It still looks to the rest of the world as if the war were just a gamble to hold power on the part of Il Duce. And the political gamble runs a gigantic risk. He has to be a master magician to convince the people against what they will ultimately see. He has stirred events in the world by his campaign against the backward empire of the Ethiopians.

I was always an early riser. Happy the man who is! Every morning day comes to him with a virgin's love, full of bloom and freshness. The youth of nature is contagious like the gladness of a happy child.—Bulwer.

Let the day have a blessed baptism my giving your first waking thoughts into the bosom of God.—The first hour of the morning is the rudder of the day.—H. W. Beecher.

FREIGHT YARD AT MIDNIGHT

Have you ever watched the fascinating shower
Of signal-lights across the yard at night,
The weird red flares and green where rails engage
Or, fanwise, spread away like giant thrums?
Heard ebon monsters pant and purr their power,
Puff skyward ruddy flames and wisps of white,
Or, roaring, bulk their shackles in a rage,
And cough and grunt and beat like devil-drums?

Have you ever heard the wildest melody
That man, cold iron's master, ever made;
The shrill, protesting agony of steam
Against the sluggish drag and burning goad?
Or felt, perhaps, in this mad symphony,
This episode in music grandly played,
Titanic slaves were struggling in a dream
To break away and seek the open road?

DRAEGERMEN ARE NO. 1 PUBLIC HEROES NOW. Practically unknown before the Moose River Mines sensation the Draegermen now are known around the world for amazing courage, strength and stamina. The Draegermen are the hardy Nova Scotia miners who worked on hands and knees in the narrow tunnel practically clawed out with their hands, passing piece by piece of rock and dirt back to their comrades to make room for further excavation so that they could reach and rescue the men imprisoned in an old shaft by a cave-in and slowly dying from exposure and lack of nourishment. Draegermen are a race apart, they are miners selected and trained for the most difficult and dangerous work underground, such as fighting fires, exploring collapsed sections, penetrating fume-filled galleries, etc.

"He gets his name from the Draeger equipment he wears and his knowledge of the course of training that accompanies its use, Draeger machines and first-aid treatment. Equipment consists of a tank of oxygen and a special valve that feeds the gas to the wearer. He must learn how to breathe in time with it or he chokes or stifles. He also must learn how to walk and work without speeding up his physical re-action too much.

The Draegerman puts in one full day's training each month with his equipment and his pay is six dollars a day while on this emergency work, one dollar more than ordinary miner's pay. He risks his life in any emergency which may arise under ground for the pitiful sum of one dollar a day. Ken MacTaggart, Mail and Empire correspondent at Moose River, describes these men tersely as follows:

"These men, coal miners all, seem like a separate race. Without an exception they are lean to the point of emaciation. They are mostly young though most are married. They are all sahen-faced or even yellowish. Their eyes are sunken or, at least, always puckery. Most of them are thin-lipped and rather unemotional, excepting those that have obviously French heritage."

Without doubt the News Reels in the movie theatres will soon show us exactly what these brave Draegermen look like.

x x x x

I HOPE THEY GET THE MEN OUT TODAY so there'll be a little more sleep in our house tonight, said a Belleville citizen, last night of the two days of live suspension. Said he, "My wife sits up all night at the radio, listening to the broadcasts from Moose River and there is darn little sleep for any of us." He's not his wife.

MAJOR BOWES AMATEUR HOUR UNITS which have been touring the United States and making much money for the Major as well as controversy have Canadian rivals now in Jack Arthur's Canadian Amateurs on Parade. Jack is a well known Toronto theatre man, and he has uncovered quite a lot of very promising amateur entertaining talent which he is gathering in units to send out on the road to show the folks how Young Canada can cavort behind the footlights after training by such a showman as Jack Arthur, whose talent is such that he once won the attention and an offer from the Great Ziegfield.

The conductor was fed up. People kept asking him ridiculous questions. Finally a pert-faced girl approached and said: "Conductor can you give me two nickles for a dime?"

"Of course," said the conductor, "Any particular dates you'd like?"

Dr. Robertson Walks from His Mine Prison Unaided and Smiling

Bearded, begrimed, weak—but smiling—Dr. D. E. Robertson emerges from the depths of the Moose River mine that was his prison for 342 hours, walking with little assistance from sturdy miners, who had dug like heroes to effect a rescue path. The dramatic scene as Dr. Robertson walked back into the world that had nearly slipped away from him and his companion in the mine trap, Alfred Scadding, is vividly shown in this picture, flown by fast aeroplane from the scene of the rescue. Dr. Robertson has just reached the mouth of the timbered shaft, and tired but triumphant rescue workers reach down to help him out. In remarkable physical condition considering the long days of entombment without nourishment, in a cold, wet cavern, he climbed the narrow tunnel under his own strength. Reaching the surface, he smiled at the cheering crowd and waved to his rescuers as they placed him upon a stretcher and rushed him to the emergency hospital. At the right an official is holding a blanket ready to wrap it around the released man for warmth and to protect his eyes from the sudden light.

Scadding Carried on Stretcher from Rescue Shaft

TORN BY SUSPENSE, WOMEN WATCH RESCUERS—Torn by suspense the one already widowed by the relentless rock barrier, the other alternately buoyed up by hope and wrecked by fear, Mrs. D. E. Robertson and Mrs. Herman Magill wait and watch at the shaftheal while miners dig frantically to reach the tavern where the Toronto men were trapped. Herman Magill was already dead but Dr. Robertson, along with Alfred Scadding, his timekeeper, lived and waited. Their wait, and the wait of the nerve-torn women, was not in vain. Miners reached the rock prison, released Scadding and Robertson, brought out the body of Magill.

Freed from their living tomb deep in the Magill Gold Mine at Moose River, after more than 342 hours of imprisonment, C. Alfred Scadding and Dr. D. E. Robertson showed remarkable physical strength considering their ordeal. They are pictured here as they were carried from the shaftheal in a stretcher by booted and tired miners and rushed to the emergency hospital for treatment. Laborers who had toiled heroically in a frantic effort to rescue the men lined the path as the stretcher-bearers pass the form of the mine's time-keeper covered by blankets to warm him and protect his eyes from light.

Four Y.P.U. Present Fine Play Here Stirling, April 24—Playing before a capacity audience in the church parlors last night, the Foxboro Presbyterian Church, the Foxboro Dramatic Club of the Presbyterian Church of that place carried off one of the finest plays given in Stirling for some time "Great Aunt" a three-act comedy drama written by Pauline Hunter. Judging by the applause giving plenty of scope to amateur actors with a flair for the part, it ended with the last curtain and possessing a dry rural humour that strikes on the funny bone, Sophie created by "Hepsy" a Peggy O'Neil type of youngster from the hearts of the audience from the rising of the curtain, with the clever vivacious laughing eyes and tomboy mannerism and speech which now and in a most natural manner. The play is one in which does not permit any poor acting and those who were responsible for casting the characters made sure that everyone selected for a part possessed that natural amount of real acting ability. The drastic change from the rich mansion to the poor poetry type farm house in the back country with all its rural atmosphere in the first act, to Fifth Avenue Society homes in the second act and back to the farm again in the final act is a most decided and difficult change to make from rural dialect and manner to the mannerisms of Fifth Avenue, but the entire cast group of artists made that change without the slightest hitch, every one a star in any part. It would be unfair to name any one as being superior to the other. But Miss Peggy Ketcheson took advantage of the particularly bright part given to her and made a great hit. The play was directed by her, and assisted of Foxboro and the carefully chosen group of actors who characterized their part in a superb fashion were as follows:

Lemuel Crockett (a misery farmer) Herbert Wallace.

Mrs. Crockett (his wife) Miss V. Peacock.

Elizabeth Crockett (his daughter) Katherine Moore.

Hepsibah Crockett (another daughter) Miss Peggy Ketcheson.

Hiram Crockett (his son) Alex. Thompson.

Franklin Arthuza (a business man) Hoy. Hill.

Miss Lucy Raggles (a school teacher) Beatrice Day.

Evelyn Newcomb (bashful maid) Mrs. Hill.

Andy Hobbs (country boy) Grant Longwell.

Jeffrey Bridley (a New Yorker) Roy Bartlett.

Miss Bridley (his wife) Mrs. H. Longwell.

Constance Loring (their niece) Miss E. McLaren.

Hora (the maid) Mrs. Fayo Reid.

Director: Rev. and Mrs. Hill.

This play has been to five other places and by popular demand will be staged again at the Foxboro church. All those who saw it at Stirling will agree that the Foxboro Presbyterian Young People's Society have just reason for being proud of their dramatic group in giving such a fine presentation of a production which is by no means easy. The church was well filled and the proceeds beyond expectations. The play was presented under the auspices of the St. Andrew's Guild of Stirling.

Weddings

KEARY—BEDFORD

The marriage took place on Monday, April 13th, 1936, of Miss Minnie Bedford of Auckland, and Mr. Charles Robinson Keary, of Liverpool, England, the ceremony being performed at the Parsonage by Rev. Thos. R. Hall, rector of St. John's Church. The bride was attired in a grey check swagger suit with navy blue accessories.

GREEN—BEEMER

Miss Virginia Bremer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence H. Bremer, of Saganaca Road, Bronxville, was married recently to Dr. Charles Stanley Green, Jr., son of Dr. and Mrs. Charles Stanley Green, of 427 Palisade Avenue, Yonkers. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. Mulford L. Sayre, in the Church of the Ascension, Mount Vernon, and a breakfast for members of both families and intimate friends was given at the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. Edgar P. Bissell, of New York, attended the couple.

Mr. and Mrs. Green went to Washington on their wedding trip, and will reside in Princeton, where Mr. Green is a graduate of the class of 1929. The bride attended Bennett School, Millbrook, and Smith College. Dr. Green was graduated from Phillips Exeter Academy and attended Princeton College, at Clinton, N.Y. He was graduated from the Kirkville School of Osteopathy in Missouri, and practices in Princeton.

Dr. Stanley Green is the grandson of the late Mr. David Green and of Mrs. Elsa Thaler of Glen Allbough. Mrs. Green is a granddaughter of those people, who through year after year of long residence in Gallipolis have always looking forward to better things for their town, because of their faith is marvellous and we might well take a lesson from them. Mr. Bissell is a son of the late Mr. Bissell who made one farm a thriving community and who by his own hard work and his own ingenuity gathered around him a group of men who might help to give of their own ideas in need and Rev. Howard appealed to the girls and any one who might help to give of their own ideas in need and Rev. Howard appealed to the girls and any one who might help to give of their own ideas in need and Rev. Modern Writers Face Reality Miss Lawrence Tells Women

Canadian Club Hears Author Speak on New Trends in Thinking

Miss Margaret Lawrence, well known Canadian writer, of Toronto, visited the Women's Canadian Club yesterday afternoon and delighted the members with a stirring talk on newer trends in the art of thinking. The charming young author was introduced to the Club by the President, Mrs. H. Williams.

In her interesting address, Miss Lawrence discussed the question of evolution in modes of thinking revealed during the past ten or fifteen years and showed the result of this change in various fields of thought.

This change may be expressed in the phrase "Potential and modern," today it is why". Today our approach to problems is not so much theoretical and we have come to a closer understanding of individualized human beings," said Miss Lawrence.

The savage mind if focused on what is important with the mystery of the natural phenomena about him, was the civilized. But remember, it is only for the past one hundred years that women have been saying anything."

Fiction writing comes naturally to women who reveal themselves in their characters. They (like to) fiction as a fragile, but they can pierce their camouflage and learn their real thoughts. So, they dare the endeavours to "unbabble what it that women are like? In this first era of intensive writing.

Miss Lawrence pointed out, the ardent feminist, for years of study have made one fact paramount, there is a world of difference between the mind of the woman and that of man, because of this difference it is of greatest importance that women continue their struggle to be equally represented with men in public affairs.

The appreciation of the club was graciously expressed by Mrs. Williams after which tea was served and members had the opportunity of meeting the guest speaker.

Some Train Times Will be Changed

Five trains only are affected by the change in railway time tables which go into force on Sunday, April 26th, for the first time this spring. These are:

No. 17 for Toronto will leave North Station 4.10 a.m.

No. 11 for Peterboro and Lindsay will leave North Station 4.00 a.m.

No. 22 for Montreal will leave South Station 1.50 a.m.

No. 21 for Toronto will leave South Station 4.05 a.m.

Other train times are not affected.

TWEED C. W. L.

The annual meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in the K. of C. Hall on Tuesday evening, April 7th, with about forty members present. Mrs. D. Morrison, president, was in the chair.

Reports and letters were read by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. P. Brennan, the financial report giving a complete and satisfactory resume of the year's work.

The chaplain, Very Rev. Dean O'Riordan, who honored the meeting by his presence, gave a splendid address on the aims and possibilities of the League and congratulated the ladies on the good work they had accomplished. A vote of thanks was moved by the president which was carried by a standing vote.

The election of officers then took place as follows: Past President, Mrs. K. J. Quinn; Past President, Mrs. D. Morrison; 1st Vice-President, Mrs. O'Leary; 2nd Vice-President, Mrs. Elliott; 3rd Vice-President, Mrs. McDonnachie; Secretary-Treasurer, Mrs. P. Brennan (re-elected); Councillors, Mrs. M. Shea, Mrs. Champagne, Mrs. M. Trudeau, Mrs. John Murphy, Mrs. Ed Rivers and Mrs. Anne Trudeau.

Mrs. Morrison, retiring president, was presented with an address and a lovely silver flower basket with a bouquet of roses, on behalf of the executive and members, in appreciation of her unfailing efforts in the interests of the League. She also received a personal gift from Mrs. M. Shea.

Mrs. Morrison thanked the ladies for their kindness and their cooperation during her two years of office.

Mrs. Brennan, too, was remembered with a gift, for which she expressed her thanks.

BRIDGE STREET W. M. S.

The Easter Thank Offering meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of Bridge Street United Church was held in the form of a supper meeting which was well attended. Members of the Ladies' Evening Auxiliary and the Junior Mission Circle served at the tables which were decorated with daffodils and tall yellow candles. During supper, greetings were received by Mrs. K. Hill from John Street Auxiliary, Mrs. J. Orchard from Holloway Street; Mrs. S. Gay from Foxboro; Mrs. A. Campbell from Holloway Mission Circle and Mrs. Bailey from Tabernacle Mission Circle. After the tables were cleared, a splendid program was given.

Miss Lillian McCuaig read the Scripture lesson and Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn led in earnest prayer. The Thank Offering was then received by the Misses Audrey Proctor and Margaret Davidson, which amounted to $118.50. Fifty dollars of this was a donation for a cot in loving memory of Mrs. J.H.P. Young by her daughters, Mrs. W. Holmes and Mrs. Madeline Young.

The President, Mrs. J. Semple, then in a few well chosen remarks, introduced the speaker of the evening, Mrs. (Rev.) Duncan McLeod, of Furness.

Mrs. McLeod gave a vivid word picture of a non-Christian home in Chili land and said their religion was not a satisfying religion to them, but one of fear and superstition. Mrs. F. Husband, convenor of Mission Studies, then thanked the speaker for her splendid address which was voiced by Miss Pearl Campbell on behalf of the organizations present.

Mrs. J. Gregg sang very sweetly, "I Was For Me."

Mrs. R. D. P. Davison and Mrs. F. Houston had arranged a candle-lighting service by the following girls of the Circle which was beautiful and impressive: Audrey Proctor, Elizabeth Davidson, Dorothy Cain, Edna Gilroy, Margaret Griffin, Mary Davison, Margaret Houston, Helen Anderson, Dorothy Fox, Betty Anderson, Doris Pine, Mina Howard, Doris Juby, Evelyn Tice, June Stewart, Norma Ketcheson.

TORONTO OWNED CARS BADLY DAMAGED

Two Toronto owned automobiles were badly damaged about the body during a motor collision that happened two o'clock mail of Belleville at Bell's Crock shortly after 2.00 p.m. last evening.. Both drivers escaped without serious injury, however.

According to information given by Traffic Officer Sam Evrins, who investigated, an automobile being driven westerly by Louis Wilson, 372 Brunswick Ave, Toronto, was sideswiped by another motor car, being driven in the opposite direction by S. S. Wilson, also of Toronto. The accident happened near the narrow bridge at Bell's Creek. The sides and body of both vehicles were badly damaged during the impact.

'MR. SAGE' ACTOR CALLED TO STAND

"Did you hear any reactions to the first broadcast?" Mr. Martin asked.

"Yes, a telephone call advising that Mr. Sage had been taken to hospital before doing any further broadcasting. I could not end up my alley."

"Were you sick of the whole thing after the first broadcast?"

"I think ever so slightly."

Then Mr. Lucas and Mr. Martin proceeded, and the committee rocked with laughter.

"Shall I have to take another oath now?" Mr. Lucas asked.

"I can see you are an actor, alright," Martin observed.

Then Mr. Lucas said, was that of an actor hired to do a job. He preferred not to mention the name of the person who telephoned him, and he was not interested.

At the second broadcast of the "Sage" program the then Prime Minister, Mr. R. B. Bennett, was present, Mr. Lucas said in answer to a question.

Mr. Massey asked the witness if it were a fact that Mr. Bennett had hoped to get the job— that's all."

He was supervisor of station under the last "Sage" broadcast, was transmitted October 11, over the Canadian National Railways but had nothing to do with arrangements. He had been out of work from August 31, 1935 until September 17 when appointed by the commission.

He had not participated in any "Sage" broadcast after last month which was on September 14, Mr. Lucas said, and had no knowledge of the personnel of the remaining sketches.

On Monday, Sept. 16, Mr. Lucas said, he had notified the Gibbons Company he would not continue in the role of Mr. Sage. Defence Minister Mackenzie said he had taken that action because "I didn't think it fit in the kind of work I wanted to do." He had been paid by the commission as from Sept. 1 to Sept. 30, Mr. Lucas said at the end of the month.

Harry Sedgwick, manager of station CFRB said no political broadcasts had originated in his studio. All Conservative party time on CFRB was booked by the Radio Commission, Ottawa by wire, later confirmed by letter from W. F. Powell of the Commission.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Industrial shares felt their way cautiously at Toronto Stock Exchange this afternoon. The liquor shares displayed a little more courage than other groups By early afternoon, however, the uncertainty of the interested leaders reflected the mild recovery in the Stock Exchange.

Gains of 1-4 to 1 were registered by the distillery issues and Bell Telephone, B.O. Power A, and A recovered 1-4. to 1-4 and Consolidated Smelters advanced 1-2 points. With the news out about the dividend for Union Gas, that issue reacted nearly a point. Other soft spots in the utility group were Bell Telephone, B.O. Power A, and Shawinigan.

he was delivering a speech over a national network that night.

It was brought out by reference to the fact that he himself had been speaking over he radio just before the "Sage" broadcast.

Paid by Gibbons

Mr. Lucas said he had been paid by the Gibbons Company.

The Radio Commission had written him Sept. 18, Mr. Lucas said, appointing him supervisor of station. He had not applied for the position nor had he discussed it with any members of the commission.

Mr. Just came to you out of a blue sky," suggested Mr. Ryan (Lib., Saint John, Albert).

"No, the sky was not very blue that day," witness retorted. He had hoped to get the job— that's

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Many traders were on a side line and mining share prices were allowed to drift in the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange this afternoon. There was a dearth of bids. Consolidated Sand, Lebel, Moneta, Kenasis, Famour, Central Patricia and Wasa registered losses of 1 to 7 cents each. Base metals and silvers were slow and steady.

Little activity appeared to be waiting for Wall Street to carry further Wednesday's advance or to definitely stronger and trading dwindled to less than half the usual volume through the morning and was showing no pick-up this afternoon.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 24 (AP)—Dyrsdale and an assortment of industrial specialties led a quiet rally in today's Stock Market.

The list, however, moved by fits and starts and the closing was the most lame was at an extremely slow pace.

American Can was up 3 points and Chrysler and Lowe's about 2 each, while Allied Chemical and Dyestuff, Johns Manville, Du Pont, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Distillers Corp. and U. S. Steel rose 1.

Stocks unchanged to off a point included Consolidated Edison, U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, American Tel. & Tel., Consolidated Oil, Simmons, Santa Fe and Westinghouse, N.Y., Central.

The late tone was mixed. Transfers approximated 2,000,000 shares.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 24—Butter prices at Montreal were again unchanged under yesterday, creamery receipts of fresh-made butter causing the ungrad tendency in the market. Cheese, poloizes and poultry were steady. The egg market was firm, with some rising going on. Receipts for the day were posted at the Board of Trade as 1,280 cases of eggs, 114 boxes of butter.

The butter market was generally 31c to 31 1-2 to No. 1 grass re-graded in cartons and 30c to 30½c in bulk. Fresh-churned 1-4c less. Ungraded fresh butter was selling at wholesale at 29c to 29½c to store level.

At the egg market graded shipments ranged from 20c to 21c for A-large, being mainly 20 1-2c; 19 1-2 to 19c for A-medium; 18c to 18 1-2c for B, and 17c to 17 1-2c for C.

King Visits Serg'ts' Mess

By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 24 (CP Cable) — Britain's bachelor King today paid a surprise visit to the married sergeants of the Coldstream Guards as Windsor.

Following a formal inspection of the first battalion of the Coldstream Guards, the King and his review order dress, expressed a wish to see the Sergeants' mess and the married quarters.

In the Sergeants' mess he found Major Sir Gerald Wollaston, Sergeant-Major Syrett, preparing dinner. After apologizing for the intrusion, the King chatted with Mrs. Syrett for some minutes.

"I shall be spoiling lunch if I stay longer," he said, bidding good-bye.

KING FAUD I SERIOUSLY ILL

Rush Specialist From Europe to Attend Ailing Monarch

(Copyright, 1936, by the Havas News Agency)

Cairo, April 24.—(CP-Havas) — The possibility of a regency in Egypt because of the illness of King Fuad I. has been discussed among physician—one of them hastily summoned from Europe —were flocking today to the bedside of King Fuad who believed threatened with serious illness.

In the event of King Fuad's illness becomes serious, Prince Mohammed Ali, the King's brother, may head a regency in his stead, the control of the Government's political observers believed. The Prince would be assisted by a council of notables.

Premier Ali Maher Pasha, however, formally denied reports that a regency was being instituted.

ALBANY SENATORS MAY BECOME DARK HORSE OF RACE

Just So-So Team on Paper But Getting Good Hurling

LEAFS LOSE AGAIN

Better Get Dragerman to Pull Team Out of Cellar

(By The Associated Press)

Largely because of their uncertain prospects at the start of the season, Albany Senators are threatening to assume the same position in the 1936 International League race, that Syracuse Chiefs held a year ago.

The club's began the 1935 campaign with practically nothing and wound up with a team good enough to win the Governors' Cup. Albany, distinctly a so-so team on paper, already is doing better than Syracuse did at the same stage last year and with a little added strength here and there may become distinctly dangerous. The Senators have good hitting with some excellent spring pitching to hang up three straight victories and gain a berth in the first division.

The all-around effectiveness of J. Millard Hayes, Senator hurler, featured the second day of the season, when the weather permitted all eight International League clubs to play. Taking his cue from his pitching predecessors, Al Benton and Bob Burke, Hayes pitched a six hit game, marred only by wildness, and treated himself to a perfect day at the plate with four blows.

All six Hayes hits were made in the first four innings, while most of the eight walks off Hayes were granted later. The flinger, two runs behind, took matters into his own hands in the third inning, drove in two runs and scored a third himself. Kelley sent home the winning tally with a double in the fifth.

First Royal Defeat

The first Montreal defeat of the season, which dropped the champion Royals into second place behind the still-triumphant Newark Bears, and the first Syracuse victory were other high spots of the day.

The Royals went down before the Baltimore Orioles 7-3 as Jim Bivin gave them only seven blows, including Bill Dodd' homer, while the Oriole cloulers combed Don French, Phil Hennigs and George Granger for 15 assorted wallops.

Newark's sensational rookie, Al Piechota, pitched the Bears into first place with a four-hit, 3-0 shutout in Toronto. It was Piechota's third victory and the seventh in succession for Newark. The youngster was in trouble only once, when he gave three passes in the eighth. The Bears bunched five of their six hits off Bob Weiland in third, fifth and fourth frames, to score all their runs, Piechota starting the opening rally with a single.

Syracuse, beaten in two starts, came through to trim Toronto Leafs 5-4 in a 22-hit, 10-walk scramble. Of five fingers who worked for the two teams, only Ray Starr, second Syracuse pitcher, was effective, giving one hit in the last three innings. Ballgroup and the Syracuse let the hitting pace with three out of four, driving in four runs.

ARENA — BELLEVILLE

TUESDAY, APRIL 28th

A Queensbury A.C. Card. Jack Corcoran, Promoter and Matchmaker

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Tonight is the night the players' committee, consisting of Roy Fox, Alex Taylor and Johnnie Kerr, make their report back to the representatives of the four local service clubs relative to the available material that is at hand and who are keenly interested in playing senior baseball for Belleville in the C.O.B.L. this summer. Pre-meeting rumours are very gratifying, we understand.

If a team of as many "home brews" as possible can be added and local players are given an opportunity to show their wares on the local diamonds, the four local service clubmen, who have undertaken the responsibility to date, feel the players should not be denied the privilege of playing ball here. They also feel that Belleville should retain its standing in the C.O.B.L. As per usual, by George Lee, Kiwanis delegate, "We had pretty fair ball teams in Belleville in years past and the players were local boys who learned the game at home. What do you say, let's have a team next year for Belleville," predicted Mr. Lee.

Doubtless there is a lot of truth in Mr. Lee's statement. It is quite natural that Bellevillians are most keenly interested in the success of their own sons than the accomplishments of strangers. This brings us back to the old days when Freddie Goyer, Percy Mills, Walt Gerow, Wm. Weir, Joe Kelleher, Sammy Symons, the Casey lads, Al Meagher and other local players brought many a C.O.B.L. win to town, to say nothing of pennants. Those were the days when the fans took a personal interest in the team and attended the games, not only because the team was winning, but because the fans knew from childhood each and every player.

Matchmaker Jack Corcoran, after viewing Andy Moen's rough-house tactics in Belleville last Tuesday, decided Moen was just the man to tame The Unknown, so today we find Andy Moen, the Minneapolis mat-villain, signed to meet The Unknown in the main bout at the Arena next Tuesday night. Those to see Moen in action last week will readily agree he is a rough, tough customer and can portion it out. The question is, however, can he take it? Mr. Corcoran then went out and signed Steve Zoszuk, the "Polish Thumderbolt", to meet Al Dunlop, who made a decision in his bout with Irish Jack Donovan on Tuesday. These two bouts should just about provide what local fans desire in their wrestling—"plenty of action."

When the community at large has watched a local lad grow up in baseball there seems to be a more personal feeling in favour of that player, be it hockey, baseball or pling pong. The fans individually and collectively know the players by their nicknames in the old days it was always "Wicky" Preddie, Pecney, Old Sammy or Walt. One never heard the surnames of the players used or referred to by the then crowded grand stand. What baseball needs in Belleville is a closer relationship between the fans and the players. Bring that picture back into reminiscence and the baseball troubles will vanish into the thin air around these parts.

How many fans remember the first game played by the old Belleville Grass Tramps in the C.O.B.L. away back in 1912? Well, the "Sail Onders", as they were sometimes referred to at that time, made their C.O.B.L. debut at Cobourg on May 26th, 1912, and came home on the long end of a 9 to 7 victory. The game went 14 innings, however, before the Belleville boys won. Pervall started on the mound for Belleville, but was relieved by Freddie Goyer in the ninth at the Cobourg nine knotted the count, Freddie successfully came to the rescue and pitched the tide. On Wednesday, May 29th, Belleville fans saw their first C.O.B.L. fixture up at the old Fair Grounds, when Freddie Goyer and Ed "Schneider" Scott hooked up in a pitchers' battle with Peterboro winning 2 to 1. Those were the days when the fans knew the players personally and took a direct interest in the team's welfare. Why not revive that spirit and O. Henry inspired the first C.O.B.L. ball game ever played in Belleville.

Looking back over those old time days in baseball, Percy Mills, Harry Whalen and Purtell as pitchers at one time or another, Walt Gerow, Walt Gerow at first, Cap Smith and Al Meagher alternated at second, Vern Weir and short and Joe Kelleher third. In the outfield were boys from the Sammy Symons, Wicky Ross, Harry Pringle, Lazier Harry Mills came into the picture and we had Jig and Little Feeney to shout for and encourage. It's truly a wonderful human-period interest, personal contact period that we had in the days of the old Grass Tramps and the player.

Tonight rugby football exhibition fun arrives at Eastern Ontario will welcome to Belleville Mr. What Not Sports Editor and all who are football, along with Harold Mahaney, head of the O.R.F.U. There two learned men will give a short resume of the changes in the rugby football code, at the Y.M.C.A., along with a general talk on the coming season. The meeting is open to all and doubtless a full attendance is the answer will be present. Representatives from all of the clubs in the Lake Shore loop are expected.

ANDY MOEN WILL MEET "UNKNOWN"

This Main Bout Should Provide Plenty of Action.

Following sensational debut here last Tuesday, The Unknown has been signed for the main bout of next Tuesday's show at the Arena. The mysterious masked wrestler will wrestle Andy Moen, Minnesota State champion and following the remarkable display of all-round wrestling provided by the latter at Jack Corcoran's initial show at the arena, it really outstanding display of mat action is anticipated.

Moen, highly rated in the United States and a big card at Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, can be depended upon to extend the mask-ed wrestler mat perhaps beat him. That he has plenty of confidence in his own ability is shown by the fact, that he didn't hesitate for an instant to accept. The Unknown's mat stipulation that the bout be arranged on a winner-take-all basis. He has the cash and wants to back up his speed and wrestling skill and it may be that the masked one will find that he has caught a tartar.

A new star will be introduced in the semi-final for Steve Zoszuk, who is known as the "Polish Thunderbolt", will appear against Al Dunlop, the rugged and much-improved Canadian heavyweight. Zoszuk, who hails from New Prague, Minnesota, has just returned from a successful campaigning in California and other western points.

Buffalo Joe, Mexican Indian, will be in the preliminary against Antoine Parkin, the "Flying Frenchman" who always has advantage on the last program.

PLAYING MANAGERS IN MAJOR LOOPS MAKE LAST STAND

(By Alan Gould)

(Associated Press Sports Editor)

New York, April 24.—(AP)—The big League managers on the active list—score or less—still carry a slight majority vote in any gather-ing of this select company of master minds, but the campaign of 1936 looks like their last stand.

Including Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns, on the technical ground he is still available for pinch-hitting purposes, the margin is 9 to 7 over the bench-warming strategists. Even this is shrinking, three for the time being, Max Carey as Manager Joe Cronin of the Red Sox is out with a broken thumb, making it impossible for the playing picks to put their full strength on the field.

Cronin, nursing 30, is the youngest of the playing managers who have occupied dominating places in the last half dozen years. The others range in age from Mickey Cochrane's 33 to Ramsey's 50. They have had from a dozen to 20 years of big League service so it is not surprising to discover most of them prepared either to end their regular active year or share their jobs on the field with younger men.

Bill Terry of the New York Giants' assigns to quit. He climbed a first-class understudy, Sam Leslie, in a winter trade but every time Memphis Bill steps out on the field he happens to be the hardest hitting and best fielding first sacker in the National League.

Playing days are numbered for three other National League pilots, Charley, Grimm of the champion Cubs, Frankie Frisch of the Cardinals, Cardinals and Pie Traynor of the Pittsburgh Pirates.

Jimmy Dykes, boss of the Chicago White Sox seems to have the secret of long playing life. He started his 19th season as third baseman.

Cochrane, although handicapped for the time being by an eye ailment, figures to catch at least ten games for the champion Tigers. Jimmy Wilson, 36-year-old catcher-manager of the Phillies, also is on the active list.

Need One Good Hurler On Washington Club

New York, April 24.— (AP) — Shrewd Clark Griffith, manager of the Washington Senators, says his team would be a cinch for the first division if the Senators could find he had one more good pitcher.

He maintained that stand yesterday in a cogout that sounded like the gripes many an ex-hospital ac-nouns and sneezes of the players rung out.

"The pitching problem is perhaps the most acute one we have to contend with," said Griffith. "That third with Hollyrood splitting the pail.

Brevity Picked To Win Derby by 5 of 12 Jocks

(By Orlo Robertson)

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York, April 24.—(AP)—The boys who ride 'em favor Brevity to win the Kentucky Derby but by no such margin as the trainers pave the J. Widener colt.

Five of twelve jockeys, many of whom will ride in the race, selected Brevity in the Associated Press annual poll or leading riders. The trainers voted seven in five for the future book favorite.

Hal Price Headley's Hollyrood, beaten in his only start this year received the votes of two riders. The other five ballots were split at one each among Morton L. Schwartz' Bold Venture, William Woodward's Granville, Teufel Bros' the Wheatley Stable, W. S. Kilmer's Mog Reign and the filly from Mrs. Ethel V. Wars' Milky Way Farms.

Besides Wayne Wright, who will ride Bold Widener Aon, jockeys picking Brevity are Johnny Gilbert, Mack Garner, Jimmy Hinker and Herb Lindberg.

Garner, who won the classic with a Calumet colt two years ago, reserved the right, however, to switch his selection to Med Reigh if the Churchill Downs' racing strip is muddy, May 2. Under such conditions he favors Brevity would be third with Hollyrood splitting the pair.

Very often players fail to get the most out of practice because they use the wrong club. Most of the time spent on the practice ground should be given to imparting your swing. If you keep the point in mind, you'll understand the following suggestion about clubs:

At first you should use a No. 8 iron. After loosening up your wrists and forearms, and handling sure that you can keep your head in position throughout every swing, then you should take a longer swing with the 3 iron. This club should enable you to loosen up most of your leg and back muscles so that you can go to a wood club.

Always practice with a driver or brassie when they should use a spoon. The 3 and 4 irons as well as the spoon, have shoulder left to keep your ball flying straight. This gives you confidence and in turn makes your swing easier and smoother. Select the club and do what is best for your swing, and you'll never go wrong.

Cochrane Takes Control After Being Out With Eye Trouble.

CARDS DEFEATED

Paul Dean Went to The Showers After Seven Frames

(By Andy Clarke, Associated Press Sports Writer).

A trio of Major League managers and one of the hired hands were holding up their heads with an unmistakable air of pride today after a day of redemption, which blotted out the memory of a few unpleasant afternoons.

Mickey Cochrane's Detroit Tigers, champions of the world, took a wide decision from St. Louis Browns, twice their conquerors, yesterday; the merry men of Casey Stengel becoming serious after dropping their first three games to their hated rivals from across the river, belted over three Giants and the venerable Connie Mack's Athletics, beaten three times by the 1905 foe, turned and notched a victory against the golden boys.

As a gem of personal adornment, Sally Rapper's sheepskin, hamstrung out a home run to beat St. Louis Cards after his error had enabled them to tie the score.

Ready Moore Breaks Leg

There was a note of dismay in the Dodger rejoicing, however. As Ready Moore, right fielder, broke his leg, while attempting to steal second in the second inning of a 6-inning duel which went 10 frames. A pinch single by Sidney Controneni sent home the winning tally in the 4-3 triumph.

Cochrane took off his black glasses, which he had been wearing on the sidelines because of eye trouble, and led his champions to a 13-6 win over the Browns. He got two singles, sparkling rallies in their hits also. Gehringer and Greenberg got three each and Goslin two.

The Reds won 8-5 as Paul Dean went to the showers after allowing nine hits in seven innings. Paul Derringer, ace hurler of the Reds, wasn't treated too kindly himself, as giants being nicked for 13 Ripper Cancelli was on base when Myer struck the blow, that won the game.

Rookie Steps, Red Sox

Harry Kelley, a rookie from Atlanta, gave the Philadelphia customers a ray of hope concerning the rebuilding plans of Connie Mack. He outlasted Wes Ferrell, as he went only four innings, and then went on to win his ball game 9-1, allowing but three hits. It was Kelley's first Major League victory and but for Thomas Ferrell third homer of the year he would have had a shutout. In trouble twice in the sixth and ninth, Kelley came through in masterful fashion.

Johnny Allen, late of the Yankees, pub himself in right with the Cleveland fans, when he held the White Sox to seven hits in a 4-0 victory in Allen's debut in the Indians' home park. The Indians made their first appearance from the box in the first inning as they got four hits and as many runs.

Senators Use 3 Hurlers

Henry Mckwork gave the Yankees a 10-4 win over Washington. Senators Ossie Walker and Chad Gelkirk blasted out homers, each with two on for the Senators used five pitchers, Weaver, Chase, Bolden, Russell and Coppola, filing to the mound.

Larry French was the pitchers' duel with Ralph Birtcher as the Cubs nosed out the Pirates 2 to 1. Paul Derringer let the Cubs' offense with two doubles and a single, while French limited the opposition to six safeties as he marked up his second win of the season.

The Phillies defeated Boston Bees 6-3 with Leo Norris and Gerge Watkins, each of whom connected for homers, driving in all of the Phillies' runs.

Victoria Dominoes Even Series With Pegs

Winnipeg, April 24.—(CP)— The Victoria Dominoes still lead their Canadian basketball championship today, after coming so close to losing it that they were still shaky.

They turned back the threat of Winnipeg Teilers, 36-25 here last night in the second game of the Western Canada finals, the winner of which will advance to the Dominion championship series against Windsor Fords, eastern champs.

Winners of the best game of the best-of-three series Wednesday night by a 42-26 score, Tellers, outplayed for most of the bruising struggle, fought desperately. The third and deciding game will be played Saturday night.

GOLD MINE ROOF SLOWLY SETTLES

Danger of Collapse Felt During Work of Rescue

Halifax, April 24.—(CP)—The roof of the Moose River Gold Mine is slowly settling and cannot hold up longer than a day or two, Hon. Michael Dwyer, Minister of Mines, said today.

"I am absolutely satisfied that today we could not have gotten into it as the narrow opening to the tomb of the two men clogged six inches after they were taken out," he said.

"By the end of the week the whole structure of the mine will be crushed in completely," he said.

The mine was slipping all the time the men were working in the shaft and there had been a distinct feeling that the work of rescue could not be continued after another day.

It was impossible to put in sufficient timber to carry the weight of the roof, he declared. The largest area in which the men were able to work was four feet by three feet, and smallest two feet six inches by three feet.

There was constant danger 25 or 30 men would perish while looking for two.

MEDICINAL SILVER IS GERM KILLER

New Silver Combines Properties of Nitrate And Colloidal Silver

Philadelphia, April 24 (AP)— A new kind of medicinal silver, a powerful germ killer although non-poisonous, made at the chemistry department of the University of Pennsylvania, was described for the first time today at the American Philosophical Society meeting here.

The silver is a brown powder — an oxide, produced from any silver by addition of caustic potash or potassium hydroxide. Externally it makes a salve when mixed with paraffin; for internal use it dissolves in water.

This silver oxide bridges a great gap in the use of silver as medicine. Previously two forms of silver were used. Silver nitrate, a salt, is one of the most potent germicides, but it burns. Colloidal silver is mild but lacks much of the metal's germicidal ability.

The new silver combines medical properties of both. It is so nontoxic that it has been substituted for drinking water for baby chicks. On this "silver water" they have grown to full feather without either retardation or bad effects.

MRS. D. POSTGATE ST. HON. GEO. LANSBURY

LANSBURY WILL COME TO CANADA—On a mission of world-wide peace, St. Hon. George Lansbury, famous British Labor leader, has arrived in New York with his daughter Mrs. D. Postgate. Both are shown above, Mr. Lansbury is scheduled to speak in Toronto late in May, and will go to Ottawa, where, it is reported, he may speak to the Canadian Youth Congress meeting in the capital May 24.

N.-S. Premier Aids While Cont... inent Watches Rescue Drama

While a deeply moved country waited breathlessly for news an epic of courage and determination was being recorded in Moose River, N.S., as squads of daring miners sought successfully to release Dr. D. R. Robertson and C. Alfred Boedding from their mine prison. F. D. Henderson, stand-in at the mine, addressed the Dominion through the Canadian Radio Commission network and at left he is seen (in action), expressing his hope for an early rescue. Herman Magill, who died in the mine, was a his close friend. At right, Nova Scotia's premier, Hon. Angus Macdonald who threw all the resources of the province behind the rescue efforts, is seen shouting down the tube that connected the surface with the trapped men. They reiterated cheerio and he had it sent down the tube immediately. Premier Macdonald can be seen at the left shouting to make his voice carry through the diamond drill shaft.

WALKED ABOUT IN PITCH DARK

Magill died of pneumonia in the arms of Dr. Robertson twenty-four hours after the diamond drill broke through to the shaft.

Kept Alive by Drinking Water

The three kept alive by drinking water. There was an abundance of it. "In fact too much of it," Dr. Robertson said. He had made the same statement through the drill tube when he was underground.

They could not hear the dynamite blasting or the noise the diamond drill made as it bored thru' solid rock.

Frightened by Flare

A red and yellow flare dropped through the tube late Saturday night frightened them. They thought they had exploded dynamite left underground.

When a shrill steam whistle sounded from the end of the tube they knew communication had been established, they rushed over and frantically tapped on the pipe line. It was this sound that told excited surface workers that three men lived here.

When he walked into the little mine office he had planned his case perfectly. Jokingly he asked for a good meal of beefsteak. Then he agreed with physicians that two men starving for ten days should have fruit, sugar and other energy restoratives. They ate the essence of pears and peaches, black toast saturated with butter, something to chew.

The two, separated by a hallway, still talked back and forth with voices showing strength long after they were rescued. Their vitality astonished attendants.

Saved Just in Time

If the dragermen had not broken through the hour they did it is doubtful that Boedding or Robertson would have ever seen again the light of day.

Before Jack Simpson, leader of the dragermen, went down at 11 o'clock Wednesday night he was told newspaper extras were on the streets in cities throughout the continent saying the tunnel was caving in.

"It's not true," he replied with grim determination. "We said we'd bring those men up alive and we're going to."

All the time they were working feverishly there was constant danger that 25 or 30 men would perish while attempting to save two.

Miners had returned to their homes in Westville, Stellarton, Goldenville, and Caribou today, and many of them were only a corporal's guard of workers remaining the little abandoned camp.

MAY SOME DAY RULE AS QUEEN OVER MANY VILLAGES—Compared to the model docks beside which they stand in the model village of Bekonscott, Buckinghamshire, Princess Elizabeth and Princess Margaret Rose, daughters of the Duke and Duchess of York assume the stature of giants. Princess Elizabeth, eldest granddaughter of the late King George, is second in line of succession to the throne of England. Perhaps this picture is prophetic of her future status in the realm, she was ten years old on April 21st.

Happy new songs, tappy new d ances, and the most glorious story she ever had, makes Shirley Temple's greatest screen role in 'Captain January" coming to the Belle tomorrow.

Brainerd, Minn., April 24 (CP) —"Spot," small mongrel dog, credited with saving the life of his master, 14-year-old Milton Hrabak of Gull River, when the latter was attacked by a bull.

The bull tossed Milton into the air and was about to trample him when "spot" diverted the bull's attention, permitting his boy to crawl to safety.

Brantford, Ont., April 24 (CP). —Ernest Leonard Cruck turned over as his trailer hit the curb as the driver tried to make the sharp turn on No. 2 Highway at Church Hill, just outside of Paris today, and caught fire. The driver, M. Chapman, jumped and was uninjured but the truck was destroyed. Passerby aided in saving some of the contents.

RAILWAY BILL TO BE CONTENTIOUS

If Passed Whole Controlling Set-up of C.N.R. Will be Changed

Ottawa, April 24 (CP)—Business moved forward at a smart pace in the House of Commons yesterday as the way was paved for consideration of what is likely to be one of the most contentious measures of the session, the bill to change the controlling setup of the Canadian National Railways.

The measure will come up for second reading either today or early next week, as soon as Railway Minister Howe is ready to go on with it, Leaders of the Opposition in the House of Commons and the Senate, sections slated for redrafting to meet the views of the opposition.

Besides pushing the Harbors bill along the House gave second reading to bill to amend the Copyright Act, passed amendments to the Indian Act and authorized Works Minister Howe to enter into an agreement with the City of Ottawa under which the Government pays $150,000 a year for water and fire protection services for Government buildings.

Few Changes Made

Conservative members induced the Government to make a number of changes in the National Harbors Board bill before consider.ng or drafting a section, which empowers the Board to enact by-laws which may be enacted by the Governor-in-Council as serious questions affecting foreign affairs are involved.

The opposition failed, however, in its drive to make Harbor Board appointments subject to the Civil Service Commission. They feared the Board staff managers would become entangled in political patronage if all were appointed subject to them.

Mr. Howe said harbors had to be operated as business concerns and Civil Service-Commission control was impracticable. He said he was not afraid of a few political appointments so long as efficiency was obtained.

FOXBORO

Foxboro —League was held on Monday evening with the President in charge. The opening hymn was sung and prayer was offered by the President, roll call and business items discussed. Miss Marion Daniels read the Scripture lesson and Miss Doris Horton gave the explanation of it. After singing a hymn the topic was given by Mrs. S. C. Day, A. Gee, by Lois Spencer and Dora Dafoe and the singing of a hymn brought the meeting to a close.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Frederick, Misses Rarrina and Marjorie, had Sunday dinner at the home of Mrs. Frederick's mother.

Misses Doris Dafoe and Mary Hollinger spent a few days at Mr. and Mrs. Harry Dafoe's of Consmel.

Master Earl Yorke spent a few days at Mr. Wm. Hodgen's.

Miss Hazel Dafoe spent Easter holidays with her aunt, Mrs. Carman of Holloway.

Mr. Mac and daughter, Miss Ethel Dale of Port Huron, spent Thursday afternoon at Mr. W. Hodgens.

Miss Pearl was a guest of her brother, Mr. George Price.

Mr. Charles Clarke and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarke of Shannonville spent Sunday at Mr. Wm. Clarke's.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Dalzell and Miss Marion were Sunday guests at Mr. J. Engelhardt of Melrose.

The Study Class met at the home of Mrs. L. Hagerman on Monday afternoon. This concluded the study book on Africa, which has been given an outstanding by Mrs. J. G. Sills. This personal question is "What is my responsibility toward Africa".

The Lois Spencer spent a couple of days with her cousin, Miss Dorothy Bishop of Belleville.

There was a good attendance at S.S. on Sunday morning, over eighty being present.

Rev. and Mrs. Horton attended a fifty year wedding celebration at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke near Milla, one day recently.

Master Jack Spencer spent over Sunday with his friend Master Jackie Boyd of Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Dave Lowe and Stewart and Miss Crooks of Belleville, were Sunday guests at Mr. Harold Stewart's.

Master Lois Spencer spent a couple of days with his friend, Master Earl Yorke of Consmel.

Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Sills had Sunday dinner at Mr. Eric Denyes' at Plainfield.

CONCERN FELT FOR A. SCADDING

Dr. Robertson Recovers Rapidly From His Gruelling Experience

By RALPH MORTON

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Copyright, 1936, By The Canadian Press

Moose River, N.S., April 24 (CP) —Dr. D. E. Robertson, in the little Moose River Gold Mine office shack, was recovering rapidly here today from the effects of his gruelling battle for life below ground, while in a Navy hospital in Halifax, 50 miles away his companion-in-suffering, Alfred Scadding, was giving doctors concern.

Dr. Robertson will be taken to Halifax tomorrow, either by plane or car. It is a perilous journey for a sick man by automobile, over boggy roads that are almost impassable, and he will probably make the trip by a Royal Canadian Air Force seaplane, the vehicle which flew Scadding to hospital yesterday.

Provincial Tax On Income Due On April 30th

Toronto, April 24—Ontario's income tax returns are due on April 30, and machinery for levying and collecting the tax for the provincial treasury is already functioning and collections being made. The tax is features by the utmost simplicity, and the Government anticipates the fullest co-operation on the part of the public in the new pay-as-you-go policy.

In a nutshell, the provincial treasurer's department explains the operation of the tax thus: "If you are liable for Dominion income tax you are liable for provincial income tax. Fill out only one form. Make but only one cheque. Having filled out the form, mail it or send it to the federal income tax office in your district. If you have filed your Dominion tax form already, completely filled out, another will not be necessary."

The form referred to is TL-1323—Ont. (2M) 36—and is issued free and is the combined form prescribed and authorized by the Minister of National Revenue, Ottawa, and the Treasurer of Ontario. It may be obtained at branch offices of the federal income tax department, from assessors, or from provincial savings bank branches.

Municipal income tax, in cities where such was levied last year, is abolished by the provincial tax and no municipal returns will be required.

Hon. Mitchell F. Hepburn, Prime Minister and Provincial Treasurer, has had advertisements published in the press of Ontario to provide the payers with information on how to make the necessary returns and remit tax payments.

It is understood that the province this year will remit to those municipalities which formerly collected the income tax an amount based on last year's levy.

The machinery set up for the collection of the income tax this year will be a trouble-saver for the tax-payer. As usual, the return is to be in triplicate, one copy to be retained, and two copies to be sent to the Provincial Authorities. A small section of the return is devoted specially to the calculation of the provincial tax due.

The tax-payer must estimate the amount of tax payable. The taxes due April 30 may be paid in four equal instalments, the dates being the last day of April, June, August and October. In case of instalment payment the tax-payer is asked to direct the proper apportionment, otherwise the whole of an instalment would be applied to the Dominion tax.

HOPES FOR WEALTH MAY BE REALIZED

Scadding Offered $500 a Week to Appear in Vaudeville

Halifax, April 24. —(CP)—Alfred Scadding's hopes for wealth from the Moose River Gold Mine may yet be realized—not from the gold but from the fact, that he lived for ten days in an underground cavern, where he and two others were entombed by a cave-in.

Recovering from hunger and exposure in the hospital here today he received an offer of $500 a week to make personal appearances for a theatre chain.

Newspapers offered him various amounts for signed articles and broadcasting companies asked him to name his price to tell the story. Scadding's general condition was reported as satisfactory but Dr. H. E. MacDonald said the condition of his feet was "causing some concern."

New York, April 24.—The dramatic rescue of Dr. D. E. Robertson and his lone-hander, C. A. Scadding, from the crumbling caverns of Moose River gold mine in Nova Scotia, is to be used as the basis of a motion picture, Warner Brothers announced.

In a telegram to his company's New York office, Hal Wallis, Warner Brothers production chief, announced immediate production of a motion picture entitled "Dregermen Cavern."

The film will have a strong cast, Wallis said. The heroes will be the Dregermen, Nova Scotia miners who are called upon in cases of desperate need for rescue work.

KING'S MESSAGE TICKLES MINERS

Monarch Expresses Tribute to Heroic Rescue Men

Stellarton, N.S., April 24 (CP)—Stellarton's daring dregermen were "tickled" when they heard King Edward had sent a message to the Governor General stating he was "thrilled with admiration for the heroism displayed by the gallant men, who regardless of risk of their own lives effected the rescue of Dr. Robertson and Mr Scadding from the Moose River mine."

Refreshed today after their first real sleep, they talked of their long battle to get into the old gold mine. The coal miners "not lucky enough" to get the call in Moose River, had to hear all about it.

"The greatest thrill was in shaking hands with Dr. Robertson when we broke through the barrier and got to them," said George Morrell, one of the first dregermen to get through to the entombed men.

"He's a great man. I don't think those two would have been alive if it had not been that Dr. Robertson was a doctor."

Today plans were being made to take the last 60 tons of rock dug out by the rescue crew and use it to erect a cairn in honor of the Dregermen. The site of the cairn would be decided jointly by Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Premier Macdonald of Nova Scotia.

BRUCE EXTOLS HIGH COURAGE

Voices Relief Felt in Ontario at Rescue of Men

Toronto, April 24 (CP)—Dr. Herbert A. Bruce, Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Thursday gave the Canadian Press the following statement:

In this city and province the feeling of relief and happiness is quite undescribable now that Dr. Robertson and Mr. Scadding have safely been brought to the surface. And there is no silken whose thoughts do not turn to Mrs. Magill and to all those beset by the death of young Herman Magill. Nothing ever done in peace or war exceeds in high courage and sublime fearlessness that the brave, long-delayed accomplishment of the miners. All honor to them.

The dregermen, the brave miners from Stellarton and from other parts of Nova Scotia and the plucky four from South Porcupine, Ontario, who worked with them in the dark, incredibly perilous passageway they hewed into the earth day and night through long weary hours. In the only true sense of the word they are great men one and all.

We rejoice with Mrs. Robertson and Mrs. Scadding both very courageous women. And with them we give heroes the thought only of the men entombed and never the dreamed. I wait to hear from the Hon. Michael Dwyer, a prince among men, and Premier Hepburn, diamond drill, mine's manager Henderson, Harold Gordon, Dr. Davis, Premier Macdonald and his namesake Dr. Macdonald, and indeed all those whose very names have within a week become household words for the finest in humanity.

Ontario has never stirred as perhaps never before. Gladly do I voice our admiration for them, our happiness, that the valiant and the tempt was so successful and our sorrow that tragedy overtook two of them. May the days as they pass restore health and strength to Dr. Robertson and Mr. Scadding after their very terrible experience. Of experience it is impossible to imagine in all the details of its dark hopelessness and unending strain but which they endured in a way to bring honor to the profession of Canada and of the world.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw—The Merle' Club of St. Mark's Church had a social evening and euchre in the club rooms on Tuesday evening of last week. A very interesting part of the program was an address read to Mr. John Webb in the honorary President of the Club, wishing him many happy returns of his birthday. Mr. Webb received birthday. On behalf of the club, Mr. Morley Webb, President, presented Mr. Webb with a beautiful plant, a rose in full bloom. Mr. Webb thanked the Club for their kind thoughtfulness. There was a splendid attendance among whom were a large number of Mr. Webb's relatives. Those from a distance were Messrs. Chris. Webb and A. Sheppard of Toronto, Mr. and Mrs. Webb, Jr., and Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Webb of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Earnest Chambers of Corbyville, Mr and Mrs. Henry Lazier and Mr. and Mrs. John Wallace of Ivanhoe and Mrs. Catherine Caverley of Marmora.

The prizes were won by Miss Leola Pollock and Mr. Lorne Mallow. A bounteous lunch was served by the lunch committee. Mary Reddress follows:—

"Bonarlaw, Ont., April 21, 1936.

"Mr. John Webb, Sr.,

"Dear President St. Mark's Men's Club,

"Dear Mr. Webb—

"We, your fellow club members, and friends and neighbours who have gathered at the club meeting this evening, feel that the evening would not be complete if we let it pass without wishing you continued health and happiness on this your ninety-second birthday.

As a slight token of our esteem we ask you to accept this plant. Our heartiest birthday greetings go with it, and our prayer is, that you may be spared for many years to come."

Tall wheat and clover in this district are reported to be above the average crop this year and there are many fine fields of each to this vicinity.

Mr. and Mrs. W. V. McDonald of Harlem, Sask., are visiting relatives here for a few weeks.

On Wednesday of last week, Mr. and Mrs. Geo. E. Thompson and family of Springbrook were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Baker. It was a joint birthday party.

Girl Swings on Ring In Young Bull's Nose

(By Thomas T. Champion)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ripon, Yorkshire, April 24.—(CP Cable)— While Irish Binks, 16, was bringing in calves at Littlethorpe farm near here, a young bull rushed at her and knocked her down. She had the courage to grasp the ring in the bull's nose. The bull swung her round and round but she managed to hang on, crying for help.

James Ozenbor of Harrogate, rowing in the canal and seeing her plight, beat off the bull with an oar. The girl was only slightly gored.

Edmonton Grads Easily Defeat Tulsa Stenos

Edmonton, April 24—(CP)— Edmonton Grads tightened their grip on their two major international crowns and sat back confidently today to await the third in the best-of-five series with Tulsa Stenos in their women's basketball title battle. The Grads loosed their Underwood Trophy, emblematic of the women's international championship, and the restricted North American championship into the series last they put a tight grip on, recover both.

Grads defeated the Oklahoma girls 34-24 here last night to make it two straight in their series. Grads won the opener 42-24 and another victory in the third game Saturday night will give them the serits.

Newspapermen and Cameramen Out as Fans As Miners Concerned

Moose River, N.S., April 24 (CP)— Stellarton dregermen think newspapermen are funny and cameramen are "something to take a poke at."

Cameramen were surprised when they could not get miners to pose for them, and a New Yorker, here to snap pictures of the rescue at Moose River Mine, heard, "I'll knock your block off" when he started giving orders.

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH MCCORD

Jean dragged a stool close to my chair and seated herself on it. She observed me in both her own. "Here I are." She mustered a smile as she said it, but her babyhood grace was still present even when the two of them were alone. "Oh—you are ill!" she burst out. "Your fingers are like ice! And you're home much earlier than—"

Suddenly, I turned in the same expressionless voice, "you and your dad have had a good talk. Haven't we?"

"Of course! Always."

"It's a shame," Sawyer sighed slowly. "You're nothing like a man. Other than Junior over yet, somehow, I suppose it's because you were the latter. I'd counted so on having a boy."

"Sorry!"

"But it didn't make so much difference." Her father took no notice of the little sarcasm. "I've had you. Nothing....I always made you halt your own books."

"I know." Jean smiled up at him through tear-wet eyes. "And I still think 'worms' are repulsive."

"That's why I know I can depend on you now....you've never let me down, Sunday. Yet see, I'm....I'm going away, dear."

"Daddy dear!" A low wail of anguish. "I knew you were sick! You mustn't—you're trying to tell me something. I don't believe it! I don't believe it! Do you hear?"

"Hush. Hold that....I only wish it were. I'm leaving all of you....For a long time, perhaps."

"I don't understand! Where are you going?"

Sawyer sagged down in his chair as he whispered it. His eyes closed as if he were unable to witness the wreath of his admission. Jean's head-weary head cropped slowly until her forehead rested on her father's hands. Her hands on other move. There was no outcry. The silence of the small room was unbroken, save for the measured ticking of the clock on the mantel shelf.

"Sunday, I" Sawyer shifted his position slightly.

"Yes?" said a muffled little voice.

"We....we haven't so much time. I think you'd better be as tell you."

"Go on."

The story of John Sawyer, defaulting, was briefly told. The shocking might have been that of somebody else, so impartial did the narrator seem. It was imperative to accumulate money. Everybody clamoring on him. He had wanted them to have the best....high school, college. He had planned a position for Jean. And so encouraging at first. The profits were enormous. Then gradually, some thing happened. Prices began to fluctuate. It couldn't be true! It was almost everything if the investment calls for margin were not met. Well....

Jean's head moved imperceptibly. She understood.

In the years at the bank, John Sawyer often had speculated how friends had he gained temporarily. He evolved a visible system. Safe enough, if a man had secret to fling it on a small scale. The market kept rising. Nothing to do but keep on.

Some of the officers must have become suspicious. The bank examiners appeared. Everything in order, nearly over the records. This morning he had been called before the directors and specifically accused of shortages. He told everything; repeated them was the arrangement before a magistrate and some one had arranged a bail bond. Jean was to go home....to tell his family.

"It's like some dreadful nightmare, Sunday. I keep trying to rake myself up and I can't. It must be that. At first I thought I'd have to end everything. Now, I see it can go on as they'll let me. There's no one to blame but myself, but....it's hard."

He turned away—his face. The story was finished.

Jean raised her head. The schoolgirl was gone. In her place sat a woman....a woman with the cold drained from her cheeks, mouth pale, tense with suffering. Her seven eyes were dry. They regarded the man in the chair with calm assurance.

It couldn't be Daddy Jack sitting there. Not the Daddy Jack she kissed goodbye this morning....who waved to her at the door and always did that when he was home. The playmate who used to mussed her boys and soothe her childish griefs, the strong one who vanished in terror her in illness. The one who pandon on long nights.....hours of bathing at the bath. It must be a very dreadful dream. She must wake up.....must rouse Daddy Jack. Her hand slide out and touched his face, almost timidly.

"Daddy!....Oh, Daddy, Daddy!....."

With a harsh sob, John Sawyer twisted about in his chair. He propelled blindly for Jean, caught her in his arms. They clung to each other desperately. In silence.

With the passing of the first storm of grief and despair, Jean roused herself to action.

"We must plan things," she told her father. "The decision was announced calmly. She released herself gently from his arms.

"Things?" he questioned vaguely.

"Aren't we? What is it going to Mummy?"

"Your mother....." Sawyer tried to shield his daughter's eyes but met witness pitifully at the first words. "She's just as I knew she would be, Sunday. We don't have to worry about her. I'm more afraid for Junior and the rest. My....the change will be hard for them to understand. And there's you....."

"I love you, Daddy," she answered simply. "Nothing else matters. It'll look after the others while you're away. Don't worry. But....."

"But I guess I hadn't better tell me just what it's going to mean."

"Of course, I shall have all I can over to the bank. Your mother will have something."

"Then we'll have to leave here."

"I'm afraid so."

"Think all right. We don't need such a big house....anyway. And I know I can find work."

"No, Sunday, you mustn't. I'd rather you finished school."

"But I'm not going back there. It isn't worth while."

Jean closed her eyes momentarily at the thought of it all. The commencement. Like a flash came the memory of Edythe Cannon's: "Can you read your own slant?" She must have known, something like that, how could she? Her father had something to do with the Commencement. He might have heard something about Daddy Jack and mentioned it at home. Everybody would know now.

"Daddy," she suggested abruptly, "you suppose Mr. Cannon would do something to help you if you asked him? He seems to give back the money just as soon as you could? They say he is very rich people....And he must have loads of money."

Sawyer was in the board room this morning." Sawyer replied, principle grimly. He was the one who insisted the case be pushed. As an example."

"I suppose he's right. I'll pay back every dollar....if I live. My lawyer will ask for a quick sentence. As good in dragging it out. I want to get it over with."

"I know."

"You see, dear....is that the doorbell?" His voice sank to a hoarse whisper. "I can't talk to anybody now! I want to sit with you."

"Sh! Sh! Sh!" Jean rose. "I'll be to a seat beside her on the couch. "It's....tough."

"Soo....." There was a sudden fright in the brown eyes. "You....you're not after something for the paper, are you?"

"What the heck!" There was no disguising the hurt in his voice. "I'd have to be crazy for you." Don stretched out his long legs and scowled savagely at the toes of his dusty shoes.

"What do you mean?"

"I'm a dumb chuck when it comes to saying things right, Jean. But you see, you've always lived right here and....."

"Go on."

"I think it might be easier for you if you took an inside job in an office, that is. Then you wouldn't be bumping into people all the time."

"People I know, you mean. Then you think it's going to make a good deal of difference with my friends," Jean's head lifted proudly. "Don't be silly, Don! But....you understand."

"Yes," she admitted thoughtfully. "I'm sure it would make a difference. It's got to be done. If Daddy Jack can face it, I ought to be able to. I'm not going to hide!" The small chin came up with a determined tilt.

"Atta girl! I knew you'd take it that way. I've got our suggestion, Jean. Why don't try for a job with the rag?"

"The paper!"

"Yeah. It's the only place I have a pull, if any. I could steer you up against the right people."

"I don't know anything about a newspaper."

"Plenty of guys working for 'em don't either. I wasn't talking about a cub-sister assignment. They don't fall for that stuff here. I was considering about the business department, advertising, maybe. If you'll come down some afternoon, I'll have you meet Wardlaw. He's a decent guy. They tell me there's fair luck in getting ads and doing copy. It wouldn't hurt to look into it. What do you say?"

"That's just like you, Don. Perhaps I will....a little later. I'll have to look for something. I must help Daddy in any way I can."

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE BELLS

"Captain January"

Happy New Songs, Happy New Dances in Shirley Temple's Finest Picture

Honorable new names, tantalizing new dances, and Shirley Temple in her most lovable, believable role! Those are the entertainment delights that 20th Century's "Captain January", beings tomorrow to the Bells theatre.

A score of three thrilling songs, all with music by Lew Pollack and again given the curly-headed star an opportunity to exhibit her singing talents. Chief of these is "The Right Somebody to Love." For her dancing partner in a new series of intricate new steps, Shirley now has Buddy Ebsen, big star of Ziegfeld Follies and sensation of "Broadway Melody of 1936."

The sustaining dramatic story of "Captain January" deals with the adventures and misadventures of Shirley and her two grizzled old-salt friends Guy Kibbee and Slim Summerville.

Kibbee, who had rescued Shirley from the sea when she was an infant, is jealously fond of the little girl, forever afraid that somebody will turn up with a better claim to her.

When Sara Haden, the most old fussy critter, threatens to take Shirley from him, Kibbee stops quibbling with Slim, and the two join forces to temporarily outwit Miss Haden.

Despite their strategy and an attempted flight to sea in the night, the inevitable happens, and when the old Sara Haden, the truant officer, takes possession of Shirley. But not for good, however, because unexpected friends turn up to bring Shirley and Kibbee home again, and the picture to a happy close.

Shirley demonstrates her ability to new dances in company with Buddy Ebsen, Lew Pollack supplies the music for her three new hit tunes.

June Lang, June Darwell, as the lady who has the misfortune to set on Kibbee, and Jerry Tucker are prominent in the supporting cast of "Captain January." A famous story becomes her finest picture.

Select Junior Cast

"Grand Slam Opera" an uproarious all-star Personality comedy, Popeye in "King of Mardi Gras", and the World Today News events, comprise the select Junior screen menu to be featured on the same program.

Warner Baxter Leaving

Snatched from the shadow of the noose, he was sent to an island jail to suffer an agony worse than death!

Telling the true story of the most tragic figure in American history "The Prisoner of Shark Island" will be presented at the Bells tonight for the last time, with Warner Baxter with Gloria Stuart and a supporting cast of over one thousand. Thelma Todd and Ned Kelly appear on the same program in the Roach comedy of their careers, "Top Flat" a beautiful travelfilt in color, "Modern Thrills" completes an excellent programme of varied screen entertainment that should not be missed.

AT THE CAPITOL

On Saturday Only—Two New High Pictures "For One Day Only" and

He knew no fear—until a defeat panicked him!

He knew no real courage—until he conquered himself!

That tells the story of "We're Only Human", RKO Radio's thrilling drama with Preston Foster and Jane Wyatt, a refreshing new screen romantic team, with James Gleason co-featured.

As Pete McCaffrey, detective sergeant, Foster finds one of his strongest roles, one with wide possibilities for character interpretation, and one with many moods.

McCaffrey, prone to overrating himself, wades into danger single-handed, and if the grand-stand fails to applaud his exploits he is well able to blow his own horn. One of his admirers is Sally, a newspaper reporter played by Jane Wyatt. But finally she is repelled by his apparent hollowness.

McCaffrey's hour is passed up a bullet during one of his raids, and is forced to wear a bandage over his eye for a week. This gives him reflect what might have happened to him, he is seized with fear that evolves into panic. After he recovers, he is placed up against the police force again, by Sally who has discovered the hideout of "Lefty" Dolan, desperate gangland cowrid.

A soul-quaking battle between fear and duty, between self-respect and scorn, between love and hate, arouse, providing a gripping climax to his pulsating screen drama.

"DAMES"

"Dames", Warner Bros.' latest musicomedy musical comedy romance with spectacular production by Busby Berkeley and an all star cast headed by Dick Powell, Ruby Powell and Ruby Keeler, is scheduled as the feature attraction at the Capitol Theatre, Belleville, only.

The story, by the well known playwrights, Robert Lord and Delmer Daves, is said to be hilarious comedy tinged with a glamorous romance. The theme of a somewhat hypocritical and highly eccentric multimillionaire whose chief concern in life is other people's morals, but who eventually gets drunk on cough medicine and is taken for a short ride by a gold digging chorus girl, is very amusing. It is said that there are 300 of Hollywood's most beautiful chorus girls who dance in the Busby Berkeley numbers.

Regular matinee is cancelled today for the Belleville United Church Cooking School but evening performance as usual tonight at 7 p.m. with two Features and Cartoons, comedy and thrills—Jack-ie Cooper in "Tough Guy" and "Stormy."

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon—The recent rains which have been followed by extremely cold weather have delayed the farmers a great deal with their work. All are very optimistic for they consider it better to have the rough weather now instead of later when the seeding would be partly done. Some improvements are under way at present among citizens' buildings. Mr. Jas. McGowen has had shingled his house and Mr. Frank Ashley has demolished his old garage and is erecting a new one of a different style which adds much to the appearance of the local store.

The general topic of conversation is the forthcoming old boys' reunion. Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Shaw entertained the Publicity Committee on Monday evening when invitations were sent to those now living in other places who once lived among them.

There was no service in St. Andrew's Church on Sunday as the pastor, Rev. J. A. Kofford was conducting the funeral of Mrs. Malcolm Ross. The order of service here. A number of local people attended the funeral.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Hammond and family visited Mrs. Hammond's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mendon one day recently.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Wilson were Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Rose and Miss Marie Townsend of Holloway, and Mr. and Mrs. William Moffat of Peterboro and Mr. and Mrs. William Fox of Trenton.

Mr. and Mrs. Richard Haggarty and Hilda, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Wallbridge and family were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Clancy of Round Pleasant.

Mr. and Mrs. John Reid of Stockdale were week-end guests of Mr. and Mrs. McGowen.

Rev. and Mrs Geo. Kelly of Seeley's Bay were the dinner guests on Friday with Mr. and Mrs. Melville Donnan.

Mr. Ray Donnan spent the Easter holiday with his grandparents Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Sharp of Mount Pleasant.

On Friday evening April 17 the Ladies' Aid of St. Andrew's Church sponsored a pancake tea in the basement parlors. The program was arranged by a group of young artists from Belleville which will be here he known as the Hill Billies.

Rev. J. A. Kofford introduced the group to the audience and Mr. Arthur Duncan acted as chairman for the evening. Each member was given a novel and amusing fashion introduced each member as follows: Wm. Jones, Lloyd Rowland, Kenneth Stapley, Maurice Bell, Wm. Donnelly, Ray Williams, Lawrence West, Jack McCaughan, Reg Mathieson and Don Scott. The program included instrumental and vocal choruses, violin solos, banjo solos, harmonica and ukelele music interspersed with some jokes etc. Misses Wm. Donnelly and Arthur Donnan contributed a duet. The program lasted just 50 minutes and was enjoyed by those present.

Miss Joan McCurdy and Miss Doris Rodgers started their season of instruction on Monday in Rose Road School.

Miss Helen McMullen is assisting Mrs. Lanigan teaching this week.

At a meeting of the Ladies' Aid Cheese Club on Mr. Harold Clark's he was engaged as cheese maker for 1936. The meeting was held at Mr. Angus Farrell's home.

Mr. C. Abey of Belleville was a week end guest of his nephew, Mr. Philip Carr.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Post entertained the Endeavors Class for their monthly social evening on Tuesday evening, April 21. The special part of the program was a debate. resolved that it is better to be born lucky than rich, Mr. Thomas Elliott and Miss W. Fletcher upheld the affirmative side. Mr. Geo. Sarles and Mrs. Clayton Wright maintained that riches were better than being born under a lucky star.

Many argument and much humorous were advanced by all the debaters, but according to the judges Mr. Elliott and Miss Phillip Carr and Arthur Wilcox it was proved that riches were better by a large than rich. Rev. Turner read and explained a portion of scripture and Mrs. Elmer Post gave a very appropriate reading. The Misses Marjorie Wyllis and Marion Hammond contributed a song. Mrs. Elmer Post conducted three contests and also served an excellent lunch. After the business was attended to roll call was answered by a large number in an amusing manner, each giving the year in which they were born and also something outstanding event for that year.

Rev. Turner closed the meeting with the Benediction.

A vote of appreciation was extended the host and hostess for this outstanding evening's entertainment.

Canada-U.S. Trade Pact Branded Detrimental by Hon. Earle Rowe at Rally

Says Liberal Government Fails to Recognize Real Needs

J. F. HILL SPEAKER

School Bill Should Have Been Studied More Says Rowe

Labelling the present government as one whose vacillating policies and failure of leadership to recognize the country's real needs and issues at the day must eventually lead to grave difficulties, and results, a upheaval, the Hon. Earl Rowe, M.P., great speaker at an overflow meeting held in the Conservative Club rooms last evening, declared that, as in the past, the solid Conservative party, realizing the safe path toward progressive prosperity, would again be called upon to take over the reins of this country to which he added "that is the hope" he added "will be very soon."

Tackling the present day railway question, the recent Canada-United States Trade Agreement which he characterized as "one of the most detrimental pacts, that had ever been in force in the British Empire," and drawing sharp contrasts between the policies and the present administration with those of the old time Conservative party, with his characteristic ability, Mr. Rowe took up the developments, which have occurred even in the Provincial Legislature as proof of its assertions.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Oshawa, Ont., April 25 (CP)—When Mrs. Ethel Gordon Manning, 28, had autumn the teacher, Mildred Henderson, and three pupils, Vera Wood, seven, and Mildred died this week of complications from a boiled shawl.

Olympia, Wash., April 25 (CP)—A crippled hitch-hiker, angered by unsympathetic motorists, threw his crutch through an automobile window and paid a $20 fine—with a Deputy Sheriff. The transient, Jack Anderson, got 10 days in jail and a $20 fine.

Nice, April 25 (CP-Havas)—A report was current here today that the Imperial family will establish themselves on the French Riviera if they are forced to flee from Ethiopia to escape the Italians.

Queen Victoria's grandson by marriage has been mentioned in connection with the Imperial family.

Prince De Joigny, Que., April 25 (CP)—Joseph Eberff Frai Martin sat in his office his wife was at prayer in the adjoining room, when a voice said to Saint Martin's statue: "Joseph, you are going to kill your wife." Martin took down his rifle and shot and killed his wife, then prayed for the soul of the dead woman. Later he was arrested yesterday and charged with murder.

Cookshire, Que., April 25 (CP)—Mr. J. H. Rivers of Cochrane, said a friend, visited the lady back today. They plunged over a 300-foot cliff in Dr. Rivers' automobile, turned over six times and escaped without injury. And that car was still safe to operate.

Calgary, April 25 (CP)—Penalty of six months' imprisonment was imposed on Ernest Johnston, 20, sentenced to 30 days in jail yesterday on a theft charge.

Dunn, Ont., April 25 (CP)—Joseph Moore, 70, has an 80-pound hog which is proving to be more than a match for a bull and which regular food in the barnyard is accustomed to eating oats, bran and finishes its meal at a nearby cornstarch, then climbs back.

RUSHTON HERO IN RESCUE WORK

Carried Scadding on Back, He Crawled on Hands, Knees

Springhill, N.S., April 25 (CP)—An unsung hero was played a prominent part in the rescue of Dr. D. R. Scadding and carried the latter from the place of imprisonment to the mine entrance on his back, made his appearance today. He is James Rushton, of Springhill.

Rushton was among the miners from this town who volunteered their services in the fight to save the two men. Quiet and unassuming he has published and it was not until workers returned to their homes in Springhill that his part became known.

In the place when rescuers broke through, Rushton got down on his hands and knees and had Scadding loaded on his back. He crawled through the steep and difficult tunnel on his aching knees, with the human burden was placed on a stretcher.

Scadding spoke twice during the journey. Once he said, "Oh!" And again, "How are you making it, boy?"

Rushton, N.S., April 25 (CP)—"We don't give a toot about all this publicity," declared Joe Nastick, one of the Rushton miners who helped to rescue Dr. D. R. Robertson and Alfred Scadding from Moose River Gold Mine.

"All we want to do is to sell the coal. We have the best coal in the world down here in Nova Scotia, but half the time we are not working because we can't sell it."

Stolen Articles Are Recovered In Kingston

As a sequel to numerous motor car robberies that have occurred in and around Belleville, a quantity of stolen goods believed to have been taken from parked cars in Belleville was recovered in Kingston today. Among the articles recovered were two tennis rackets and tennis shoes stolen from Mr. Wm. Adams' parked automobile. Two cameras, two vases and five cushions are also at the police station awaiting their owners. The above articles are believed to have been stolen from parked cars in Belleville and were found in the motor car, which was stolen recently in Kingston and subsequently recovered in Cobourg.

By The Associated Press

Rome, April 25—Premier Mussolini declared today, at the inauguration of the new town of Aprilia, that sanctions "augment the discorder and misery of the world" but that Italy will remain "always undisturbed, tenacious and indomitable."

Il Duce made this declaration after guiding a plough, in emulation of Romulus' ploughing of Rome to mark the boundaries of the community of Aprilia, which will rise on the reclaimed pontine marshes

Egyptian King Has Quiet Night

Cairo, Egypt, April 25 (AP)—A bulletin signed by six doctors said today that King Fuad of Egypt had passed a relatively calm night.

A hemorrhage earlier described as "important" was reported stopped. "Normal midnight" under a local anesthetic and since had not recurred."

The illness of the Egyptian monarch who is 68, was so critical that there were flying rumors in all cities formed in palace official circles, that he had succumbed.

Some legations had dropped their flags to half mast, so insistent were the reports of the King's death.

MORROW HEADS ALBERT COLLEGE GOVERNORS' BD.

Office Vacant For Some Years is Filled by Peterborough Man

REGISTRATION GROWS

Principal Howard's Report Shows Progress Of College

At the semi-annual meeting of the Board of Governors of Albert College, convening yesterday afternoon in Ackerman Hall, W. O. Morrow, President and General Manager of the Toronto Loan and Savings and prominent business man of Peterborough, was appointed to the office of chairman of the Board, for some years this office has remained vacant and the College Board has felt its responsibility in the leadership of a chairman who possessed business acumen and foresight for which that position calls. All members were unanimous in their belief that the choice of Mr. Morrow was a happy one, and a deserved honour for Mr. Morrow, who has been a wise counsel as a member of the Board for a number of years.

Mr. Morrow very graciously accepted the office and stated that he would be very happy to do all in his power to further the great work being done by Albert College.

At 12.45 lunch was served in the Ackerman Hall after which the business meeting took place. Mrs. R. J. Bowman conducted the opening devotions.

Highlights of Principal Howard's report were that a really increased registration of this year in comparison with last, and the indication of a further increase in registration for next year as judged from the applications and numerous inquiries now being received. An increased attendance at the Bible lectures conducted by Principal Howard, and the results are most encouraging. Increased attendance due to a capacity registration for the coming year.

Thankful praise was accorded Principal Howard for being able to bring to the members such a splendid report of the year's progress. By resolution the Board placed itself on record as being interested and appreciative of the untiring efforts of the Principal and Staff. Every financial basis. To this end the Board were most enthusiastic pledging themselves in a very generous manner to bring it about.

Before adjournment, a resolution was passed, expressing profound regret and sympathy of the Board at the passing of one of the members, Dr. Palmer Dafoe. The secretary was authorized to forward this resolution to the family of the deceased.

Members from a distance included Professor F. B. Wright, Queen's University, Kingston; Dr. Peter Bryce, Dr. Frank Langford, Dr. E. J. Brown, J. J. Gibson, B. N. Davis, K.C., J. W. L. Forster, of Toronto; W. H. Hoyle of Cobourg and W. S. Gordon of Tweed.

ANSWERS CLICK OF LENS WITH BLAST

Examination Showed Man to Be "Hopelessly Insane"

San Jose, Calif., April 24—(CP)—A bearded, camera-shy man faced a murder charge today for answering the click of a lens with a shotgun blast.

Peter Voss, 65, was driving his burro-driven covered wagon along a highway yesterday when Dr. Jasper Gattuccio, 31, a dentist with photography for a hobby, stopped his car to get the picture—and paid with his life.

After an examination the elderly man was pronounced "hopelessly insane" by Dr. E. W. Muller, superintendent of Agnew State hospital.

Business Good During Rescue Work Says Moose River's Lone Shopman

By NAT HIGGINS

Moose River's Only Storekeeper

(Copyright, 1936, By The Canadian Press)

Moose River, N.S., April 25 (CP) There's nothing very much doing here today. The men over at the mines are squaring things for repairs of the machinery used in the rescue has been dragged out. The big, steam-shovel and the tractors are gone. In fact the boom days are over.

Business was mighty good in this little store while it lasted. If it had kept on like that for about a year, I'd know I've laid to retire.

You know I've laid in 10,000 cigarettes since the boom started and I sold them all. Those newspaper fellows seemed to think this was the best place in Canada to buy high-lipped rubber boots. I sold 80 to 40 pairs of leather boots. I'm practically cleaned out. I've only got one pair in the store and I could have sold them, only they're size 13.

Yes, sir, this is a deserted village here this morning. There's only one car in sight and that belongs to Mr. Messervey (Mines Inspector in charge of rescue operations) is still here, but he plans to pull out this afternoon.

The road is good at last—we owe that to the boom. They put scrapers and tractors over it and put down a lot of rock. Before they started it was the worst road in Nova Scotia.

Moose River is like a finished town today. There's not a crack of dust.

The only think I overstocked was razor blades.

AMPUTATION OF SCADDING'S FEET NOT CONSIDERED

Trouble Due to Poor Circulation and Equipment Rushed From Toronto

ROBERTSON BETTER

Body of Herman Magill Will be Interred at Hamilton Sunday

Halifax, April 25 (CP)—Medical equipment rushed from Toronto to Halifax by airplane and automobile was being used today to relieve the pain of Alfred Scadding, recovering in hospital here from the effects of eleven days of hunger and exposure while entombed in Moose River gold mine.

The condition of Scadding's feet, according to his physician, Dr. H. E. MacDonald, was due to poor circulation, to assist the flow of blood a passive vascular exercise was being operated.

The equipment was brought to Halifax by Major Oliver Stewart, inspector on Civil Aviation, who flew from Montreal to Moncton yesterday through a sleet storm and Halifax by car.

Dr. MacDonald said amputation of the patient's feet was "not being considered at the present time".

Robertson Gains Strength.

Dr. D. R. Robertson, the other man rescued from the mine, who arrived Thursday morning, was a patient in the same hospital, having been brought by special train to Nova Scotia by a Royal Canadian Air Force plane.

"Since arriving in the hospital, Dr. Robertson has gained strength and has continued to take solid meals at regular intervals," reported Dr. Ian MacDonald.

The body of Herman Magill, 30-year old barrister, was forwarded to Toronto yesterday. Mrs. Magill, accompanied by Mrs. Donald G. Grant, wife of the head magistrate of Halifax, arrived here in Nova Scotia, left on the same train.

All flights were also early Sunday morning when rescue workers established communication with their cavern below the cave-in. But Magill, suffering from burns of the lungs, shock and pneumonia, died early Monday morning in the arms of the distinguished Toronto surgeon.

Apparatus Explained.

Special apparatus being rushed from Toronto and Montreal today to aid in the medical care of Alfred Scadding's feet was explained by professional doctors two or three years ago and has since been used extensively in hospitals where advanced foot.

The apparatus will arrive in Halifax this morning. Scadding, delivered from the Moose River gold mine at 3 p.m. E. S. T. Robertson is in a Halifax hospital and the condition of his feet is causing considerable alarm.

The principle of the apparatus is passive vascular exercise. It has been valuable in treating cases of frost-bite, gangrene, Dr. W. J. Gardiner of Montreal, Medical Director of Dr. Gardiner, an authority on the curative measures used in such cases, added: "It is used in treatment of any condition where the arteries of boundary land was sentenced to 2 years in the penitentiary on each charge, terms to run concurrently. A companion received two years concurrent sentences on each charge. Jones has an extensive record. Both were captured early on the morning of April 11th by Night Constable Gavin Reid, when he was investigating a fimmied rear door to a tobacco store.

Deny $20,000 Ransom Money Has Turned Up

Boston, April 25.—(AP)—Faced with recurrent reports that $20,000 in Lindbergh ransom money had turned up in New England in the past two weeks, Federal agents today unceasingly explained away an armed mass sortie as "target practice".

The reports, published by the Boston Post, were emphatically denied by Clarence D. McKean, head of the Boston Bureau of the Department of Justice.

"There is absolutely nothing to it," he insisted.

Unusual activity among Federal agents has been evident in this area recently, causing speculation about their moves.

The first said discovery of the gold ransom notes, exchanged in two banks in Albany, N.Y., Northampton, Springfield, Worcester, Greenfield and Boston, has brought six members of the Department of Justice to New England ranks.

The Federal men are concentrating in Massachusetts and Northern New Hampshire. It is the expectation that a number of bills are about to be exchanged in the latter State."

LONDON ARSENAL DOWNS SHEFFIELD IN ENGLISH CUP

Score is 1-0, The Goal Being Tallied in Second Half

93,000 SEE GAME

One of The Tightest Contests in Years of Cup Play

London, April 25 (CP)—London's famous Arsenal football team won the English Cup today for the first time in its career, defeating Sheffield United by 1 to 0 before 93,000 persons at Wembley Stadium. One of the tightest cup finals in recent years, where the teams fight on even terms in the first half, the only goal being scored in the second 45 minutes.

Seventy-four minutes elapsed before Drake, Arsenal centre-forward, scored following a great movement in which he anticipated along with Hulme, defender, a long pass. Sheffield counter came after the famous gunners had worn down a brilliant Sheffield defence.

A wildly enthusiastic crowd saw Arsenal, representative of the first division, win because of its more methodical play with the second leaguers, out for their fifth trophy, were unable to counteract with a nippy attack. Throughout the first half the youthful United forwards were unfamiliar with their more experienced opponents. Frequently offside goals also robbed the famous international backs.

Close to the end of 44 minutes when the Londoners gradually assumed control and then scored their winning goal.

Thirty Special Trains.

Throughout the night trains and motor loads of people from all over the country arrived in the capital. Railway companies operated thirty specials for the match. Long before the opening whistle the stands presented a colorful spectacle of the huge crowd whiled away the time with community singing of the old bands.

Owing to the court being in mourning for the late King George, no members of the Royal Family attended the match and Queen Mary, Charles Clegg, veteran president of the Football Association, presented the cup and medals to the winners at the close.

The last interesting feature was the fact that the game was conducted by Mr. Thomas Armstrong from Seaham Colliery in Durham. He was Harry Mellroes and although one of the best referees in the country, he has never played football. A few minutes before three o'clock the teams ran on to the field side by side the crowd giving them a vociferous welcome. The great assemblage then stood at attention as the bands played the National Anthem.

MANY CITIES IN ONT. PUT CLOCK AHEAD ONE HOUR

60 Minutes More Sunshine For Working Man Starts at Midnight

MANY WILL NOT CHANGE

Standard Time to be Observed in Western Canada

Eastern Canada's annual one-hour spurt to get 60 minutes more sunshine for the City working man will take place after midnight tonight, when daylight saving time goes into effect in more than a dozen cities in Ontario. Other municipalities will fall into line later. Many will remain on Standard Time.

Among those whose clocks will gain an early Sunday morning are Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, St. Catharines, Kingston, Niagara Falls, Hamilton, Port Dalhousie, Niagara-on-the-Lake, Beamsville, Orillia and Welland. New York and many eastern United States cities will gain an hour at that time.

Those places will observe Daylight Saving Time until Sept. 26. Hamilton clocks will be pushed back one week later, Thorold's on May 31 and Sudbury's on June 7. Those will also remain on "fast" time until Sept. 26.

In Force in Maritimes.

In the Maritimes, Saint John, N. B., will take the step May 25 and Halifax on May 31.

Chicago, which originated the period from May 8 to Sept. 5 and Cleveland, May 10 to Sept. 26, Pacific cities as Brantford, Barrie, Kitchener, North Bay, Stratford, Woodstock, Galt, Preston, Simcoe, Chatham, London, Sarnia, St. Thomas, Sault Ste. Marie, Brockville and Owen Sound will not observe Daylight Saving Time.

No western city will seek longer evenings. Regina observed the custom from 1914 to 1918 when it, too, decided to remain on Standard Time.

FUGITIVE CAUGHT AT PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough, Ont., April 26 — (CP)—Ivor Johnston, one of three youths, who escaped from Wellington County Jail in Guelph, was recaptured here today by Peterborough police. Two youths have been returned to the jail.

MOOSE RIVER IS QUITE DESERTED

Only Two Watchmen Remain on Duty to Guard Mine

—This little gold mining community of 50 families today picked up its life, where it had been dropped during Easter Sunday night, with nothing but memories and a deep depression in the ground left to remind them of the greatest rescue in years.

Last of the newspapermen covering the rescue of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Scadding checked out of the white dwelling house, that is Moose River's only hotel yesterday. Draegermen, miners, government officials and police had left Thursday. Only two watchmen remained on duty at the deserted mine.

The depression, that marks where the original cave-in occurred, widened a little as it has done every day since Easter Sunday night, when the collapse came. The fracks leading from it deepened a little more too.

All equipment used during the rescue work has been removed, the greater part of it within a day after the men had been taken from the 141 foot level, where they were imprisoned. Magill's body was taken to Halifax and thence to Toronto.

Alfred Scadding was taken to hospital in Halifax by plane Thursday. Dr. Robertson followed him yesterday, also by plane. Their wives accompanied them.

ONTARIO MINERS START FOR HOME

Thanked For Services by Manager of Moose River Mine

Halifax, April 25 (CP)— Three Ontario miners who hurried here to aid Nova Scotians in the rescue of three Toronto men trapped in the Moose River gold mine, will leave today for their homes in Ontario.

Reluctant to comment on the rescue, George Mitchell, Elmar Moran, both of Timmins, Ont., and Sinclair Macmillan of Schumacher, Ont., expressed themselves as glad it was all over. W. J. Hosie Cain, also of Schumacher, is remaining in Halifax for a day or two longer.

F. D. Henderson, superintendent of the Moose River gold mine, thanked the Ontario miners last night at their hotel and expressed his sincere thanks for their valuable assistance.

From Ontario they brought with them more than eight hundred pounds of mine equipment.

They will make the return journey by train.

$150 BLAZE AT PETERBORO

Peterboro, Ont., April 26—(CP)—Fire in the brick warehouse of Herbert Bouley caused damage of $2,500 last night. The warehouse contained a large quantity of wall paper and pottery and the exact cause of the blaze was not known. Most of the damage was caused by smoke and water.

NO SCARCITY OF SEED POTATOES HERE

Actual scarcity of seed potatoes? Not in Belleville, at any rate, reported local seed and grain dealers this morning.

Nor did the fact that reports of a "corner" in potatoes now circulating appear to have any basis of credence, it was added.

"We have given him all right," declared Bishop and Sons, prominent dealers. "They're selling at a fair price, too—an average of $1.80 for a 90-pound bag. There has been little rain so far in the country."

Due to backward weather conditions and seed buying being at a mere snail's pace, however, the seed store dealers say weather has made the land unsuitable for seed but a short very rank job during wet is expected.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY OF ROSE DAY

The twenty-fifth anniversary of Queen Alexandra Rose Day will be commemorated in Belleville next Saturday, May 2, with a "Tag Day" by the ladies of St. John Chapter, Imperial Order Daughters of the Empire. Funds received will be devoted to charitable purposes.

The Daughters of the Empire, in war and in peace, have always distributed help wounds of those who have been unfortunate in life's battle, and banish tears with joy generated from sympathy and practical help, St. Julian Rose was started with Mrs. (Dr.) McCall as first Regent, accomplished a wonderful work during the war for the soldiers, and has been carrying on very effectively ever since in benevolent work. Mrs. George Walkin is the present Regent.

MARKET PRICES ARE UNCHANGED

Small Fresh Fish Supply of Mudcats Soon Exhausted

Price fluctuations in nearly all lines of produce marked one of the largest attended markets of the season today, with the possible exception of potatoes, ranging fruit and vegetable staples, which however, in some instances showed a marked increase, in these lines.

Potatoes are scarce, in spite of predictions, dealers wholesaled, marking a $1.80 and $2 sign on their registered bags. On the green market, however prices for the registered seed ranged slightly lower than retailed the city, selling from $1.80 to $1.90. For the common table variety a price of from $1.30, $1.40 to $1.60 was being received for the 75-pound bag. Vegetables for the first part remained fairly with turnips, beets, carrots, parsnips at 20 cents the peck. Green onions radishes, lettuce were at five cents per bunch. Only forced rhubarb remained at 10 cents.

Butter Slightly Lower

On the dairy market prices were uncertain as offerings displayed were noted. Butter today again dropped slightly selling at the air-cargo price of 23, 25 to 26 cents the pound. Eggs remained about stationary due to the fact that the hens are now being used for hatching purposes. The meat prices ranged from 13 to 16 to 19 cents the pound. Cows was not too plentiful, with chickens being held at from $1.50 to $2.50 for the plump birds, and from $1.25 to $1.50 the pair.

Syrup with only a limited supply left from last season is now from $1.60 to $1.75 cents. "If you don't get it now you may not have another chance," was the word of one dealer. "This stuff will keep, and we have been told that it at less than it is costing us to make it and keep it."

Few Whitefish

Plump carp, weighing from 20 to 30 pounds were offered at 50 cents wholesale, in spite of the cold weather and the difficulty in getting them, were cheaper for the time this season at two pounds for 25 cents the pound. The supply was soon exhausted. Carp retailed at 8 cents each. Pike at 30c each.

"We can't get a whitefish" pointed out Mr. Mr. Bishop to numerous customers enquiring. "We haven't seen enough to sell all winter. Most of them have been shipped to the States this year, and prices from 60 to 80 cents the pound were being received."

Although a little trade in seeds and grains was evident in supply houses this morning, little change in the market on the whole was evident, with the possible exception of potatoes. Only slightly lower prices were reported in the retail meat trade.

POLICE BLOTTER

Provincial and Motorcycle police throughout Eastern Ontario patrolled all highways and roads in that district last night in search of an alleged hit-and-run automobile driver, believed to be travelling in a large yellow colored sedan. According to information received by local Patrolmen, the yellow sedan struck a pedestrian in Prescott late last night, knocking him down to the pavement and resulting in a broken leg.

Traffic Officers from Cornwall to Trenton patrolled their beats far into the night in search of the car. No reports as to the capture of the operator were received up to noon today in Belleville, however.

Another bicycle was stolen in Belleville last night. The "bike," a blue colored C.C.M. bicycle, is the property of Douglas Lastimer, 226 William St., and was stolen from its parking place on the lad's home.

Activities were of the usual routine nature in and about Belleville police circles during the past 24 hours, no serious crime being reported. Nine automobiles were warm sleeping quarters at the police station last night.

Chief Kidd announced today that the 3 teen-aged Tweedale boys, who have been held for their parents at the police station for the past three days, will be released this afternoon unless their parents arrive and take over the custody of the three youths. "There has been no charge laid against the boys and we cannot hold them indefinitely," Chief Kidd added.

Font to be Dedicated in Memory Of William and Mary Johnson

Mr. James Johnson Presents Memorial to Bridge Street United Church

In memory of the late William and Mary Johnson, there will be unveiled and dedicated in Bridge Street United Church on Sunday morning, a baptismal font, the gift of their son, Mr. James Johnson, of Boston, Mass. The font will harmonize with the woodwork of the church and will be placed at the right side of the communion table.

The donor, Mr. James Johnson will be unable to attend at the ceremony. It is expected that His Honour Judge DeCosse who succeeded Mr. Johnson as superintendent of the school, Mr. Fred S. Deacon, a former superintendent, Mr. F. D. Diamond, Inspector H. J. Clarke and Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker will take part in the ceremony. Rev. James Semple, D.D., officiating and pronouncing the dedicatory prayers.

The memorial baptismal font will recall that the late William Johnson was one of the outstanding superintendents and Sunday School educators on the continent. In his day the Bridge Street (then Methodist) School reached a membership of over one thousand, and it was said of Mr. Johnson that he knew everyone who had ever been a member of the school in his day by his or her first name and so called each one of them. The font is therefore peculiarly fitting in the light of Mr. Johnson's great love for children.

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Johnson was well known to Bridge Street Church members, for many a meeting was held there and Mr. and Mrs. Johnson verily touched the heart and souls of the scholars, the teachers and officials, and church members and adherents and friends got beyond the bounds of the congregation.

Mr. Johnson at one time was given a complimentary tour by the people of the church and school of Bridge Street to the Holy Land, on the occasion of one of the greatest gatherings of western Christians in Palestine.

Mr. Johnson died in October 1915. He was born in County Antrim, Ireland, in 1843, his ancestors having been settlers on the borders of England and Scotland.

As the years have declined the parting, they have also mellowed the names of these two former members of the school and congregation. The present school members will attend though only some members of the adult classes, teachers and officials will recall Mr. and Mrs. Johnson themselves, but all know the memory of this great leader and his wife. Among others present at the service will be former pastors and friends.

A portrait of Mr. Johnson will be in place on the easel at the morning service.

Local Taxi Operators Don't Appreciate Joke

Answering calls of a phoney nature have been a source of constant bother to local taxi drivers recently. It has come to the point whereby local taxi operators have been calling for certain addresses in order only to arrive and find no fare and at least four or five other taxi drivers on the scene answering the self-same call.

Thursday night local taxi drivers have been called to pick up fares at out-lying points near the city limits only to arrive and find the call a hoax and at least four taxi men arriving simultaneously to answer the same phoney call. Local taxi drivers first complained to the local Bell Telephone Company officials. In an effort to check the matter. Today, however, a delegation of taxi drivers placed their case in the hands of the police.

"This practice of calling in phoney calls to numerous taxi drivers at the same time and giving the identical address has gone far enough. It has advanced far past the 'April fool,'" complained the taxi delegation. The matter will be further taken with the local Telephone Company's officials in an effort to stamp out the practice.

CAUGHT IN ACT POLICE ALLEGE

Safe Breaking Attempt at Shannonville Brings Iwan

HIM UP

Charged with attempted safe breaking Ivan Hill, Shannonville, was arrested in Vivian's garage by Provincial Detectives early this evening. Hill was lodged in the police station and was remanded until Tuesday.

According to statements given out by Provincial Constable Wm. McBrien, who investigated the case and made the arrest, Hill was loitering in the vicinity of Vivian's garage, Shannonville, for a considerable period of the last evening, he being well known in the employees of the garage. It is alleged, that Hill closely followed the routine of the workmen and when all employees of the garage were engaged in repair work at the rear of the building, for a certain time, he cautiously slipped into the office and opened the door of the office safe. He was alleged to have been caught in the act of pulling out the cash drawer in the proprietor.

Hill was not asked to make a statement at the time of his apprehension. Further evidence will be submitted during Hill's preliminary hearing at which Provincial Police also added this morning.

Hamilton Man Dies Suddenly While Attending Concert

Hamilton, Ont., April 25 (CP)—Hamilton's "theatre boom" burgher made the richest of his many heats, when he stole 365 cash, two gold watches, a diamond ring, and other jewelry from Mr. David Dugan's home. The burglar seems to operate only when many citizens are attending theatres or concerts.

Stricken by a heart attack while attending the first concert of the season of the Hamilton Philharmonic Society, Dr. Frederick Adams, 70, died suddenly in the Hamilton Auditorium last night.

Dr. Adams was seated in the centre of the fifth row of the auditorium when he suddenly collapsed. Physicians in the audience rushed to his assistance, but he died before he could be taken to hospital.

Dr. Adams was a member of the choir of Centenary United Church and was a prominent member of the Hamilton Musical Association.

He was born in Ireland and came to Canada in 1888. He was a graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, and was a member of the Hamilton Medical Association.

He is survived by his widow, a son and a daughter.

Belleville Chapter O. E. S. No. 55 Install Officers For Ensuing Year

The beautiful and brilliant Installation ceremony of Belleville Chapter, No. 55, Order of the Eastern Star was held Thursday evening in Ashmodai's Academy. Mrs. Mildred Adams, retiring Matron; presided and cordially welcomed the large number of visitors and members in attendance. Nearly 400 were present and Minerva Chapter, Napanee Chapter, Quinte Chapter, Bancroft Chapter, Trenton Chapter, Kingston Chapter, Unity Chapter and Corinthian Chapter, Toronto, were each represented.

Mrs. Anna G. Boyd, Past Worthy Grand Matron, officiated as installing officer and was ably assisted by Mr. R. H. Liddle, P.P., as Grand Patron; Mrs. Flossie Smith, P.M., as Grand Marshal; Mrs. Bessie Gillis as Grand Organist; Mrs. M. J. Barlow, P.D.D.G.M., as Grand Chaplain; Miss Mary Carmichael as Grand Secretary; Mrs. Gladys Price as Grand Warder and Mr. William Brooks as Grand Sentinel; also Miss A. L. Jones, P.M.; Mrs. Beatrice Rumberry, P.M.; Mrs. Essie Mayler, P.M.; Mrs. Mary Lewis, P.M. and Mr. R. D. Adams, P.M.; Mr. W. Quinlin Boyd, A.G.P., Mr. W. M. Barlow, P.P., and Mr. F. G. Woodside, P.P.

Mrs. Liddle Worth Matron

Amidst prevailing beauty and solemnity the following officers were installed:

Worthy Matron, Mrs. Thelma Liddle; Worthy Patron, Mr. Charles Brown; Associate Matron, Mrs. Gracie McEwan; Associate Patron, Mr. Harry Sager; Secretary, Miss Mary Carmichael; Conductress, Mrs. Letya Smith; Associate Conductress, Mrs. Lillian Law; Chaplain, Mrs. Helen Rumberry; Marshal, Mrs. Dorothy McClahon; Organist, Mrs. Elizabeth Adams; Adah, Mrs. Ethel Croft; Ruth, Miss Clare McEwan; Esther, Mrs. Ethel Dunsany; Martha, Mrs. Mae Soare; Electa, Mrs. Kathryn Adams; Warder, Mrs. Mildred Daniels; Sentinel, Mr. Geo. Adams.

The beautiful solos of Mrs. Marjorie Hodges, Past Matron of Corinthian Chapter, Toronto, were an added feature of the pomp and solemnity of the installation ceremonies.

Miss A. Irene Hallam, P.M., presented Mrs. Ethel Adams retiring Matron, with her Past Officers' Jewel and paid tribute to her splendid success during her term of office. Mr. Arthur Mayler, P.P., presented Mrs. Ainsworth, retiring Patron with his jewel and complimented him on his term of office. The immediate Past Worthy Matron and the immediate Worthy Patron thanked the Chapter for their kindness and expressed deep gratitude for the excellent co-operation from the officers and members who had made their year such a happy one.

Newly Installed Team Chapter

The newly installed Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron thanked the Chapter for the high honor which had been conferred upon them and pledged themselves to uphold the high ideals and standards of the chapter during their year. In their new capacities as Worthy Matron and Worthy Patron they thanked all who had contributed to their success in having the installation a success and attended a cordial welcome to all present.

On behalf of the Past Patrons' Club, Frank Reynolds presented the retiring secretary, Miss Nellie Goldsmith with a small gift as a tribute and memory of their five years of happy association during their years in office. The recipient thanked the Past Patrons most graciously for their lovely gift.

After the close of the chapter a delicious lunch was served by the refreshment committee. The dance music delightfully played by the Belle Hop orchestra was thoroughly enjoyed.

Just Human Interest Yarns Profound as Human Heart

"A human interest yarn", gently only baby. If anything....if anything should happen, well, we'd like to have her just as she was ....sleeping."

editor, "Tell me, reporter, what is the editorial desk, scenting a dead day for local and wire copy. "Yes?" responds the reporter. "Little stories here and there, on the streets, around the town. Just like that. Hazy, Like"....

Nelson Burgess, address unknown, or at least unsettled, is a transient visitor in the city today. Seventeen years or so ago he used to lob "pipe pipe" and "plum puddings" from a trench mortar battery, over in the general direction of the German lines, while that big scrap was on. Just for the moral support of the 3rd Division front line troops over whose heads he was shooting.

For saving the life of a buddy (often one of the big 60-pounders failed to clear the parapet, but bounced back into the trench, he was given a nice new shiny Military Medal, name engraved on rim.

This morning ex-gunner Burgess boarded the Bellevue breaks. His waitress at past restaurant does sniffing at morning coffee and doughnuts inside. The reporter scented it. Just from general observation, and pointed out the location of the United Veterans' headquarters. Breakfast, anyhow, even if dinner isn't in sight and even if Sergeant-at-Arms isn't there he'll go next.

Not all is dramas, etched and figured in the every day pattern of human affairs in the small city. For example: Overall-clad and elderly, he approached the clerk of a downtown news store. "I want a paper. Don't care so much what kind it is for the name of S. Haven't bought a paper to read in nigh onto forty years. This one's just to wrap things up in."

Where over-sized rats squeal and battle over choice pickings at the city garbage dump by night, the regular corps of lump pickers scrape and forage and borrow daily for their scant pickings by day through the refuse of the city's garbage cans. Not a few among them are for some break in their humdrum existence. Such was the case of Joe ..... who found the ring. It was a big ring, embossed and a big diamond it was. They believe, although Joe was not talking about it at the time, That's how he got the ring. The ring they say was wrapped up in tissue paper which was found bound up in a bundle of old letters and bits of red twine, which Joe idly unwrapped. Now everything is unwrapped. Maybe——

Little stories they are. Stories of every day men and women with more or less humdrum lives in those who figure. They seldom make the news. They happen and are forgotten. Chauffeurs and farmers and local clerks, cobblers, girls who serve you at your favorite table all have their stories.

Mrs. Harry Davis of Melrose, spent Thursday with her son and mother, Mrs. William Marshall, she was accompanied by Mrs. Arnold Bell.

Mrs. Orland J. Bertrand of Whitney returned home on Monday after spending a couple of weeks with her parents, Rev. J. F. and Mrs. Kent.

The play, "Wild Ginger" given in the Orange Hall on Wednesday evening, by a group of Fuller people was much enjoyed. The cast attached to this play has been presented by these artists.

PASSENGER RATE IS CUT ON JUNE 1

13 Per Cent Reduction Brings Down Rate to 2½ Cents Per Mile

Montreal, April 24 (CP)—Substantial reduction in railway passenger fares in Canada will become effective on June 1, it is announced by C. P. Riddell, chairman of the Canadian Passenger Association. Basic fares for first class coach travel are being reduced approximately 13 per cent, bringing them approximately to pre-war level.

Under the basic rate the new rates will also be good for passage of bona fide members on journeys of regular berth fares for that class of accommodation. Round trip tickets will be good for six months instead of the present limit of 30 days. There will be a reduction in costs of standard parlor and sleeping car accommodation.

One U. S. Line Reduces

New York, April 25 (CP)—On June 3—One day after railway fare cuts announced by the Canadian Pacific—reductions become effective in the Dominion, at least one railroad of the Eastern United States has taken notice.

The Baltimore and Ohio has filed its schedule in conformity with an order of the Interstate Commerce Commission that passenger rates in the east be fixed at two cents a mile in coaches and three cents a mile in Pullmans.

PRESENTATION

On Thursday evening, a large circle of friends and neighbours gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Houston, Shannonville and presented their daughter, Clara, with a miscellaneous shower. Miss Josie Fitzgerald read the address:

"Dear Clara and Floyd,

"We as friends and neighbours are gathered here tonight to extend to you our very heartfelt congratulations and to spend a social evening with you, in honor of the step you have taken. You Clara, have lived among us all your life, many of us here have known you from childhood, then on to girlhood and now you have won friends in this new step you have taken. We are going to miss you in social activities for us, but are glad to know you are not going to live far from us. You Floyd are no stranger to us and we welcome you as a friend. It almost came in a time like this every one has so much advice to offer, we will not do it.

"When everything goes crooked
And seems inclined to rile
Don't kick or fuss or holler
Just smile
"It's hard to learn the lesson
But learn it if you win
When people take your pester
Just grin
"Now you grin."

"We now ask you to accept these gifts not for the value of them, but the friendship and love given in, May they remind you of all your friends, May God bless you both in your new home."

Signed on behalf of your Millstown friends— Josie Fitzgerald, Sadie Fitzgerald, Ina Bell, Mrs. Orland Bell."

The happy couple received many lovely and useful gifts of money, fine silver, linen, china and kitchen utensils, both replying in a few words expressing their thanks for all for their gifts and giving all a hearty invitation to call and see them in their new home.

Mrs. Harriett Toppings, President of Women's Guild, called the bride to receive a gift, from that organization, and Mrs. Reverend Kent read the following address:

"Dear Clara,

"Everyone is gathered here this evening to honour you and to bid you show upon you and Floyd gifts that you may cherish in your new home. The Women's Guild of Trinity Church, Shannonville, also wish to remember you and we are using this happy occasion to show our sincere appreciation for your work which you so generously contributed to our Guild. While you are not on actual member of our Guild at present, we hope in the future we may have you as a member. We have at all times fully appreciated your help in our work and we would like at this time to present you with a gift for your new home. We also wish to extend our heartiest congratulations and very best wish for many years of happiness, together. And we earnestly hope that in the future as in the past we may be honoured with your help.

Signed on behalf of the members of Women's Guild, Trinity Church, Shannonville."

The bride was the recipient of a beautiful silver service, and thanked the members heartily for the kind remembrance.

A LEAGUE DEMONSTRATION

Toronto had a grim suggestion last week of what the next war might bring as young men acting for the League of Nations, Canadian branch, appeared on the streets wearing modern gas masks. Planes dropped literature in the form of bomb-shaped pamphlets, calling attention to the terrific cost of the late war in lives and wealth.

British newspapers and magazines have used similar pictures as a warning of what the British people may have to face in the form of gas and air raids in time or in event of another struggle.

Britishers are not thoughtless of what might occur in another war. The scenes in Toronto were doubtlessly not so deeply impressed upon the minds of the Canadians who saw the gas-masked men as they would be upon Britishers. Yet war is not an impossibility but Canadians have felt security so long they cannot feel as Europeans do.

Canadians are earnest supporters of enduring peace, for they do not want war. But for all their zeal and for all their sense of security in Canada it was as they the Canadian branch of the League of Nations to point out that war if it broke out might mean many unheard of things.

It was a good gesture which should not fail to build up the League which is passing through hard days.

BRAVE DAYS OF 1936

"The brave days of old" of which Macaulay sang in his story of Horatius at the Bridge holding back the hordes of the enemy while others chopped away the bridge behind him, were no braver than the days of 1936 in a Canadian gold mine which had to close down the shaft and held men prisoners. Horatius fighting with his companions against the mighty host of enemies had tangible foes to face, but the miners had not. Both had their courage and their zeal; they had not such a fighting chance as Horatius had some many centuries ago, if the earth and rock had fallen. They had to work to safeguard themselves and their fellow plans, they would not have had the opportunities Horatius had of saving himself when the bridge gave way, but confident and brave these men tirelessly day and night worked and at last smoled their way through.

They are the mighty men of valor of this year 1936. Their rescuers found it growing rapidly—the visible evidence of the public's appreciation of their selfless action. May it continue to grow.

These men have proven the men of today to be as brave as any that ever lived. Peace hath her triumphs in building brave men, no less renowned than war.

WORKING AMONG FINE MEN

The Frontier College, about whose work appeared a reference in this paper some days ago, cannot but feel proud of the Canadian miners in the Moose River Gold Mine rescue, as a good share of the work of the College is among men in the task of mining.

Many probably have not fully appreciated what the Frontier College is doing for men of this occupation and similar occupations. But now there are few who have not some conception of the work and life of a miner with the knowledge of this week's rescue in mind. These men who have given such a heroic demonstration of their worth and true humanity are just the men who seek knowledge such as the Frontier College with its talented and hard-working teachers can and does provide. The College also serves men in camps in many other industries, where the same heroic calibre is demonstrated at the call of duty.

PRINCE EUGENE AND HITLER

Many a former schoolby remembers the poem of "Blenheim", which he had to memorize and which accordingly sticks like first things. In that poem is mention of Old Prince Eugene who was done, "and he before his cottage door was sitting in the sun." The poet tells of the grandchild Wilhelmine and soon the poem reaches its height.

"Great praise the Duke of Marlborough won

"And our good Prince Eugene", and the poem ends with "it was a famous victory."

Now Hitler has rediscovered Prince Eugene, who died two hundred years ago this week. The Hitlerites love Eugene because he gave a drubbing to the French. Little Peterkin and Old Kaspar knew 'twas a famous victory but not why. Hitler also knows it was a victory.

And Hitler has also discovered that Prince Eugene who soldiered for over half a century fought against the Eastern foe, the Turk, while Sobieski, a Pole saved Vienna. Eugene was an Italian-Frenchman of Bourbon blood.

New York Times writer makes sport of the Nazi adoption of a Mediterranean hero as theirs but says this Nordic business was started by a Frenchman seventy-five years ago. The Germans, he says are stronger on the Absolute than on humor and have put this nonsense of Nordism into actual belief and practice.

THE LONG SPRING

I shall sit beside a violet
Hours and an hour
Watching
Flower.

And I shall wonder
At cloud and breeze
And mist and rain
Again and again.

Song shall be interpreted to me
So I may sing
My imagining.

Time will not prison
The slow sweet hours,
I shall not hear
The creped wings of fear.

My sleep shall be full
Of dreamless rest,
For no morrow
Can bring me sorrow.

BELLEVILLE CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IS TO BE COMMENDED upon the vigorous manner in which it has taken up the question of housing, realizing that there is a demand in this city for many moderate priced houses which can be constructed under the Dominion Housing Act. The Belleville Chamber of Commerce has arranged with the large financial institutions to participate in a movement which will permit every working man of Belleville to build and own his own home upon terms never possible before. Under the Dominion Government Housing Act a financial plan is provided whereby the prospective builder contributes twenty per cent to the cost, the government fifteen per cent and the financial company sixty per cent. In England thousands of homes have been built under a comprehensive housing scheme and are now owned by citizens who are paying off the cost in installments no greater than rent payments would be with the added satisfaction that the house is being paid for by the occupant of it. Not only are every payment stays in the building to be his entirely at the last payment. For some time United States authorities have been considering a similar housing plan, realizing that it would mean in providing employment and bringing back prosperity. Arrangements have been made to keep interest charges down to a minimum and Belleville can be changed into a city of home owners in a concerted movement which will provide employment for home workers and business men generally, taking a number off relief, thus benefitting the general taxpayer who has to provide the money for civic relief and municipal expenses generally. For five years Belleville has been at a standstill owing to the depression, and it is estimated that 55,000 new homes are needed in Canada to supply the deficiency. Then 25,000 new homes are needed to be erected yearly to meet the requirements of population increases. A continent wide home building movement would provide work for 400,000 men now idle, married men with families. Thus far very little has been done to take advantage of the Dominion Housing Act, and the progressiveness of the Belleville Chamber of Commerce in taking advantage of the Housing Act for the benefit of Belleville citizens can not be commended too highly. All arrangements for financing have been made by the Chamber and full information will be given to all interested as well as every assistance to prospective home owners.

MURDER WITH VARIATIONS is getting so common in the United States that the "best seller" novels are now all founded on murder motives and their titles in which the word MURDER is the chief feature. "Murder at the Vanities" "Murder at the Circus", "Manhattan Murder-ground" and similar murder grounded titles. If Uncle Sam's children are getting murder-minded he should do something about it. For instance give the gangsters more rope—also the perpetrators of crime of passion and liquor inflamed jealous-inspired careless handlers of poison and fire-arms. When a New York jury acquitted Ruth Snyder of murder, or any crime whatever in deliberately shooting a man lying in bed to his death they no doubt inspired many other crimes of passion to follow. When a jury of twelve persons decide that it is no crime to kill a friend in cold blood there is room for presumptive belief that such a theory may spread with alarming results. In the meantime the multiplicity of murder stories flooding the market indicates an unhealthy public sentiment about which something should be done. A ban on stories which use murder for a basic motif might well be considered.

AS SCADDING RELEASED FROM MINE—Chas A. Scadding, 44, essays a weak smile as rescue workers lift him from the top of the emergency shaft that held him for 36 hours at Moose River mine shortly after 10 when Scadding and two other men were entombed in the mine after a cave-in. Scadding and Dr. D. R. Robertson, well-known Toronto surgeon and owner of the 400-acre mine, came out alive shortly before midnight, April 22. A third man, Herman Magill, had died before rescuers broke through.

Parliament Hill Hears

By Wilfrid Eggleston

The life of an M. P. as imagined by the general public, or as described in most novels, is a very different business from the real thing.

In fiction the M. P. decides to run in an election "to serve his country." He rushes about the constituency overwhelming everybody with his personal magnetism and powerful oratory. When election day comes he scores a triumph at the polls but loses his opponent. He is hampered and feted. He gets $4,000 a year to go down to Ottawa and deliver a few epoch-making addresses to a spell-bound House of Commons. At a critical moment he rises in the House, and, by an unprecedented display of oratory, he makes—or breaks—the government. He is invited into the new ministry. He has—now with the rank of minister. He is an intimate friend and companion of the governor-general. When he is not dazzling the House with his oratory he is attending banquets in the Grand Ballroom of the Chateau Laurier.

* * * * *

In real life this picture needs a bit of touching up. A candidate usually walks a few years and does a good deal of wangling and lobbying before his name goes up for nomination at the party convention. The first time, or the second time, he may lose out at the convention. Eventually he is nominated, however, and the work starts in earnest. He visit every nook and cranny of his riding, address all sorts of meetings in all sorts of halls, keep circumspect, make as many promises as his prudence will permit, smoothe out jealousies and rivalries in the party machine, dig down into his own pocket generously to meet campaign expenses, neglect his own duties outrageously, neglect his home life and ties, drink, sleep and live election for six months.

Even at that he is not dead sure whether he will be elected. Last election only about one in four candidates made the grade, and for some of the defeated once it was the second or third effort.

* * * * *

But if he is elected, perhaps by a small handful of votes, he finds that his troubles are just started. If he is on the side which elected a government, he is expected now to find jobs for all the supporters in his riding. His party workers are looking for appointments, or contracts, or government assistance, or rewards of some sort. He begins to get a heavy mail.

If he is a doctor, a lawyer or an architect, he usually finds that he has to give up his profession. Either that or take an active partner. If he is a farmer, he may get along with an extra hired man. But plenty of M. P.'s, for the sake of the $4,000 a year (which is really $2,800, and was $3,600 before the cuts, when the deduction had come off) give up legal and medical practices which were worth from $3,000 to $10,000 or more a year.

Our M. P. usually finds himself several hundred or several thousand dollars in the hole because of campaign expenses, and he often decides it will be less tiresome in the long run to pay this off by installments than to rely upon the party chest. The party chest is largely regarded by the community as a weekly man. In receipt of large sums from the state. He is, therefore game for every charitable enterprise, bazaar, concert, church mission, agricultural fair, and what not in his riding. His time belongs to his constituency. He is the servant of the public. If he wants to get votes at another election he must give the people what they want, if he can.

* * * * *

In times of depression his mail is full of letters from people who want jobs for themselves or for somebody else. Since applicants are party backs fired from their jobs to make room for party heelers. Their wages reduced. Manufacturers want the tariff raised. Boards of Trade want him to get taxes reduced and the budget balanced.

Members get from 10 to 100 letters a day while they are at Ottawa. Very often it is a morning's work just to send replies to these. To actually carry out the requests and commissions in them is a much more serious matter.

* * * * *

As a corrective for the rosy picture in paragraph one, here is a realistic account of a typical day of a private member, as told this stage of the season:

9 a. m. Arrives at his room in the Buildings. Throws a bundle of letters, say 35 of them, on the desk, and calls his stenographer. Finds two letters of praise, three knocks and thirty requests of one sort or another. A messenger comes in with the Commons Journals and Hansards of yesterday. He dictates replies to the letters. Other members drop in to say a word. The telephone rings. He calls up one of the departments for information to go into one of his letters. One of the Gallery boys drops into see if there is any news. He tries to glance at the morning paper in between these activities. A fellow member knocks at the door and reminds him that the agriculture committee is meeting at 1130 this morning. He sends his stenographer away with only half the letters answered, and attends committee. This lasts until 1 p. m.

1 p. m. He comes back to find one of his constituents in his office, waiting for him. He has been passing through and thought he would look up his member. The two go to lunch together. When they come back the member excuses himself — there's an item coming up this afternoon for debate on which he wants to say something; and he must first look up what was said last year. He dumps through some Hansards and makes a few notes. By now the carillon bells are ringing, and he knows that the bell will ring any moment calling the House to prayers.

* * * * *

3 p. m. The House assembles. Papers are tabled. First readings of bills are given. The Orders of the Day are reached. Our member has a question to ask. Then he dashes out again to his room to complete his notes. He comes back to find that the item of which he intended to speak has already been reached and passed. He gets up on a later item hoping to be able to mention it, but is ruled out of order.

4.30 p. m. He is reminded that the agricultural committee is meeting this afternoon again. He wonders whether he should not stay in the House and watch the interests of his constituents there. Thinks on the whole he had better dodge back and forth between the committee and the House.

6 p. m. Goes up to dinner. Drops into the Commons reading room on his way back. Reads the home town paper, including an editorial criticizing him for lack of action regarding unemployment. Suddenly remembers that he still has two or three letters to get away. Works in his office until the bell rings again at eight.

8 p. m. Goes a little wearily down into the chamber. Finds a sleepy debate going on about a post office in New Brunswick. Decides he can relax for a few minutes. Sits in and plays a game of bridge in the lobby. A few minutes later the word circulates "They're on the agricultural estimates again. Gardiner's up." And our member persuades a bystander to take his place while he follows the votes for experimental stations and makes an ineffectual protest to the Minister against the creation of a new branch has been made in the estimates for the station in his own riding.

11 p. m. The bell rings briefly again; and the official day is over. Our member glances for a few minutes at the evening paper, which he has not had time to peruse, reads a couple of pages in a heavy work on economics which has been strongly recommended to him, and decides to call it a day.

HEROES OF MOOSE RIVER

By Veronica M. Spafford

An army marches forward
With never a drum nor fife.
No banner flies before them
To lead them in the strife.

No gaudy trappings deck them,
They're dressed in dungarees;
With drill and pick and shovel
They're fighting on their knees.

No bugpipe mark their coming,
Nor comrade to aid the fight—
Each man alone works grimly
By eastern's eerie light.

They make no glorious charges,
Nor venture their lives for gold.
They seek no nigher glorious
As soldiers did of old.

Like rats they burrow under
A mountain of shifting walls
To reach two helpless brothers;
Then overrule!

The world is amazed behind them,
The Dreager can lead the way
To prove that men in peacetime
Are Heroes Every Day!

CONCLUSION

Oh say
Can prayer work miracles
Now in this latter day?
At the
For they who pray will work,
And they who work will pray!

of the people of the Province. If a plan like that is presented, then we must study it to learn if it is permanently sound," declared Mr. Ellis.

At the coming convention on May 7, 1936, at which the new leader would be selected, the great speaker voiced only the hope, that one would be chosen who would combine the rugged integrity and sterling character of a Ferguson.

Mr. James F. Hill, K.C., for Hastings East, briefly preceded Mr. Thomson extending hearty congratulations to the officers and committees for the splendid outpost. "Keep up the good work and don't get discouraged, Mr. Hill. "I think we've got the Hepburn crowd on the run. Don't let them get back or underestimate him; he can turn corners pretty quickly."

De Same Thing

"When I talk of Hepburn I'm afraid to get started," confided Mr. Hill, then I think that he's the same number by now. When they came to power they intimidated with power. You know what promises they made, and what they are now keeping. Hepburn is the one man who introduced the spoils system, the unspeakable thing that is a disgrace to this province. But," warned Mr. Hill, "it would be no more than right than for us when we get back to power, to do just the same as they have done, to let all the Liberals out and hire Conservatives in their place."

Briefly Mr. Hill referred to the mounting cost of administration and penditures under the Hepburn regime, declaring that the increase so far has cost us about $250,000 and not a mile of it can be used as yet. "Before it is finished it will have cost four million," prophesied Mr. Hill, "and why they call it the Hepburn Highway I don't know; there is no Hepburn in it, it's the work of all in mine."

The Separate School Tax Bill was introduced by Mr. Hill to have been brought into the House in the dying moments of the session, and had been pushed through willy nilly before the people knew anything about it at all.

"They didn't know, what is was all about themselves. No one was given time to digest it. They did not have an object in view except that they carried it out. If anyone in Ontario wants separate schools, 100 per cent. would have voted against it. Mr. Hepburn has got that bill through or I quit, I resign', Yet, Hepburn knew no more about it than anyone in the House, but Mr. Hill, adding that the Provincial Conservative Party is "the most civil Government and the most economical."

Mr. Frank Cushing in a few brief remarks pointed out the necessity of a more inspirational one, most of which was supplied by the ladies in the audience. He said that he hoped to be the most vigorous workers of the Conservative Party, and urged others to emulate their example then there would be no doubt as to the result of the last election," he added. Mr. Cushing in his compliments to the Provincial Executive, the organization paid particular reference to Mr. Thomson's splendid administration and was going forward since they had assumed office.

President Praises

As President of the local organization, Mr. Harry Hollins, who acted as chairman throughout the evening welcomed the members and guest speakers and pointed out the convention was possibly the most in the organization. What we know now we have learned from experience, and only shown us the need to go to work and get busy, every one of the election cogs along well be on hook," he declared.

During the evening pleasing solos were rendered by Mr. James Hamilton and Paul Prudhomme. Mr. Arnott, They were assisted on the piano by Phil Braddock, who also offered several piano selections.

A vote of thanks was extended the Rec. Mr. Rowe and other speakers of the evening by Mr. H. H. Hollins, Chairman of the Meeting closed with the National Anthem.

EPIDEMIC OF CAR THEFTS PREVALENT

Dr. Stobie's Automobile Taken But Soon Recovered

Further warnings regarding the necessity of locking the doors of automobiles when left unattended in Belleville were issued by local police officials, as a result of police receiving numerous complaints regarding articles being stolen from automobiles parked in Belleville. Some of the stolen property has been recovered, but in other cases it would be to have all motorists lock their doors when leaving their cars, declared Chief Kidd today.

William Adams, 151 Foster Ave., reported that a number of articles from the rear seat of his parked automobile were stolen, but the car was recovered in Cobourg, having been driven there by thieves on Wednesday night, and in which was found two tennis rackets, valued at $15, which belonged to Mr. Adams. Another local car driver had a similar experience, but recovered automobile earlier in the day with the articles therein. Another local car driver had a similar experience, but recovered automobile earlier in the day with the articles therein. Another local car driver had a similar experience, but recovered automobile earlier in the day with the articles therein.

"An epidemic of automobile and accessory thefts prevails, and there is a source of worry to police throughout all of Eastern Ontario, and the only remedy will keep their motor cars locked tightly for a while at least," declared Provincial Police Officer of the Provincial Police today.

Dr. Stobie returned home from front of residence in the city where the doctor was making a call.

The news of the theft was rapidly broadcast throughout the entire part of the province with the result that the car was quickly recovered, being found abandoned on a side street in Trenton, and returned to the rightful owner.

Many traffic officers of the district were informed of subsequent motor vehicle thefts, and in each case an automobile, the property of George Montgomery, Frankford, was reported stolen. Only late last night and had not been reported to the police. The stolen vehicle was a Pontiac 1936 model sedan.

At the same time O.P.P. from Bancroft relayed information regarding the theft of two motor vehicle markers, taken from two different automobiles. The two motor vehicle license plates were Ontario markers numbering 6-7-8 and 6-7-9, as reported by the authorities that these markers are being carried on stolen cars in the province. Traffic officers are warned when issuing instructions to local motorists to keep their motor cars locked.

No arrests were made in Belleville up to last night, giving the ill-fated thief full access to the call block for sleeping quarters.

AT THE CAPITOL

Monday and Tuesday—Paul Kegan in, "Laughing Irish Eyes"

A fast moving Irish comedy, embanced with a generous sprinkling of heart stirring Irish songs and romantic ballads by Phil Regan, Irish tenor, laughs, tears and frequent applause from audiences who see "Laughing Irish Eyes" at the Capitol Monday and Tuesday.

Crackling Irish wit and comedy was put over with a smashing punch by such a stellar array of comedians as Walter Kelly, a recent screen discovery; Regan, former golden voiced radio singer; J. M. Kerrigan, Clarence Muse, Warren Hymer, Ray Walker and Herman Bing, Evelyn Knapp, spirited Irish lass, and Mary Gordon, beloved Irish screen "mother" furnished heart-throbbing pathos, romance and inspiration with their powerful portrayal of the Irish fighting spirit, whether it be laughing or love.

The idyllic setting of the Irish countryside provides the background for the opening half of the picture. There Regan, as an Irish colleen young Irish lad, charms Miss Knapp by singing the title song "Laughing Irish Eyes" into her ear through her father, the cantankerous Kelly, takes Regan to task as a result of his fight for his right stable, the girl listens to more of Regan's love songs and finally, Regan, then battles her dad to steal Regan into radio and matrimonial contentment.

The human hopes, the defeats, the tragedy, clashes and romance which goes on behind the scenes of the principal's office where Kelly is in charge of Regan's first Regan's first appearance before the public picture since he left the radio to find screen roles which gave ample opportunity for his superb tenor.

"In the ladies, a beautiful piece of Hostess Overware free, Monday and Tuesday Only—"Forty Only Nessun" and Dessert.

RKO Radio's drama, "We're Only Human," a story of a family doctor who thought he was courageous out, but who learned that true courage is after suffering the burning torments of fear.

Preston Foster plays the part of Detective Sergeant Pete McCaffrey and turns in an excellent character interpretation of a big bluesterin Police Officer who goes through a series of nerve shattering ordeals.

His heart interest is a girl reporter, played by Helen Flynn, whose performance, whose performance heralds her as a certainty for stardom.

2nd Hit—Preston Foster, Helen Flynn and the latest greatest of all the musical packs laughter, melody, romance and action into a single picture, packed in scenes of great beauty. The cast is headed by Jack Haley, Jack Oakie, Ned Sparks, Ruby Keeler—with Zasu Pitts, Guy Kibbee and Hugh Herbert.

The hostess was assisted in receiving the guests by Mrs. W. Walker and Mrs. C. Bateman invited the guests to the tea room. The rooms were attractively arranged with daffodils and tulips. Mrs. R. Wilson presided at the tea table which was laid with handsome lace cloth, daffodils and green tapers in silver candlesticks. Her assistants were Misses Alice and Helen Fargey, Mrs. K. Pigden, Mrs. P. Ransom and Mrs. W. Mills. The home cooking sale was very successful, in charge of Mrs. V. Weaver and Mrs. J. Young. The treasurer for the tea was Mrs. J. Miller.

2,000 GUESTS AT WEDDING TODAY

St. Paul's Cathedral Scene of Wedding of Son of Lord Halifax

London, April 25 (CP Cable)—Guard of honor formed by the Royal Horse Guards today at St. Paul's Cathedral when the Earl of Derby escorted his granddaughter, Miss Ruth Alice Primrose, to be married to Hon. Charles Wood, second heir of Viscount Halifax, the Lord Privy Seal.

The Archbishop of Canterbury officiated, assisted by the Bishop of Liverpool, and 2,000 guests, including 300 farm tenants from Lord Derby's Knowsley estate at Liverpool, attended. The rare spectacle of a wedding at the Cathedral attracted thousands.

The Earl of Hopetoun, son and heir of the Marquess of Linlithgow, Viceroy of India, was best man.

The 19-year-old bride wore a gown of "ivory sensy" cut on long slim lines, with tight sleeves and a flat-draped train. She wore a black coat with her travelling dress which was of white and rose flowered silk.

Primroses, color which has always been associated with the families of Lord Derby and Lord Rosebery, made the bridal chiffon dresses for the bridesmaids.

The King and Queen Mary made a joint gift to the bride of a white ostrich feather fan. The Princess Royal and the Duke of Harewood gave an antique French clock; the Duke and Duchess of Kent gave to the bridegroom, who is 22, gold sleeve-links set with rubies.

Teen-Aged Boy is Taken to Bowmanville

Mr. T. D. Ruston, inspector of the local Children's Aid Society, motored to Bowmanville with a charge to be placed in the Training School there. The ward, a teen aged boy, was committed to the training school by Magistrate E. J. Berney, K.C., following yesterday's session of local police court.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By Beatrice Fairfax

That venerable asexual "My wife doesn't understand me" has much to answer for in the loneliness and where men and women meet daily. Literally hundreds of letters have come to this column from girls who have drifted into unfortunate love affairs through pity, which, as the poet reminds us, is akin to love." Women are tremendous dispensers of pity. Make them sorry for something or someone, and the battle is won.

All said and done it's a good plan, when a married man tells you that his wife has never understood him, to give him an side a berth as if he had a decaying case of small-pox.

This non-understanding wife is the married man's barrage, thrown up very likely about some attractive girl working in the same office, factory or shop with him. He knows if he succeeds in making her sorry for him, it's comparatively easy to arouse her love and count on her favors.

I wish you could see the letters that have come in the town girls who have taken this first wrong turn down the crooked lane of misunderstood.

Pity is an adjunct of femininity. Lord knows that's the case, but the Lord made women that way. And this boundless girl pity has got to take chances with this heedless and wistful boy sleep. So, when a married man tells you how misunderstood or unappreciated and open talk of unhappiness into the ears of some sweet and silly girl who feels it's her mission in life to console the sad-eyed gentleman—let her beware.

There are one or two things for those easy girl sympathizers to remember. First of all, the gentleman who is capable of misusing the vast quantities of pity is thinking more of himself than of the girl friend. He hints vaguely about a divorce from the woman who bears his name, and who is the mother of his children, but it's a ghost-dream he's talking about nine times out of ten—and the ghost-divorce seldom materializes.

A quick "cure" for a love affair founded on pity has frequently been effected when the deeply sympathizing girls sees the marital martyr at the theatre or the movies with his wife, and they appear to the casual observer to be on the best of terms. Or when some friend says: "Did you know Mrs—has a new baby?" Then the girl realizes she has given her heart to a man who is utterly unfree.

The deafened and "unsympathetic" wife nearly always takes precedence over the girl who has broken on her heart and made a reputation trying to make things a little happier for a man who is just looking for a thrill. He comes back with—I'm quoting from hundreds of letters—something like this: "I love you more than anything in the world, darling, but I have to be humble and my position to consider."

Of course, those girls who write to me about the old, old familiar story of the married men misunderstood and open talk of unhappiness run into the ears of some sweet and silly girl who feels it's her mission in life to console the sad-eyed gentleman—sorry for them.

Good Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Cocktails to Coffee

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—When shrimps are served as cocktails in cocktail glasses?

2.—When salads, pickles, and cottage cheese are served in a large dish and put on the table, when the cocktail is served, how should they be eaten, and when?

3.—Would a liquor cocktail take the place or a "shrimp cocktail"?

4.—Would drinks of any kind be ordered before a meal?

5.—When a long and a short handled knife are given how should each be used?

6.—When spiced meat and cottage cheese are served as first course should the meat be cut with the meat knife?

7.—How does the word "Anti-pasto" mean?

8.—Are finger bowls eaten with the fingers? Where should the bonus be put?

9.—Just how does one go about eating a "buffet supper" at a club dance?

10.—When the gentleman wears a business suit to a club dance does a lady wear a long dinner gown or a street length dress? Does a lady wear a dinner dress when a gentleman wears a Tuxedo to a club dance?

11.—When the invitation reads "formal" how should the lady and gentleman dress? Dinner dress and Tuxedo, or does it mean a sleeveless dress for the lady?

W.

It's best not to cut the shrimps that are used in a shrimp cocktail as if they are too large to eat easily conveniently they are cut in half.

2.—Relishes of most kinds (such as celery, radishes, olives) should be served before the serving of the first course or just after the first course has been placed. They may be passed by the waiters, or passed by the guests from one to the other. However, the relishes are to be considered as part of the meal and if they are there you need not think they are passed after the main course has been served.

3.—There are two types of cocktails. . . liquor cocktails and food-cocktails. A liquor cocktail is served before a meal, usually in the living room, with simple food-accessories such as olives, nuts, canapes. A food cocktail such as a shell-fish cocktail, or a fruit cocktail, is served as a first course of a meal, at the table.

4.—The usual drinks that are served before a meal are sherry, dry or sweet or medium, or an aperitif. In a quite different class are such specialties as orange juice, grapefruit juice, and the ever-popular tomato juice, or a combination of tomato juice and clam juice. Sophisticated hostesses nowadays give their guests a choice of the plain or a "shrimp cocktail"? I have mentioned. It's an excellent idea, just as, after dinner, it is an excellent idea to have a choice between coffee and a coffee-substitute.

5.—The way you can tell which is the salad knife is by the way it is used. In other words, it is not to observe their order. Silverpieces are placed for us, or should be, in the order in which we are to use them, and we begin with the silverpieces that are farthest away and proceed to those nearer the plate.

6.—This depends on the guest. Some guests always like to have both the knife and the fork given them to use. Others are more "fork-conscious", and make their forks do all the work.

7.—Antipasto is the Italian word used to make the various relishes served at the beginning of a meal. It is the Italian equivalent of the French hors d'oeuvres.

8.—It is most careful eating . . . and let's too easy . . . to eat fingr. legs with the fork. They are in the same class with chicken. The bones are left on the dinner plate . . . not put on the bread-and-butter plate.

9.—If you are with a man at the dance, he will attend to your service. If you are serving yourself, you go to the buffet table, take a plate with the napkin on it, and a fork or a knife and fork. Then you pass around the table and serve yourself to whatever you choose.

10.—When a man wears a business suit to a party, the women will be appropriately dressed to his informality, wear a street length dress. When the man wears a Tuxedo, the woman wears a dinner dress.

11.—When an invitation indicates a formal party, the woman wears a formal evening dress and the man wears "tails", formal evening attire.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to receive questions for Good Manners submitted by readers.)

THE KETTLE ON THE HOB

Canadians are by far the greatest drinkers of tea on the American continent. With an ancestry steeped in tea it would be surprising if things were otherwise. In "the good old days" every household pot was ever ready on the hob—as it is in most farmhouses today.

Although we have grown grand in the cities—and no longer have "hobs" in the average Canadian household, the kettle is put on the gas or electric stove in the middle of the morning—just as soon as the place is fairly straightened out—and Mrs. Average Housewife sits down in her white enamelled kitchen to enjoy her cup of tea. Progress may have changed the house and the stove—but it has only intensified the habit—and varied it a little—because in this year of grace 1936 during the summer months the tea is more likely to be iced than hot.

Final Rehearsals For College Play

Many people will remember the Albert College dramatic production of last year, "The Youngest," by Phyllis Barry. At the present time the final rehearsals for the annual play are being held at the College. "The Torchbearers" will be presented Friday evening next.

The photoplay, "Doubting Thomas" appearing in this city several months ago, starring Will Rogers, was based on a play by George Kelly. Again this year the students of Albert College and of the Conservatory are uniting under the direction of Miss Jessie B. Tutle, all of which ensures a production of high merit. It is expected that "The Torchbearers" will have an even wider appeal than had "The Youngest" of last year.

COOKING SCHOOL AT THE CAPITOL INTERESTS WOMEN

Mrs. Aitken, Dietician of Canada Starch Company in Charge

RADIO PERSONALITY

Describes Scenes on Board Walk and 5th Avenue During Easter Parades

A radio personality, whose charming voice is familiar to thousands of housewives on the air regularly, was introduced in person to a Belleville audience yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Aitken, dietician of The Canada Starch Company, Limited, conducted a very successful cooking school at the Capitol Theatre under the auspices of two groups of the Bridge Street United and Victoria Street United Church.

Mrs. Aitken, who had come to tell her audience of the latest developments in the field of home economics, combined the excellence of Crown Brand Corn Syrup, Lily White Corn Syrup, Benson's Cornstarch and Mazola products of the Company she represented, and showed how they could be introduced to add that subtle difference which distinguishes cooking, that is a bit out of the ordinary. Mrs. Aitken was introduced to the large audience by Mrs. R. C. Sisler, president of the Association, and was at once at home with the gathering.

The well arranged stage, with curtains from the Percival Store, became everybody's kitchen as Mrs. Aitken began her demonstrating task after a sing song led by Mr. Elmer Dixon.

Prepares Whole Meal

Deftly Mrs. Aitken prepared a meal for the "Silver Wedding Anniversary of the Smiths of Belleville," using simple basic recipes with a novel twist to make them a little different. As she demonstrated the proper methods of mixing and cooking, she gave her audience dozens of hints on short-cut methods well tried, and proven, and for the benefit of the less experienced cook dwelt on the cardinal principles of good cookery. Learn the basic rules of every form of cooking and then rebound, she advised the hearers. Into the cooking of many dishes went the famous Corn Brand Syrup and Mrs. Aitken told of recent research by doctors, which gave a new importance to this product in its administration to patients to give them new strength at critical times.

First were shown a number of delicious puddings—Ile Flottante—Creme and these delectable morsels were made as appealing to the eye as they were to the taste. Mrs. Aitken showed her audience how to make a delicious pudding sauce, the secret of the success of this part of the meal. Manila dressing prepared by Mrs. Aitken was used, Benson's Cornstarch and Mazola products of the Company she represented, and showed how they could be introduced to add that subtle difference which distinguishes cooking, that is a bit out of the ordinary. Mrs. Aitken was introduced to the large audience by Mrs. R. C. Sisler, president of the Association, and was at once at home with the gathering.

which was the last word in dainty dessert appeal, small iced cakes, rolls, an Easter lamb cake and the coveted prize, the wedding cake, topped with silver trimmings.

Impressed With Knowledge

The audience present was impressed with the knowledge and skill of the demonstrator and listened attentively to her discussion of the fine points of cookery. They learned, too, for the well known products of the Canada Starch Company, and as they talked over the recipes among themselves, the conviction was frequently heard, "I am going to try that recipe in my own home."

As the finished dishes were placed in an interesting arrangement on the tables, Mrs. Aitken served a Springtime bouquet and tall cream cakes in silver holders. Mrs. Aitken took her audience on a trip to New York for the Easter holiday. Interesting person, who has met many world figures including royalty, had much to tell the women of the festival day in that metropolis. Attendance at church on Sunday, she said, was largely a social event, and the dress parade which followed was one to set at rush and such church were the "in" places to secure a ticket only. The edifices were decorated with Easter lilies and mentioning especially the Church of St. John the Divine, and St. Patrick's Cathedral, Cardinal Hayes celebrated Pontifical High Mass, which is the most impressive ritual of the Catholic church. Many worshippers at the Salvation Army and Citadel services, were attracted.

Mrs. Aitken told of the fun of accompanying an N.B.C. announcer, Ilay Hall, on Sunday broadcasts through a microphone with a hidden camera, to Central Park daffodils at the Botanical Gardens and Bronx Zoo, and the conclusion that Canadian women need never go to the United States for their clothes, the costumes are just the same as they wear at home. Just as true of the home furnishings, for her comparison of arrangements of budget apartments she found American reflecting better taste.

Following Mrs. Aitken's talk, lucky tickets were drawn and the holders were invited to the platform where Canada Starch products. The cooking was then judged and the following ladies captured the appetizing wares: Mrs. M. MacDonald, Mrs. M. Miller, Mrs. Ivan Mullen, Mrs. Fred Lester, Mrs. T. Barrett, Mrs. Fred Bateman and Mrs. W. Brown.

The flowers were won by Miss Mildred Stewart and the candlesticks by Mrs. George Laughlin and Mrs. Everett Smith. The prize to feature the wedding cake was to have been presented to the couple whose twenty-fifth wedding anniversary was approaching or the nearest anniversary year. Mrs. D. O. Walker, who was married twenty-three years yesterday was the case. Arrangements for the successful affair were in charge of groups of which Mrs. Florence Moon and Mrs. D. O. Walker, Mrs. B. A. Fanning and Mrs. W. H. Ellis are co-convenors. Miss Ivy Dickens treasurer of the Association was in charge of the funds.

IF MODERN CLEANS IT'S O-L-E-A-N

THERE are times when the healthful action of baby's system becomes sluggish and clogged.

The problem is what laxative is best to restore the action of functioning normally again. Is a grown-up's laxative safe enough for him? Doctors advise against it. They say a laxative made for a grown-up can be too harsh for a child's delicate system. It can cause griping, cramping pain.

That's why doctors recommend the laxative made especially AND ONLY for children—CASTORIA.

CASTORIA will not act in a strong, "adult" way. There isn't a single irritating ingredient in it. No harsh, purging drugs. No narcotics.

Even the taste of CASTORIA is made to appeal to children. They are not afraid to take it. And it should be glad that they aren't.

For the revulsion a child feels when forced to take a nasty-tasting laxative can throw his entire system out of order—undoing all the good done.

So stop on the safe side and get CASTORIA today. Every drug store sells it. If you've thrifty you'll ask for the family-size. It lasts longer—saves you money.

"Villans" in second Division

London, April 26 (CP Cable) Aston Villa's heavy expenditure a few months ago on first class players failed to keep the famous old club in the first division of the English Football League. The Villans were beaten at home 3 to 2 by Blackburn Rovers today and the pair, as a result, will play in the second division football next year for the first time in their long history.

Obituary

JOHN GRAY

One of the oldest residents of Port Credit, and co-founder of its principal industry, the G. F. Lawrence Starch Company, John Gray died suddenly at his home in Port Credit, Thursday, April 23rd. Mr. Gray was in his 92th year—celebrating his 94th birthday April 10th.

Mr. Gray was born in Scotland on April 10th, 1842. As a young man he came to Canada and in 1888, with Mr. Farch Robinson, he founded the present G.F. Lawrence Starch Company, familiar to all who have motored through Port Credit. From a modest beginning he watched his company's steady growth, preserving, until his death, his position as Chairman of the Board. Mr. Gray was one of Canada's outstanding pioneer industrialists.

Mr Gray was particularly active for a man of his age, making regular trips to the Company's offices. On January 31st of this year he presided at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors of the Company at the age of 93 years.

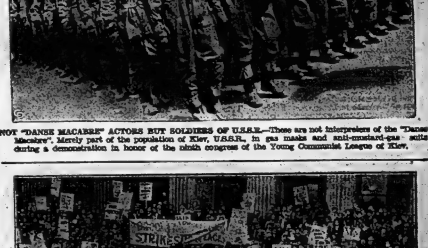
At their service last Sunday members of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Port Credit, paid tribute to Mr. Gray's activity and long connection with the church. He was one of the twelve founders and his death leaves only one of the twelve, Mr. Macfarlane, still alive.

Regular yearly trips to Scotland were a part of Mr. Gray's life. The last of these trips was made four years ago at the age of 90 years.

Surviving Mr. Gray are four sons: John M. Gray of Port Credit; W. T. Gray, Port Credit; James Gray, Islington; and Alexander Gray, Toronto; and two daughters Mrs. T. U. Simpson of Seattle, Wash., and Miss Agnes M. Gray of Port Credit. The funeral service will be held Saturday, April 25th, at 2.30 p.m. in the St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Port Credit.

MRS. JOSEPH LUTTON

After a lengthy illness Mrs. Lutton, wife of Mr. Joseph Lutton, passed away at the family residence, 279 George Street.



The late Mrs. Lutton was born in Ireland 87 years ago, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. Matthew Campbell. For over fifty years she had resided in Belleville and old friends will learn of her passing with regret.

In early life and prior to her marriage, Mrs. Lutton was active in the business life of the city, being associated with the old firm of Geo. Ritchie and Co. She was a staunch Methodist many the traits of character and throughout her long life she was most highly esteemed by all who knew her. In religion she was a member of the church of England and one of the oldest members of Christ Church parish, having been active in the work of the Woman's Auxiliary for many years. The late Mrs. Lutton was very fond of children and a great friend of all little ones.

Surviving her besides her husband, Mr. Joseph Lutton, are two sisters in Ireland, and one brother, Mr. William Campbell, of Edmonton, Alberta.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this paper.

O.R.F.U. Prexy, Secretary Explains Rules and History Of Football in the Dominion

J. De Gruchy And Harold Bailey Give Interesting Details

REFEREES CRITICIZED

Officials This Season to be Appointed By O.R.F.U.

Sponsored by the Belleville Rugby Football Club an open meeting to discuss playing rules and the technical points of the autumn classic was held on the T.M.C.A. floor on the second night and the clubs comprising the Lake Shore group of the O.R.F.U. last evening. The principal speakers of the night were Mr. John DeGruchy, president of the O.R.F.U. and Mr. Harold Bailey, secretary of the same body. Both gave addres , brought in the well-attended gathering of football enthusiasts encouragement and advice on both their particular realm of sport. Although Mr. DeGruchy spoke on the rules of the game, Mr. Bailey went further to give enlightened talk of the rules and history of the game and technical points of the games, which have been so ably handled by the Lake Shore region.

In opening Mr. C. C. MacLaurin, president of the Belleville Club not only welcomed the visitors but the splendid gathering of interested citizens assembled, including a large delegation from Peterboro. "Rugby football is the most scientific team game I know of and we hope to see the day when the game will flourish more successfully in our midst. Of course the game is not as old as lacrosse in Belleville, but the citizens have shown a splendid support for football this year and we are always in the hopes of a football club eventually coming 'in our direction," concluded Mr. MacLaurin.

Father of Game Read.

Mr. John DeGruchy, father laughed rugger football in Canada today and president of the O.R.F.U. gave a brief talk on the history and advancement of the game. "Football was played in Canada 100 years ago. When the Crooks had a football game, but in those days a football was a ball. They had no rules, may tell you the forward pass is modern, it is not. It was only now used as our forward pass was then introduced into a game similar to football by the Romans," explained Mr. DeGruchy. Getting back to more modern times the speaker told of the modern revival of football in Toronto in the year, 1861, the introduction of the game in Upper Canada in 1880 when games were played between teams from Toronto and Detroit. "Then came the organizing of the O.R.F.U. in 1907 and today rugby football flourishes throughout the more heavily populated "belt of our Dominion," stated Mr. DeGruchy. "Some people will tell you the game is too rough, but between players which causes rough play, deserves censure. Sometimes it creates a hatchback capable of going into the line, but he is not always able to take the knocks. It teaches its people self-confidence and manly courage and develops the mind and body. The future of rugby football depends on the manly conduct in Central Ontario and we of the O.R.F.U. will defend you," added the speaker.

In ending Mr. DeGruchy left some splendid advice to the younger element present. "Boys, play the game for the game's sake, be a good sport and you will become citizens we will all be proud of," was the advice he offered. Mr. MacLaurin thanked the speaker for his good wholesome advice.

Rose Into Fame.

In trying to explain the rules of the game and clarify them for the edification of players, coaches and officials, Mr. Harold Bailey, secretary of the O.R.F.U., ran into a snag at the meeting when the Peterboro delegation repeatedly criticized past officials in the Lake Shore group. Mr. Bailey experienced difficulty in conveying to the Peterboro delegation that officials did make mistakes, as he termed it—"it is human to err". Finally the speaker eliminated the official complex and the changes of the playing rules, as suggested by the O.R.U. were explained.

In 1926 the football umpire will have equal jurisdiction with the referee in the calling of plays. At other change in the rules was the choice of the defending team after a field goal or touch-down has been scored against them. In the past the defending team had the option of either a kick or a scrimmage at their own 40-yard line.

Forward Pass Rule.

The rule whereby an offending team loses possession of the ball on a forward pass within the defending team's 25-yard line loses the ball, was reached on. In the past the offending team does not complete a forward pass inside the offending team's 25-yard line, and the ball does not pass the goal line of the defending team, the ball is brought back to where it is originally grasped out and the offending team loses a down and play continues, but if the ball is thrown over the defending team's goal line, under of the defending team's 25-yard line, the offending team loses possession of the pig-skin. The O.R.F.U. rules committee are endeavoring to work on a scheme or rule whereby one offending player may run interference around either end only, on runs. This rule is incomplete as yet as the rules committee do not desire to create missed plays. Suggestions and schemes to the better ing about of an interference play, around ends only, whereby plays may be opened up for the benefit of the fans will be appreciated from all clubs affiliated, Mr. Bailey explained.

Next autumn the O.R.F.U. may also introduce a new rule whereby it will be necessary to start the commencement of the third period at the identical position where play terminated at half time. This rule has not as yet been adopted, however. Other possible changes may occur to knotty problems in the rules were thoroughly discussed and explained by Mr. Bailey.

Referees Criticized.

One of the chief objections registered by the delegates present was the dissatisfaction of the referees and officials in the Lake Shore group in 1935. Mr. Bailey assumed the responsibility of appointing officials for the local group next autumn, which means all referees and umpires officiating in the Lake Shore region of the O.R.F.U. will be appointed by President DeGruchy or Secretary Bailey in 1936.

The meeting gathered a highly educational from all angles. Prior to the meeting President MacLaurin personally entertained the two distinguished guests at his home. Present at the meeting were officials of the Belleville club including Coach Ivy, Kennedy, Cox, Hutchinson and others.

From Peterboro' President Lon Brooks of the Peterboro' Football club, Coach Ted Hamilton and C. L. Young, coach, were on hand with Coach Ivy of the Trenton and Ernie Legon of the Peterboro' Collegiate.

IST TRIPLE PLAY OF SEASON BY DETROIT TIGERS

Eighth Triumph in Row Registered as They Down Rookies

ROYALS WIN

Toronto And Syracuse Idle Due to Cold Weather

Things are looking up for the baseball champions as they move on to the games in the American and National Leagues.

Prospects are brightening for Jimmy Dykes and the Chicago White Sox, the Tigers and the Cubs scored their eighth consecutive win, and considering the first time this season that the Detroit team has been able to put two wins together. They made it consecutive conquests, with the Tigers registering their first triple play of the season and Tommy Bridges finishing the 10-3 game as St. Louis Browns went down to defeat, 8-2. Lon Warneke, who failed to finish his previous starts, pitched errorless ball as the Cubs moved down Pittsburgh Pirates, 5-1.

In the other games, Cleveland Indians defeated Boston Braves, Brooklyn a pair of home runs and three costly Chicago errors to a 6-3 victory, Mr. Harold Bailey, secretary of the O.R.F.U., ran into a snag at the meeting when the Peterboro' delegation repeatedly criticized past officials in the Lake Shore group. Mr. Bailey experienced difficulty in conveying to the Peterboro' delegation that officials did make mistakes, as he termed it—"it is human to err". TUESDAY IS WRESTLING NIGHT IN BELLEVILLE

ANDY MOEN HAS PLEASING STYLE

Conceded Real Chance to Defeat The "Unknown"

Andy Moen, Minnesota Slate wrestling champion whose next job is to be an attempt to defeat and unmask "The Unknown" at the Queensbury Club's wrestling show at the Belleville Arena next Tuesday evening, was an outstanding amateur before he turned professional. He starred in the sport in the local group next autumn, which means all referees and umpires officiating in the Lake Shore region of the O.R.F.U. will be appointed by President DeGruchy or Secretary Bailey in 1936.

The meeting gathered a highly educational from all angles. Prior to the meeting President MacLaurin personally entertained the two distinguished guests at his home. Present at the meeting were officials of the Belleville club including Coach Ivy, Kennedy, Cox, Hutchinson and others. Mr. Chas. J. Symons represented the Parks Commission.

From Peterboro' President Lon Brooks of the Peterboro' Football club, Coach Ted Hamilton and C. L. Young, coach, were on hand with Coach Ivy of the Trenton and Ernie Legon of the Peterboro' Collegiate.

ANDY MOEN

Moen's pleasing style has won him thousands of admirers and he is a favorite in this district following his startling victory over the Sunday. He is conceded a real chance of beating The Unknown and there should be a slightest doubt but what he will have the whole-hearted support of the crowd when he goes to do so.

Sunny Dunlop, who will oppose Al Demlop in the semi-final, is one of the best beautifully built grapplers in the game and has plenty of durability. It looks like a rough evening for the rough and ready Sunny, judging by advance notices from Toronto.

Antoine Parkin, the "flying Frenchman", will have to step along at his speediest to cope with the attacks of Buffalo Joe, his opponent in the preliminary. The men appear to be well matched in every way and there is little to choose between them.

Yesterday's Stars

Van Lingle Mungo, Dodgers—Held Giants to eight hits and fanned nine to win, 8-5.

Lon Warneke, Cubs—Shut out Pirates for eight innings, allowed only seven hits and won, 6-1.

Hal Trosky and Earl Averill, Indians—Their homers led team to win over White Sox.

Charley Gehringer, Tigers—Batted in three runs on two hits and started first triple play of season which ended game.

Danny MacFayden, Reds — Outpitched Curt Davis to beat Phillies, 2-1.

Lefty Gomez, Yankees—Set down Senators with seven hits.

Dusty Rhodes, Athletics—Defeated his last year team mate, the Red Sox, by keeping eight hits well scattered.

Coulson of Argonauts Enters Diamond Sculls

Toronto, April 23 (CP)—Johnny Coulson, Toronto sculler, has been entered in the Diamond Sculls at Henley by the Argonaut Rowing Club, it was announced today.

Coulson, who has spent the winter in Europe under the training guidance of Eric Phelps, English professional, will not return to Canada before the middle and therefore will not be a competitor in the Canadian Olympic trials.

Canada's ranking entry in the Olympics probably will be Orest Campbell, Canadian and United States champion.

Mona Mills, Ont., April 25 — (CP)—Wall Disney's humanized pigs may have their living counterpart here. Harold Porter, farmer of this village, 30 miles northwest of Toronto, has a sick piglet into the kitchen for attention. There it lived for three weeks, feeding for a bottle. Now the little pig cannot be persuaded to leave the house. The farmer rocks it on his knee.

Brooklyn Dodgers Complete Rout of Giants With 8-2 Win

Judging by current results in two leagues, the relation between New York Yankees and Newark Bears is closer than the usual tie between a major league ball club and its minor league "farm".

The Yanks are doing some of the heaviest spring clouting in the major league while the Bears, leading the International League, are travelling at such a fast clip it already looks as if some of them are ready to move into higher company.

The Bears racked up their eighth triumph in a row yesterday with a display of timely at bat and steadiness on the mound to gladden the heart of any manager. Starting with a five run outburst that sent Ray Harrell to the showers in one inning, they trounced Rochester Red Wings 13-3.

The closest pursuers, Montreal Royals and Albany Senators, remained on the winning side, Montreal hitting out a 5-3 victory over Baltimore and Albany taking the home run route into third place by downing Buffalo Bisons 4-1.

Toronto and Syracuse again were kept idle by cold weather.

A trio of big leaguers, three promising young players, first baseman Johnny McCarthy, pitcher Ken Mc-Ullen and Ernie (Chief) Koy, an outfielder, led Newark's 13-hit assault. McCarthy and Koy made three hits apiece, while May belted a homer and triple in four trips to the plate. Koy also batted in four while Ralph Boyle added four times.

Hod Easy Win.

Kemp Wicker, Newark southpaw, had an easy time winning his third straight game. Although touched for nine hits, he hurled shutout ball for the first six innings.

Hod Lisenbee, big up to the eighth inning by John Berley, Montreal left hander, was a belated cannonball to get three runs and the ball game. They collected four hits, including a triple before Frank Pearce checked the rout. Leon Chagnon and Harry Shuba got the Royals' other hits. Chagnon's homer by Woodley Abernathy, but Shuba's was a single.

Sensad "Smear" Jolley, Albany's big clouter, accounted for three runs batted in with fourth straight victory with a pair of homers. The slugger has collected four hits in eight, came on a double by pinch hitter Eddie Rommel.

Butch Meyers, Bison third baseman, sprained his right ankle in the fifth inning and was carried off the field by his mates.

SOFTBALL LOOP FOR THE SENIORS

O. S. D., St. Mikes And Albert College Enter Teams

With three schools represented a senior interscholastic softball league was formed in Belleville yesterday with St. Michael's Academy, Ontario School for the Deaf and Albert College entering teams. All games are to commence promptly at 4.15 p.m. and to be played on the St. Mikes diamond. At the termination of the regular playing schedule the first and second place teams will clash in a play-off series of the best two out of three games.

The schedule adopted for the 1936 Belleville senior interscholastic schedule is as follows:

April 28—O.S.D. at St. Mikes.
April 30—St. Mikes at Albert.
May 5—Albert at O.S.D.
May 7—St. Mikes at O.S.D.
May 13—Albert at St. Mikes.
May 14—O.S.D. at Albert.

NEW COMPLEXITIES FOR DICK SHIKAT DEFEATED BY TURK

ANOTHER HOPEFUL—Lightest of the entries (?) Toronto's second White Hope tournament, Bob Cryderman, Toronto, Ont., emerged victor of the 33rd and final bout by a decision over Joe Salino, Toronto. Cryderman was eliminated from the first tournament by Phil Moore, the ultimate winner, a veteran amateur boxer. He won $200 first prize plus a chance to compete in further tournaments sponsored by Jack Dempsey. His victory came after two knockout victories and two decisions.

Columbus, O., April 25 (AP)—Dick Shikat was in the midst of new complexities today following his defeat in Detroit last night by the grinning Turk, Al Baba, and the consequent loss of his claim to the world's heavyweight championship.

What effect the defeat would have on the suit of Joe Alvarez of Boston, matchmaker for Promoted Paul Bowser, against Shikat and Al Haft, Columbus promoter, was conjecture.

Some said it would end the action to declare valid the contract Alvarez says he holds over Shikat and to get an accounting of Shikat's receipts under Haft's management. Some said it wouldn't.

Haft and Alvarez each contend Shikat is under contract to him. Promoted Judge Moll O. Underwood is the referee in this tangle and he is expected to rule next week.

"It rain it up further, Shikat, who was to have been the hero, secured from his hospital bed in Detroit that he had decided to retire from the ring and from the ring side chairs.

But all must wait until Judge Underwood decides on the legal entanglement, which closed yesterday with Monday morning.

The testimony brought out interesting data on the "inside" workings of the professional wrestling. On defense, promises more startling disclosures when he gets a chance to give his version next week.

DAY BY DAY

The Belleville baseball club moved out into slightly calmer waters last night. The players' committee elected reported quite favorably in the matter of available players and equipment on hand. Spokesman Alex. Wright was in the chair during the consensus of opinion of the players available for senior ball in the district and added the players were ready to "play ball" with the executive, if any.

Next week the local service clubs will be asked to name one representative on a baseball executive committee in Belleville, this committee to be in function with the game men and merchants who are known to be interested. Naturally, the first preliminary work is needed, but it looks as though the earlier fingers have been "pulled through" (that phrase is never complete at late) and the interest of senior baseball locally seems to be almost as certain as the splendid interest in rugby.

With the positions of president and secretary-treasurer to be filled at the next meeting a week hence, the baseball picture looks more rosy than it has for many weeks, thanks to the work of a few.

It is no bad idea to have citizens and especially football players, did not avail themselves of their rights to vote on the ballot by the Belleville Rugby Football Club with Mr. John DeGruchy, chairman of the night and Mr. Harold Bailey, secretary, as guests of honor. Certainly no one can hide was thrown on the autumn classic by these two officials and the splendid talk on the origin and evolution of football, the man-power and the physical development gained through football, the technical points and the mental training of rugby today, it should have been appreciated by Belleville Collegiate-D.T.S. Interscholastic football and "Soccer" followers should have won their series". Mr. DeGruchy was correct in stating that, but at the time we went out of our way to criticize the work of referees in Toronto, who we thought responsible for our boys' loss of a provincial title.

Mr. Bailey, in his impromptu talk related the history and change of rules, was the administrator of all present. Mr. Bailey was very frank in his talk and at times he showed words or attempted to make a joke. He explained that officials are at times, but pointed out that the referees and umpires did not err nearly as many times as the players. The meeting did give the fans a better opportunity to meet closely the referees, but the fact that incidentally the officials to refereeing and umpiring in the Lake Shore group this fall will be appointed directly from Mr. Bailey's office and also the old bones and bones officials will be discarded.

It was regarded that at a later meeting in August that Mr. Bailey address a meeting composed of referees, umpires and sports writers from Central Ontario relative to the playing rules. This meeting will doubtless be held in either Oshawa or Port Hope. A splendid feeling of better sportsmanship was created between the clubs following the splendid talks by Mr. DeGruchy and Mr. Bailey, both men who have earned the banner of Canadian football high.

Manufacturer Jack Corcoran signed Buffalo Joe, better known locally as Chief Thunderbird Lynx, Roberto Indian seal villain, to meet Antoine Parkin in the preliminary bout at the arena next Tuesday night. Joe made a fine showing here about a year ago when he was the lead wrestling crowd pleaser at Queensbury Club shows, but he threw the wrath of the fans upon his head when he clearly fouled Al Haft, he always could draw a crowd. The Middleweight Championship of Canada, claimed by the ability of Al Dunlop as he defeated Jack Taylor and Fred Steen Ronald, the Polish Thunderbolt, Yak, Red Indian Steve polished off in the wrestling realm being a headliner in all of the Queensbury Club shows. At his easy victory over Parkin last week, Sandy Sellers, Minnesota ace badman, was signed to meet The Unknown in the main bout.

Harry Moore, sports commentator over in Trenton and champion of Belleville newspaper columnists, Ace Atcrey, Athletic Association, tells his readers we are "all wet". Maybe we bet it's still our prediction than an artificial ice rink will not pay the way in Trenton, nor, as a matter of fact, in any small town or city. As the old Yorkers have found out since not being closed for one season, maybe our eye-sight is bad—but we've been accused of being on the diamond, but records will show it was closed one week recently. Our reference to the Pale Grounds of course was simply a figure of speech as called Pleasures' Park, but there was much truth in the statement that for once time, we believe. Trenton is in still available for sports if the proper owners were properly approached on the matter.

Another interesting entries of Harry M. Moore, publisher of the Trenton Courier-Advocate, that town today boasts of an Amateur Athletic Association which was recently organized and which will sponsor all kinds of sports and athletics as a civic project. Moore is correct in his still in the doldrums and sacking methods of encouragement of sport through the Trenton A.A.A. executive officers and rightly named Mr. Moore as the first president of their new sporting enterprise. They commence with a bank balance equal to some $400.00. One of the first movements is to try and revive lacrosse in the town of Trenton. Until shortly after the war Trenton always had a splendid baseball team and may be expected back in the near future in the league.

If we came out with the broad statement that Belleville will have baseball championships of America, we wonder what the reaction would be? Well, folks, John Wall, believe it or not, Belleville did win the baseball championship of North America once. When, Well, we'll leave it to the historians to dope and maybe arguments will result.

Johnnie Coulson, Toronto Argonaut, will represent Canada in the historic sculling race on the Thames for the Diamond Sculls next summer. May be only the success of Jack Guest, Bob Pearce, Lou Scholes and Joe Wright, his predecessors, who won those coveted honors for the land of the Maple Leaf.

An Epitome of Mining Industry In Canada

The breadth and text of a series of four talks on Canada's Mining Industry, given by the secretary-manager, F. A. Dyer, of the Canadian Mining Institute at the National Network of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, from 12.30 E. S. T. Friday evening, April 24, is summed up below.

Many who listened to the series of three broadcasts which were recently made on the subject of Canadian mining, have suggested that it will reach half a billion dollars within the next few years, so it is reasonable to expect. An interesting which promises such a forecast must not be neglected; most assuredly not by a young nation, where mineral prosperity ranks to an certain manner according to the growth of her export trade.

A review of the industry cannot ignore the significance that the output of metals valued at $30,000,000 in 1900 had increased to $190,000,000 in 1929, suggests its value to demonstrate trends. Even through the large markets provided for the products of Canadian mines during the War, over 40,000 workers last year were employed directly, and many additional thousands indirectly, in mining, milling, smelting, and refining. Canada's mineral wealth yet remains below our surface soil. That suggests the value of the mining industry to the community. Annual dividend payments mounting from $20,000,000 to $50,000,000 over a period of our metal mining companies since the second decade of the century, also shows a mining in recent years.

Although the performance of the past and of the present may be deemed highly satisfactory, it is to the future that Canadians ought to turn for inspiration. You will perhaps recall what I had to say in my first talk to you that only 15 per cent of Canada's area has been fully explored and made adaptable to the pursuit of agriculture. Nevertheless, that area has settled upon the Dominion the crown of the world's leading agricultural country, and the "breadbasket" synonymous with Canada in the markets of the world since the beginning of the century.

Canada Fortunate in Minerals

But what of the remaining 85 per cent of this vast land continuum? Large areas of it are forested and barren, provided revenue from lumber, pulpwood, and water power, revenue declined under the severe competition of foreign countries, particularly of Canada and her Fortunately for the 85 per cent of unsettled land, nature is largely underlain by geological formations that are favorable to the discovery and pursuit of economic mineral deposits. In a metal age such as the present this heritage is immeasurably valuable. Its successful development is the source of points in the northern hinterland is reflected in a very large part of the $1,000,000,000 worth of the minerals produced in 1935. Nearly $17 worth of metals for capita of the Dominion's population is now won annually from the southern edge zone of the Canadian Shield. In a belt of 900 miles length, from northwestern Ontario to Winnipeg, a total of about $100,000,000 worth of gold is now being produced annually from more than twenty distinct localities. Beyond that belt is a great stretch of territory in which the first attacks launched to drive mining camps and further north are meeting with success.

Those attacks will gain in intensity with each succeeding year. The mineral conflict is on. It is a battle waged in our hinterland against depression as well as against conflict waged for the forces of courage, skill, and capital are pitted against the unfathomable question whose future value to the Dominion, real estate values in the city, the ultimate wealth it is made to yield. The scouts of the mining army have already shown that and each year they bring back information that prompts renewed effort on the part of capital to transform the hinterland into a possession of national importance.

Much Capital Required

Must emphasize this factor of capital. Few laymen are aware of the vast quantity of money required to develop mines. The great deposit of the Pin Pin mine in Manitoba required an expenditure of $30,000,000 before there was any return on this large investment. The mine at Noranda in Quebec required $25,000,000 to enable it to produce the refined metals in the large quantity it now does. The average gold mine takes from $1,000,000 to $3,000,000 to develop and equip it to the stage of production. Much money must be risked in the early stages of development before the positive promise of success. Courageous capital is thus an essential factor in mining enterprise.

But the rewards, national and personal, are large. The discovery of a gold showing in the Porcupine area in 1909 resulted in the production to date of $430,000,000 in new wealth and in the emergence of the prosperous town of Timmins. The discovery of gold in Kirkland Lake gave birth to the prosperous community of 11,000 people and to new wealth that has now reached $230,000,000. And the end of the production in those areas is not in sight and will not be for many years.

Expanding Production

Canadians may take heart in a study of the country's mining history. It is a series of discoveries of new mineral production. In spending mineral production. In spending mineral production. In 1886 the value of the mineral output was $1,000,000. The years later this amount had doubled, and the following decade saw the new figure multiplied two and a half times. The value had reached $25,000,000 in 1921 and $210,000,000 in 1929. That it will reach half a billion dollars within the next few years, is reasonable to expect. An interesting which promises such a forecast must not be neglected; most assuredly not by a young nation, where mineral prosperity ranks to an certain manner according to the growth of her export trade.

Mining Industry Active

Figures compiled by the Bureau of Statistics clearly show that while the other basic industries of Canada were suffering severely during the depression years the industries of mining metals largely escaped. They suffered, but in many factors the growing industry that have not been fully appreciated. As a result of a policy which by law has been essentially agricultural we are only now beginning to realize the role we have assumed in the mining world. When I tell you that the Sudbury district alone had a metal production in the year 1935, the value of which was more than that of the entire field crops in the whole province of Manitoba, you will realize the importance to that part of metal mining in our economic life cannot be overestimated.

When reading about the pouring of gold bars many people are unaware of the concentrated effort and the high degree of technical proficiency that preceded that interesting event. They fail to realize how many of the metals involves several stages, such as prospecting, development, mining, milling, refining, and that a great number of industries are involved. Consequently the public have actually shared in the work before the final product of the mining industry is realized.

No Season In Industry

The business of harvesting metals is not seasonal. It continues winter and summer, and the industry provides the least interrupted and the most satisfactory employment of any. Then, second in one, third in gold, third in copper, third in silver, and fourth in lead, there is already a remarkable record for a nation of but 10,000,000 population. It is surely the forerunner of the much greater to come.

Future Is Bright

In this series of broadcasts I have endeavored to present the facts of past and present performances in the Canadian mining industry. It will be recognized that the records have been very satisfactory; in fact, quite astounding in some respects when you consider that Canada is just in the infancy of its mineral development. It is only during the last twenty years that the forces of nature have been directed towards pushing northward our mineral frontier. Therefore, I said earlier, it is to the future that I advise you to direct your attention.

Canada has the men with the ability to find and develop minerals and to solve the metallurgical problems incidental to the recovery of the mineral products this age desires. It has vast areas of geological structures that are favourable to the occurrence of minerals. It has governments sympathetic and helpful, which offer services invaluable to the prospector, the miner, and the metallurgist. The Federal and Provincial authorities are willing to assist in mapping and determining the geology of new areas and in otherwise advancing the cause of the engaged in mining activities.

The vast prospect before us reminds me of the early days of the Western plains thirty or more years ago, when the Dominion was being opened up to settlement of its prairie heritage, when settlers poured in, when the railways were pushed out with traffic, and the whole country prospered.

What Expansion Can Do

Is it too much to expect that a production of gold in Canada from $200,000,000 to $250,000,000 a year would give the following results:—

(1) Relatively and permanently settle the problem of unemployment.

(2) Bridge the gap between the East and the West with mining camps and communities established at numerous points.

(3) Bring a constructive and probably a permanent solution to our railroad problem.

(4) Create an even still greater market than at present for food products, clothing, structural materials, mine machinery and equipment, automobiles, and automobiles.

(5) Revitalize the whole national economic life of the Dominion.

(6) Open up careers for coming generations of university graduates.

(7) Ease the financial problems of the Dominion, provinces and municipalities.

(8) Alleviate the burden of our international indebtedness.

(9) Assure the stability of the Canadian dollar, and, finally,

(10) Stimulate the opening up and development of our resources in those north lands about which we know little today.

We must not fail to grasp the opportunity that lies before us.

HOME AND SCHOOL CLUB IS FORMED IN Q. A. SCHOOL

Mrs. W. H. Finkle Becomes First President of New Organization

ORGANIZER PRESENT

Mrs. Edmund Wand of Petersboro Tells of Aims and Objects

At an enthusiastic meeting of parents of pupils of Queen Alexandra School last week a Home and School Club was organized with Mrs. W. H. Finkle chosen as the president. The visitors were welcomed to the school by Mr. W. G. Anderson, principal, who expressed pleasure at the large number present. Some of the parents had been over the Club would be an asset to the school and district, as study of the movement in general and in other centres had shown that such clubs had worked to great advantage to schools.

Mr. F. J. Elsey, in his usual splendid style, sang two of Rudyard Kipling's much loved songs "Rolling Down to Rio" "Mother o' Mine." Mrs. Illsley acted as accompanist and also played for the charming solo by Mrs. G. H. Ross.

Aims and principles of the Home and School Club movement were carefully explained by Mrs. Edmund Wand, Peterborough, district organizer, who brought greetings from Mrs. Irene Mitchell, head of that city.

Origin of Movement

Mrs. Wand related the forming of the first Home and School Club in Toronto, twenty years ago by the late Mrs. Courtice, then mother of Toronto Board of Education trustee. Various problems had arisen, which needed co-operation between home and parent, showing the advisability of an association bringing them in closer contact. Existing organizations were welded into a Home and School Council and individual clubs were rapidly added to the city. The movement soon extended throughout the province. There now exists a national body—the Canadian Home and School Council.

Explaining through diagrams the constitution of a Home and School Club is Mrs. Wand pointed out, that it was a bond between teacher and parent in the common cause of promoting a good education for child. Often the mother who assumes the entire responsibility to train with the teacher. It was to co-relate home training to formal education that these groups were formed. Various phases of study could be undertaken by the club, undertaking that were entertainment. The meeting was opened with the singing of "God Save the King" and Scripture reading taken by Wm. Fred Bolton. It was decided during the business session to hold the next meeting on May 11th at the home of Mrs. Ralph Neal. At this meeting crochet work will be discussed. Current then conducted was won by Miss Winifred Sebine. After a jolly game, refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Mr. Charles Hollingworth of Queen's University has returned to his home here at the completion of the Spring term.

Mr. G. Osborne is visiting his brother, Mr. Osborne in Belleville.

Miss Miriam Savage spent the week end in Montreal.

Marmora and District

Marmora—The official visit of Bright Bro. Dr. R. A. Carleton, D. D. G.-M. of Prince Edward District to Marmora A. F. and A. M. 223 on Monday evening occasioned a large attendance of brethren of the lodge and visiting brethren, the latter being chiefly representative of Madoc and Stirling.

The regular lodge session was held in the Masonic Lodge at which the initiation of a candidate was carried out.

Remarks of a general constructive nature were made by Rt. Wor. Bro. Carleton in addition to his complimenting the lodge and its officers on their work.

The fourth degree was put on at St. Andrew's Hall with the Women's Association of St. Andrew's United Church catering in excellent style.

Rt. Wor. Bro. J. A. Rice, Master of Marmora Lodge presided as toastmaster. Succeeding "The King" and "Grand" Right Hon. Bro. T. E. Laycock, P.D.D.G.M. proposed "Grand Lodge" which was replied to by Rt. Wor. Bro. K. G. Carleton referred to good work done by the committee on Masonic Education and spoke on the symbolism of corn, wine and oil. Wor. Bro. J. F. Baker then rendered "Can't You Hear Me calling, Caroline?" The toast "Our Country" was proposed by Right Wor. Bro. G. H. Sunkard. Wor. Bro. H. W. Sabine responding. Wor. Bro. J. F. Baker called upon for a second vocal number rendered "Just a Cottage Small".

The toast to the "Visiting Brethren" was submitted by Wor. Bro. Col. A. Y. Yates. Response was made by Right Wor. Bro. S. West, Madoc; Wor. Bro. Dr. Carleton of Norwood, Wor. Bro. Canon H. S. Sharpe of Demorest, Wor. Bro. V. Richardson of Stirling. Bro. A. Smith of Haliburton Lodge, Wor. Bro. H. Bateman of Campbellford and Wor. Bro. H. West of Stirling.

Canon H. S. Sharpe led in the vote of appreciation to the ladies after which the D. D. G. M. complimented Marmora Lodge's Pulsifying the Junior Warden's Toast and closed hands for "Auld Lang Syne".

A delightful evening was spent by Mr. and Mrs. F. U. St. Andrew's United Church and the A. Y. P. A. of St. Paul's Anglican Church when the former entertained in St. Andrew's Hall on Wednesday evening. The program was ably conducted by Miss Alice Henry, President of the Y. P. U. assisted by Mr. Keith Armstrong who supervised the opening item on the program, an Amateur Contest. Those who took part in the contest were: Miss Flora Sanderson, song; Grace Trainor and Ollie Abbart, vocal duet; Grace Hunter piano solo, Herbert Hamilton, violin solo and Retta Henry guitar solo. Many contestants received the song and the winner was not decided due to the serious controversial difficulties. Following the Amateur Entertaining contest, Rev. C. W. Hollingsworth gave a most interesting talk on "The Cross" Games and contests were conducted for the entertainment and enjoyment of the guests and before the evening was ended, delicious refreshments were served.

Personals

C. H. Bushard and N. A. Kilpatrick are representing the Dominion Safety Committee at the annual Industrial Accident Prevention Association Sessions in Toronto.

Rev. Palmer J. A. Bailey spent Tuesday and Wednesday of this week in Smith's Falls.

Capt. G. F. Morris of the Navy League is visiting friends in the village.

Cpl. C. R. Ackerman of Petersborough spent Monday evening in the village.

Mrs. Hugh Phillips spent last week end in Madoc with his sister, Mrs. Ralph Neal.

Marmora—The regular meeting of Marmora Branch No. 178 Canadian Legion was held in the Legion rooms on Thursday evening with President J. Murray occupying the chair. The reports of the recent Vimy Dinner and ball were read and approved.

The ballot for holding a dance in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening the proceeds to go towards the Legion Hall Fund was then thoroughly discussed and a committee to carry out the details was appointed. It was decided to hold only one meeting a month during the summer.

The Young Women's Auxiliary met with Mrs. Ralph Neal on Thursday last, the home of the Misses Henry being chosen for the meeting in the absence of the president. Miss Ruth Henry presiding in the chair. The meeting opened with the hymn "Rock of Ages" which was followed by the Lord's Prayer and Scripture reading taken by Winnifred Sabine. It was decided during the business session to hold the next meeting on May 11th at the home of Mrs. Ralph Neal. At this meeting crochet work will be discussed. Current then conducted was won by Miss Winifred Sebine. After a jolly game, refreshments were served by the hostesses.

Mr. Charles Hollingworth of Queen's University has returned to his home here at the completion of the Spring term.

Madoc—The April meeting of the Ladies Association of Trinity United Church took on a very special form as the ladies of the congregation were the guests of honour. Over a hundred members and friends attended and all enjoyed a worthwhile entertainment. The meeting was opened with the singing of the "Coloured Symphony". The program was closed with two more vocal selections by Mr. Kincaid.

Lunch was served by the members of the ladies Board. A vote of thanks was tendered the men by Mrs. T. Kennedy on behalf of the ladies.

A prayer in the interests of the men entombed in the Moose River Mine and the benediction brought a very successful meeting to a close.

TRINITY C. G. I. T.

The regular weekly meeting of Trinity Senior C. G. I. T. was held at the home of Miss Jean Whyard. The program was in the form of a social evening. One of the members Miss Josephine Belcher who is about to leave for a new home was presented with a C. G. I. T. pin by the members. The presentation was made by Miss Jean Whyard. Miss Belcher thanked the girls and hostess served lunch at the close of the meeting.

Mrs. K. C. Prentice visited her sister, Mrs. George Moore in Montreal over the week end.

Mr. and Mrs. James Wash and daughter have moved to Seymour Township.

Mr. Donald Auger left on Thursday for Montreal where he has obtained a position.

Mr. Lingham Martin has moved to a farm near Wooler where he has obtained employment.

Buddy, the young son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Wills had the misfortune to break his arm when he fell on a stone last Monday.

LONDON ARSENAL DOWNS SHEFFIELD

James, Arsenal, and Hooper, Sheffield. Before the opposing captains were introduced to Major Buckley, 36-year-old, coal miner referee, Arsenal officials and Sheffield Scottish international centre forward kicked off for the Yorkshire team.

The Teams:

Arsenal — Goal, Wilson; backs, Male and Hapgood; halfbacks Crayston, Roberts and Copping; forwards, Bulme, Bawden, Drake, James and Beasley.

Sheffield United — Goal, Smith; backs, Hooper and Wilkinson; halfbacks, Jackson, Johnson, and Mc-Pherson; forwards, Barton, Barclay, Dodds, Keeping and Wilson.

The northern contingent roared encouragement as Sheffield went on the attack at the start. Dodds led his forwards into the Gunners territory, but passing of the five was being more accurate than that of the colorful Scotsman. The United's right wing was constantly active until Beatty finally sent Bulme away on an attack at the other end.

Falls to Convert

Bowden failed to convert a centre by the winger and later James shot over the bar when well placed. It was Arsenal's first attack, and Crayston sent it into the Sheffield goal area where Bowden forced the first corner of the game. Bulme placed the ball on the cross bar from the ensuing kick and it rebounded behind.

A pass from Copping again sent Bulme speeding down the sports field and the Brumall Lane squad's defence but then shot hard outside. "Jake" Goodwin mystified the opposing defenders at times. The inside forward was in and out of many times slipped through with clever dribbling. Sheffield's forwards afterwards made a faulty classification when they allowed the ball to take advantage of the lapses. Bulme sending outside.

Sheffield's loose at Bastow sent Dodds through in front of goal, but a rush was made and saved the situation with a splendid clearance.

Up to this point there had been more method to the Blightmen's game's than on the part of their band Sheffield's vanguard was the more vivid. Arsenal, northern forwards, contrary to expectations, prevailed in keeping the ball in the air and often harassed the opposing backs

ONE WAY STREET

"Then it's a promise, Jean? You'll better smile on and not bother me any longer. Sure there isn't something I can do for you? Huh, Jean?"

"You've done a lot already, Dan. Thank you heaps."

Don straightened up as if in rest, then paused to regard Jean with boyish admiration plain in his blue eyes. She was sitting motionless at his desk, eyes downcast, hands clasped in her lap. He saw her lips quiver suddenly.

"Jean!" he whispered roughly. One of his hands went out and covered both of hers. "I'm not much—I guess I never will be. But I've been pretty crazy about you ever since we were kids. You know, I have. I've give anything there is....."

"I know." He got to his feet. "What I've been rich instead of good-looking...." A smile twisted his mouth. "If everything you've never have to worry. I would ....whether you liked it or not."

Jean forced up him and forced an answering smile.

"Everything's going to be different now, Don. I'm different. This morning....I was just a kid. It's funny.... Just two days ago. Then There was a bewildered expression in his brown eyes. "I suppose I'll be going to college next fall. After that....I never thought much. Now it seems I'm putting everything away."

"What do you mean?"

"I'm not sure I can explain. I must work now. No more dreaming. Everything's changed."

"Not me, Jean! I'll never...."

"I see, Don. We'll have to forget about....us. For a very long time. I've got lots to do and think about ....every minute."

"Sure. I don't fit into the picture right now, Jean. But I'll always be hanging around somewhere if you need me. You can count on that."

"I know, Don."

"And about coming down to the office.....I'll fix that—up any time you like. Don't forget."

He caught up his hat and was gone.

John Sawyer's third day of freedom came even more quickly than he hoped. The case had been set forward on the court calendar at his counsel's request. The final act of the drama would be little more than a stage setting. The pronouncing of sentence.

To Jean's relieved surprise, it was her mother who took complete charge of home arrangements that morning. White of face, but smiling and gently efficient as ever, Mrs. Sawyer prepared her husband's fav. cottie breakfast dishes. Norwegian Olga, a commanding figure in the household so long as Jean could remember, had been dismissed a week earlier in spite of her grim insistence that she would get along as well as not without wages.

After the meal, which no one made more than a pretense of eating, seven-year-old Peggy was asked to help Mother by taking baby Madge out in her go-cart for a few hours. "I think it would be very nice in the park this morning, dear. You'll be very careful, won't you?"

Sawyer helped his daughter down the porch steps with her charge. His fingers lingered in a final caress against the baby's rat cheek. He lifted Peggy in his arms and gave her a kiss.

"Be Daddy's good girl until he gets back. Here...."

His pockets had been carefully emptied save for some small change. He gave a dime into the child's moist fist.

"It's going to be a warm day," he suggested gravely. "Why don't you get yourself an ice cream cone after a bit? Good-bye, Peggy."

"O....oh! Thanks, Daddy! Bye."

Sawyer stood for a moment watching the pair on their way. Then re-entered the house, in time to hear John Junior, fifteen, announce brusquely that he was going down to see about a job for the summer. He had heard the Star Laundry needed a help with the deliveries.

"I hope you get the place," his mother encouraged. "If you hurry, perhaps you can see that Peggy gets over the car tracks safely. You will be here to get you some lunch."

With the growing man's difficulty of self-expression, John turned reluctantly to his father.

Ignoring the half-proffered hand, Sawyer impulsively put both the lad's shoulders and gave him a quick embrace. He held out one arm across the boy with a kiss, much as he longed to. "Good-bye, son. I'm depending on you to look after your mother and the girls."

There came the sound of a door closing violently. Jean was alone with the servants.

"I think we should start now," Mrs. Sawyer announced quietly. "It's nine-thirty."

"Starting? Where?" Jean asked in surprise. She stood close to her father, her arm about him. Tears during those last minutes.

"To the court house," was the calm reply.

"Court House.....!"

"It will be better than having some one tell you....later. You don't mind, John?"

"No, dear. It shall be as you wish."

Sawyer even managed a smile, regarding the anxious woman with a tender gaze. He knew of that decision, discussed during the long hours of the night. "How about you, Bernice? Will you go with your mother? I....I'll not be coming back, you know."

"Yes, Daddy Jack."

The court procedure was mercifully brief. Judge Griffin summed up the case keenly, possibly over his spectacles now and then at the defendant. Jean noticed the lenses of the judge's glasses were cut in half, giving a straight line under the piercing black eyes.

Then her heart began to hammer strangely. Judge Griffin was talking about Daddy Jack. He spoke of the unselfish character the defendant always had enjoyed, his devotion to his employers.... the court was considering all these things into consideration."

Perhaps.....oh, please!

"John Sawyer, have you anything to say before sentence is passed upon you?"

"No, your honor."

"Then it is the sentence of this court that you be confined in the Blain Penitentiary for a term of six years. At hard labor."

John Sawyer drew a deep breath. It was over. A sheriff's deputy touched him on the arm. One last cheerful smile to his wife and daughter.

CHAPTER IV.

It was Jean who chose the family's new home on Bridge Street. Over on the unfamiliar West Side, a section populated mainly by shop workers and small merchants.

Nine to six promised. Dan had arranged an interview for Jean with Miss Wardlaw, supervisor of the Times' advertising staff.

"I'm not sure but what we can use you, Miss Sawyer," Wardlaw told her after a brief talk. "We've been thinking about breaking in a local girl.....women's wear and that sort of thing. You might do very well. How old are you, if you don't mind?"

"Seventeen. It's nearer eighteen now."

"Finish high school?"

"Almost...." It was a little difficult to keep her voice steady. She had dreaded something of this sort. "I left school shortly before graduation."

"Amounts to the same thing. It's rather unusual, Miss Sawyer," Wardlaw went on pleasantly. "Soliciting advertising is a matter of personality in some extent. But it's mostly a big common sense. You can do it or you can't. And it won't take either of us long to find out. Think it over a few days and come back to see me."

"Thank you. I will....."

How nice Miss Wardlaw was, Jean thought, as she left the building. He knew about Daddy Jack. She must have. Perhaps Don had done something to help. Would others be so thoughtful? She already had made up her mind to accept the position.

Within the week, she reported for her new duties. There was a "course" of sprouts to take," as Wardlaw expressed it. After that, she would be sent out to see what she could do. The interval of training proved less of an ordeal than she feared. She was conscious of curious stares, some little difficulties on the other part of the girls and women. But she did her best to mask her sensitiveness under an air of quiet composure.

That attitude had grown unconsciously when the time came to visit Gorham's shops in an endeavor to establish a clientele of advertisers.

Wardlaw was a shrewd judge. In that first interview he decided that Jean had the necessary refinement ....good looks, too. Plenty of appeal, if she had the right approach to back it up. Time proved all premises sound both. Lesser merchants, with whom she made her first contacts, liked her, she developed the knack of writing copy with a punch.

Its new sense of responsibility gave her a quiet air of authority when it came to selecting a suitable home.

"It's such a small house," Mrs. Sawyer observed doubtfully, as she and Jean completed a final tour of the bare and empty rooms of the Bridge Street dwelling. "Do you think we can manage comfortably here?"

"It will do nicely, Mummy," Jean said. "It's just the right distance from the office. That's important."

"I'm afraid, dear, you've thought all this rather...difficult. It's going to be a change for you. You'll be so far from all your friends."

"They will find me....if they want to," Jean replied with an assurance she was far from feeling. "I shall be too busy to be much entertaining. I'm a business woman."

She smiled. "Don't look so serious. It's a new signing.....by watching you do it."

Looking after such a little place will be play," Mrs. Sawyer told Jean as they strolled back to Oak Street arm in arm. "I believe we'll find it very cozy when we are settled."

That same evening, in the seclusion of her dainty room, Jean bade a reluctant farewell to the past and its associations. She lingered longer over her principal sitting of the day, that the general excellence of her work had resulted in a vote of the board to include her name among the graduates. It was printed, too, in the stories of the commencement exercises carried by the papers. Jean read the account with tears of disappointment rolling down her cheeks.

"Reading of Class Prophecy.....Blythe Cannon." It always had been "Blythe" until this year.

No time for old hurts now.

Don Browne furnished Jean with almost the one remaining link to Oak Street. He was a frequent visitor in the new home on the West side where he was a favorite with all the members of the family.

For all his careless ways, Don had a keen sense of appreciation. He realized better than any one, unless it were Mrs. Sawyer, how lonely Jean was. He likewise was wise enough to avoid any manifestation of sympathy or sentiment. He made it his first concern to be a pal to the girl, and she was deeply grateful.

Jean's romantic dreams were steadfastly reserved for hours of solitude and reflection.

Don frequently had a place in these quiet musings. Jean was wont to speculate frankly about her feeling towards him. He meant more to her than any one outside the little family circle. She knew that and wondered if he might some time measure up to her lofty ideals.

With a proud gesture, he pointed to Dan and to himself, then flung his hand out toward the vast forest, and declaimed grandly: "Tarzan!" He was trying to convey to Jane and Dick were the mighty Jungle Lord and wished to be conducted to him.

Doo presumed that the chief would hasten to pay his respects to those who used the name of the Great White Bwana as a password. Instead a baneful expression of fear came into the eyes of the black man, and changed rapidly to the steely glint of cruel, fantastic hatred.

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

He was so gay and utterly irresponsible. Perhaps he would grow up.....and she dislliked the idea of that.

At all events, he was "very content."

Occasionally, Jean was moved to tell him so when, after a session at the movies—sitting in the gallery—or indulged in the luxury of a soda, Jean always paid her own way, in spite of Don's outraged feelings. "Dutch treat or nothing" was her motto. The Times was not overgenerous to its reporters.

Her new duties brought long and busy days so that Jean made little or no effort to become acquainted with the home neighborhood.

Bridge Street was a short and somewhat drab thoroughfare. It was distinguished only for its unbroken rows of two-story, dwellings, each with a flight of front steps, which benched themselves on the lumpy sidewalks at independent angles.

In mild weather, these treads of the white limestone or painted wood held couples—if odd shirtless—and who smoked quietly or scanned their newspapers after the day's toil. Housewives with untidy hair or in boudoir caps contributed to an animated fussing. Swarms of children darted about like schools of young fish, save that they filled the air with unceasing clamorings.

In winter, the street became strangely quiet as early dusk blanketed the low roof tops. The homes acquired a mellow tone in the smoky twilight or under the frosty rays of city lamps. Lighted windows gleamed warmly. Snatches of radio programs filtered out on the air with the opening and closing of street doors.

The few squares always affected Jean with a distinct depression. She could feel it the moment she turned the corner into the wide avenue that led directly home from the Times building. Perhaps it was the sign at the intersection: "Corner Way Street."

Something sinister, in the suggestion.

MAIDEN VOYAGE

BY KATHLEEN NORRIS

Synopsis of preceding instalments:

Antoinette Taft has made good as modern editor of the Intelligencer, Cleo Call and is delighted with her job but is secretly worried at her love for Larry Bellamy whom she met while job-hunting. He was editor of the Journal, then soon the Journal has been merged with the Call and Larry is assistant editor. He wins Ruth, is a triple woman ten years older than he. Tony meets Ruth while covering a society carnival and they become fast friends at once. Then Larry loses her, despite his reserve. Her sister Brenda marries young Alvin Atwater of Monterey and her brother Cliff is soon to marry Mary Rose Fly. Ruth's nephew, Joe Vanderwalk is young prodigy interested in biologic research, falls in love with Tony. She scoops an important interview, only to realize that she was tricked into jeopardizing the job of Miss Vallance, an elderly woman social teacher, and resigns in indignation. Tony, returning from a trip, insists she must rehire Miss Vallance. Suddenly she is in his arms. Caroline Bellamy, Joe's prize widowed sister, stops over on her way to Europe. Tony and the Bellamys go to Joe's housewarming at Larry's cabin. Ruth breaks an engagement to drive back with friends to a party. They agree they must forget each other and Tony says she will get a newspaper job. Ruth arrives about midnight a tire down flat, and there is no way to phone. After a delay an excited man comes to the door and says the 'phone is out of order, then explains: "Come in. My wife has just been murdered."

"Tes; you weren't here. I remember. Yes, I got here about three o'clock. Found the front door open, but the bus picked me up there at that hour, and I'm always prepared to work on, and then this Miss Wallinder and Mrs. Ellis came in. Mrs. She'd been in the car Larry and I stopped before we went to the Dorans."

"When do they go?"

"Day after tomorrow."

"Going to see her before they go?"

"No."

"Will you see him?"

They said, "No," again, hummed-lately adding: "Yes, he's coming now as far as Montreal, anyway. He's going off somewhere to talk together. It's good for him, of course. After you're married I'm going to New York, if they'll let me, and Larry won't be back until late autumn. We'll never see each other again."

"You poor kid." Cliff said in tender sympathy. "It's hard on you, all it had to be Larry you liked! It's rotten for you."

Tony's face wrinkled and her lip shook; she looked away, swallowed, nothing with a dry throat. She said nothing.

They sat in the parked car and stared out at the sea that was lighted only by the moon. It was the quietest hour of the morning. They knew Larry had the beach to themselves.

"Is Ruth bitter about it, Larry?"

"On the contrary, she's sorry for me she won't admit, anything to be bitter about. I'm very lucky to be very affectionate and grateful to me for years, and sure I'll love it all!"

"Makes that pattern," Tony said in a hard voice.

"She's free. She's taken that position. She knows what she's doing in for all of us. For me and for you, Tony, and for Joe."

"Poor Ruth," Tony said, more gently. "Wish you'd telephone her, Cliff, unless she wants to let her go?"

Caroline and Ruth's mother help her to keep up the little fiction that the wheel was the only great thing to be hushed up and forgotten and forgiven.

"Forgiven and forgotten" Tony said with the proud color in her face.

"They seem to feel that there is no disgrace in it, that I've done much, and you like me too much," Larry said, "and since it's they and Tony, they must be protected and smoothed. Larry's the first and poor little Tony, didn't know what she was letting herself in for, what complete bosh it would be! It!"

"I suppose so," Tony said drily. "Does Ruth believe it?"

"Ruth always believes what she wants to believe. Yes, she believes it. As far as she's concerned it's a true. Much as I hate to be even concerned for us to hush it up and go away."

They made no comment. She had taken off her white hat; her dark uncovered hair lay in loose strands and sprays against the man's shoulder. He could look down and see the smooth clear tan of her cheek, with the fine down of it, peach showing against the white light of the starlight, and the curve of her lip and the lowered thick dark eyelashes, and the curve of her little white neck. He tightened his arm about her shoulders.

"It won't be forever, ony."

"No. Somehow—somewhere—the

New Addition for Prevention Officers

New officers for the coming year were elected at the annual convention of the Ontario Provincial Association of Fire Chiefs held in York Hotel, Toronto, on April 22 and 23. Shown above, they are (1) J. H. Conor, Peterborough, president; (2) H. Hall, Brantford, secretary-treasurer; (3) A. G. Wright, Hamilton, first vice-president; (4) A. J. Ramsay, Toronto, second vice-president. The session (5) is R. B. Morley, general manager of the Ontario Safety League. An industrial safety-guarding meeting and exhibition were more than 1,500 Ontario executives and safety experts, representing over 10,000 plants in every town in the province.

roads will come together. Meanwhile—and he'll think of each other—and of Joe—and of Tony."

"Ah, that's what they always say," the girl said with a break in her voice. "And then they forget!"

"I'll not forget. Ah, you've an sweet!" he said with his lips against her forehead. And then, "You're safe in my arms now, Tony, and tomorrow that ache for you—that ache for you, will begin—and there won't be any cure!"

"No matter where we are, no matter what happens, we always will belong to each other, Larry, won't we?"

"You'll always be what you are now, Tony—only more so, as it is the world for me."

"And you for me," she said in a voice she tried to hold steady. "I'll always be glad we had this much together, Larry. This is something. It's more than I ever thought I'd have.

"I'll always be glad, too, for the good-bye, Larry presently said very simply.

Tony stirred herself against his arm, drew away. "Let me look at you, Larry."

They looked gravely at each other. He had the brown-skinned man with the high-bridged nose and the deep-set eyes, and the girl in her white, thick and brown coat, with her dark hair disheveled and her blue eyes set in delicate circles of umber, and fringed with dark lashes, looked at him with a long look.

"It's good-bye, my dear," said Tony. "It has been a mess about her and for a long minute she lay against him and felt his kisses on her lips.

"You'll forgive me, Tony, for ever telling you I loved you?"

"Ah, if you'll forgive me! I let it happen. You didn't," she said.

He touched the starter, turned the car on the short brown grass. They drove back into the city and at the door of the newspaper office he said only: "Good-bye, and good-good-bye. She heard no answer as Larry pulled the car into the traffic again and drove away.

She went up to her desk, stopped to hang up her hat and coat, straightened her hair. Her face took at odd to her: it was white. Or perhaps it was only the effect of the foggy light that came through the high dirty office windows and mingled so oddly with the glow of the lamps.

The newspaper office was very quiet at twelve o'clock. Larry was meeting Caroline and Ruth for lunch and to go some last shopping. A truck would call for the trunks later, and they would go home their night-over and their books and bathroom kits. Then they'd have bags tomorrow morning, and the apartment they were abandoning would be left in charge of cheerful caretaker. Caroline, have you room for a pair of slippers? Don't you need coat on, Mother darling, you'll be too warm. Ah, bring the coat!

And go down to the big white ship, and watch the last flurry of passports and of finding their stateroom with the clutter and confusion of the departure; all about them, with the bay streamers pouring out whistles into the noon air, and the salt water slapping idly against the piers.

She seemed to be hearing his voice again, hearing the lightening of that big arm about her shoulders; she seemed again to see the brown face and the high-bridged nose, and the movement of his brown lean hand when he took off his glasses to look at her.

Tony pressed her arms on her desk and put her head down upon them. Waves of bitterness and longing broke over her, and receded, and strengthened to break over her again.

"It was a nice thing for them to do, to ask me to stay with her so I could have got out of it," said Aunt Meg in an undertone.

"But gosh, it's more fun at home Christmas Eve," Brenda observed.

"Sh-h-h!" Brenda muttered to her brother in horror. "Your voice is like a foghorn, Cliff!" They were all in the Bly library, guests at the great Christmas party that Cliff's parents-in-law had been planning for years. For the moment the only the Taffs were in the room, Meg rustling in silk; Bruce handsome and starry in the immaculate opulence upon little Anthony; Cliff and Brenda proud of them all. Alvin was coming later.

It was a beautiful room, with almost majestically on a Pacific avenue, across that commanded the sweep of the cold waters, and the Presidio slopes and the Golden Gate.

"Oh, glorious!" said all the guests as they arrived to find the big grate-room deliciously warm and a great wood fire crackling and snapping in the enormous fireplace. There were relatives asked in for Christmas dinner, gentle elderly men and women beating in the family circle, where nice people were always welcomed by all penniless evidently, and rather pathetically grateful for the kindness, amusing and talkative and being very much encouraged by Uncle Ricy and Aunt Cora.

Over the group Dr. and Mrs. Bly reigned in evening dress and the big house was full of innocent laughter and music.

Just as the Taft family party from Monterey arrived, coming home for the Bly's Tony arrived, late, and too rush off to cover one more Christmas party, and Joe Vanderwalk at the Bly's. It was this circumstance that gave them a chance at Cliff and Brenda and Aunt Meg's darkened room when they found themselves for a moment quiet, out of the noisy current, in the big leather chairs of the Bly library.

"Tony ought to be here."

"She'll be here any minute now." "Doesn't she look well, Brenda?"

"Beautiful. She looked badly for a while; just at first, Brenda said lowering her voice. "But lately—oh I don't know's no one thing."

"I believe she's over it," Aunt Meg said decidedly. She looked hopefully at Brenda and then at Cliff.

"She'll never be over it," Brenda said shaking her head. "But I think she's ashamed of herself. A girl feels ashamed when she's been a fool for a good man. Alvin thinks she was too," she added with a little laugh in her unanswerable argument.

"It seems to me it's more bad luck than anything to be ashamed of," Cliff remarked.

"I don't feel so. And Tony was bitterly ashamed. She knew that if Ruth hadn't stood by her when that horrible Donny thing happened——"

"Don't speak of it," pleaded Aunt Meg hastily.

"And I think," Brenda pursued after a sympathetic nod and glance in her mama's direction, "I think that Tony— Just woke up I think she grew three years in three weeks after the Bellamys went away. She changed. "It was as if she thought: 'I'll die—Tony Taft, live for all the rest of them.' Brenda and the baby, and Cliff and Mary Rose, and Aunt Meg and Aunt Ruth—I'll be gruffer, I'll read and I'll study—I'll not be wild gay-hearted Tony Taft any more.'"

"It was something like that," Cliff said as Brenda paused with tears in her eyes.

"But then what's the child going to get out of it herself?" Aunt Meg asked. "Time is passing—she does not want to marry."

"I wish she'd marry Doctor Joe Vanderwalk!" Brenda exclaimed in the pause.

"He doesn't click," Cliff said shaking his head. "He's a prince! she's devoted to him. She goes down to his place and rides and they tramp around; she admires him. But somehow it doesn't click."

"Where are the Bellamys now, Bendy?"

"In Nice. The old mother, Mrs. Patterson, had a stroke, you know, and they've just been hanging on, waiting. They've taken a place there and Larry's writing a book. The cousin, Mrs. Polhemus, is with them."

"They went away—when?"

"A year and a half ago. I remember particularly because it was just before Mary Rose and I were married."

"Does Tony hear from Larry?"

"Only a Christmas card, she said doesn't write. And I must say I think she's behaved magnificently!"

"She's been a great sport," Cliff said.

"Ah, here she is; that's Tony in his next room!" said Aunt Meg and Bruce added: "Now We'll be a party!"

There was Tony indeed, coming in fresh and rosy from the cold air. She had left her outer wraps downstairs; her freshly brushed hair was in waves over her low forehead, there was a gay color in her cheeks, with deep Vandyke cuts and a collar of lace; she had changed her two-piece dress and seemed to bring with her to the somewhat lagging party a new spirit, a new life.

"While visitors!" she said coming up to her elderly little hostess. "They gave them to me at the Orphanage; aren't they delicious? Here, they're for you. Are we all leaving you today, Doctor, because it's Christmas? You don't know how wonderful it is to get into this warmth and find you all!"

Tony burst into an animated description of the Orphanage party. The party went on into enjoyment and hilarity. There was a marvelous dinner, and afterward came the great hour of the tree, with every one quite speechless with laughter, surprise and gratitude. The excitement had reached its height when a maid came to Mrs. Bly, who turned to Tony.

"A Doctor Vanderwalk?"

"Oh," Tony said, pleased and puzzled.

"Where'd you put him, Mamie?" "In the library."

"Oh. You'll go up, Tony? Yes, and then do bring him down, we'll find something for him to eat, poor man."

Tony went upstairs; stretched both hands to the unimpressive man who came from the shadows of the library.

"Joe, how nice! Merry Christmas! But take off that coat. How'd you get here? Did you walk?"

"I telephoned the office. Say, sit down a minute. I've got to tell you," Joe said abruptly. His fair moon face was very grave.

Her color changed; her eyes were riveted on his face.

"Ruth?" she asked quickly. "Mrs. Patterson?"

"No. Ruth."

"Ruth?" whispered Tony. The quiet room softly faded in the widening distance and the drowning fire and the decorous backs of the handsome people seemed to be seen again in their places.

"She drowned, Joe," she said.

She frowned, looked slowly as if he felt a little embarrassed by her emotion, a little sorry for her.

"She was hurt in the street. She never regained consciousness."

Tony looked at him again with a dry mouth. For a long minute she looked at Joe. "Dead?" she asked.

"Yes, she died this morning, it said at eleven o'clock."

Tony's knotted fingers were twisting in her mouth. Her eyes were far away; her forehead wrinkled.

"Ruth dead! It doesn't seem true! She said she'd slick, as if talking to herself.

"Christmas Eve."

"I thought of that. But I can't seem to—get it."

"He'll come home now."

Tony was not listening.

"She always lived alone, dearly. Poor Ruth!"

"She, she always did. Well," Joe said in an effort to be generous, "Larry was always fine to her, Tony. I think she knew, I mean last year, was the first thing that ever really upset her. She didn't know what to do; she thought it best to pretend that it didn't matter, I don't know; I think she acted according to her light."

"I think she did. Poor Ruth, but I can't get over it." Tony took the fact slowly, looked at it, turned it frowningly. "Ruth struck by car in the street, you said, Joe?"

"Died eleven this morning without regaining consciousness. Larry arrives from Paris tonight. Grim as usual; we have not told her."

paper tomorrow."

Tony looked away and Joe looked at her. The gracious lines of the young young body were set off by the green velvet gown; the deep lace collar and cuffs, the finished hair, the delicate color and fine and serious blue eyes made her look like a beautiful child.

"It makes me—feel badly," she said speaking as if her throat were sore.

"I suppose so, Tony."

"You're awfully kind about it, Joe," the girl said suddenly. She had her hand on his for her eyes were absent and her thoughts far away. "Thank you for coming in person, Joe."

"Dear!" Oh, Joe, I'm sorry!"

Presently he was gone and in an unreal way Tony was standing with the Christmas party again; and then in time to the music, dancing, tired, warm and still laughing and talking. Brenda had carried Cliff off early as she was staying at the Palace Hotel tonight with Alvin and Cliff was staying.

"While visitors!" she said coming up to her elderly little hostess. "They gave them to me at the Orphanage; aren't they delicious? Here, they're for you. Are we all leaving you today, Doctor, because it's Christmas? You don't know how wonderful it is to get into this warmth and find you all!"

Tony burst into an animated description of the Orphanage party. The party went on into enjoyment and hilarity. There was a marvelous dinner, and afterward came the great hour of the tree, with every one quite speechless with laughter, surprise and gratitude. The excitement had reached its height when a maid came to Mrs. Bly, who turned to Tony.

"A Doctor Vanderwalk?"

"Oh," Tony said, pleased and puzzled.

"Where'd you put him, Mamie?" "In the library."

"Oh. You'll go up, Tony? Yes, and then do bring him down, we'll find something for him to eat, poor man."

Tony went upstairs; stretched both hands to the unimpressive man who came from the shadows of the library.

"Joe, how nice! Merry Christmas! But take off that coat. How'd you get here? Did you walk?"

"I telephoned the office. Say, sit down a minute. I've got to tell you," Joe said abruptly. His fair moon face was very grave.

Her color changed; her eyes were riveted on his face.

"Ruth?" she asked quickly. "Mrs. Patterson?"

"No. Ruth."

"Ruth?" whispered Tony. The quiet room softly faded in the widening distance and the drowning fire and the decorous backs of the handsome people seemed to be seen again in their places.

"She drowned, Joe," she said.

She frowned, looked slowly as if he felt a little embarrassed by her emotion, a little sorry for her.

"She was hurt in the street. She never regained consciousness."

Tony looked at him again with a dry mouth. For a long minute she looked at Joe. "Dead?" she asked.

"Yes, she died this morning, it said at eleven o'clock."

Tony's knotted fingers were twisting in her mouth. Her eyes were far away; her forehead wrinkled.

"Ruth dead! It doesn't seem true! She said she'd slick, as if talking to herself.

"Christmas Eve."

"I thought of that. But I can't seem to—get it."

"He'll come home now."

Tony was not listening.

"She always lived alone, dearly. Poor Ruth!"

"She, she always did. Well," Joe said in an effort to be generous, "Larry was always fine to her, Tony. I think she knew, I mean last year, was the first thing that ever really upset her. She didn't know what to do; she thought it best to pretend that it didn't matter, I don't know; I think she acted according to her light."

I pritty near went to the movies ahle, ma saying to pop, Willyum, I want you to put on your coat and take me around to the Narcists without a single useless protesting word, because it's a picture that's guaranteed to be for all ages and all sexes, so you're a bachlor you probably are to enjoy it.

Trapped, pop said.

Meaning all rite, and I said, Well O. Kay, if I'm trapped I'm trapped, I must be for my age has so my mind I go with you.

Because I have to my lessons to ce and your bed to go to, ma said, and I said, No man, tomorrow's Satiday so I dont have any lessons and I dont have to get up early, so why cant I, ma?

Let him go, how will we know the picter go, how will we know the picter go, how will we, we dont have a representative, asked pop in party? pop said, and ma said, Well look at his shoes, we cant be seen on the street with shoes in that condition.

I'll hurry up and shine them, ma, I'll bet you'll be proud to have them with you, I said.

And I rushed down to the bathroom and when I came back again my shoes looked like fresh new, only shiiner, ma saying, Well, what a transformation, I never saw such a hustrous polish.

I've heard it said that the movies are a modern miracle, and now I am sure of it, pop said. That's not a shine, it's a work of art, he said, and I said, And it's my own inspiration, too, pop, I've got a touch of a modern improvement. After the blacking was all on and everything I scrunched a brake lot of white cream stuff over it and could get a rag. Maybe I could get written the invention and make my fortune, I said. Is there white stuff is called Isabella Vanlaher, I said.

O my expensive priceless face cream, O what must I do like this now, what's left of it, ma said.

Don't worry, I said and that is the said and being why I cny pritty much, into the movies instead of all a ways.

Bed Room

Why not give yourself a present of what practically amounts to a brand new bedroom. Aren't you weary of the old color on the walls or the old drapes with the tempest-tossed look to each wall? Or is it the furniture that irks? If you can't change both, change one. It's only just that a woman never tempts about her bedroom, for it is her kingdom!... one of the things which seems her inward serenity, power and poise. And she wants it to be a comfortable retreat that heavy does in her own bedroom.

When your system needs toning up, go to a quick walk yourself. Then, when you want to assert his reign when he tries of them . . . a change in the color scheme, a new arrangement, puts a new face on the matter, and the object . . . and rejuvenates a jaded temper. There may an unruly destroy the beauty of an old room, but there is no excuse for that. But in the former case it's easy to remedy. Look around and see what is the most attractive it would be when the old tan paint is gone forever and the dingy walls are converted into new light-reflecting surfaces. Even that old bed, with its perfectly poise should be paid to the new! Perhaps you can't afford a new bedroom, especially a "night room" and its colors should be subdued to be restful, but cheerful withal. If you can re-do your whole room, there are many attractive color schemes in paper walls, mauve-brown furniture, blue and white accessories. Or the whole room in brown and beige, with touches of green and yellow in everything and is very attractive. What's more, decorators have never been more reliable, since no one style seems to predominate, and one can select any style that suits her fancy. The same tones than the pastels and pursel bolder, more vivid colors are popular. The latter, however, grey is never then white; any shell is good, dusty pink is fine for the rage, and bright green are coming with white.

After a search through a few social bedrooms I've come into that one of their glittering features is the mercerized furniture. The decorator may have let his hand run riot on the bed as to the mercerized furniture monstrosities, but the dressing table and chest of drawers are quite modest and restrained. It would suit you to know that the dressing table is in particular should be simple and repeat the old bed-table which is doubtless as good as new. The same applies to the dressing table bench, skirt the dressing table with a ruffle of the same material and color that the old bedspring chair . . . a new bedroom suite set is a very expensive item, and a comfortable, modern chair is worth its weight in gold.

London, April 27—(AP) Prime Minister Baldwin today assured the House of Commons "in the most categorical terms," that Great Britain has not considered and is not considering the transfer of any mandated territory to any other power."

Uneasiness had been manifested recently in parliament that the government might be ready to talk colonial trades with Reichsfuehrer Hitler of Germany.

SENTENCE PASSED ON THREE COUNTS

Grey Township Man Ignored Court And Escaped From Custody

Stratford, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Appearing before Magistrate A. A. Mahlns today, Nones Collins, Grey Township, pleaded guilty to charges of intention disobeying a court order and escaping from custody. On two former charges he was fined $10 and costs, and on each of the two other charges he was given two months in jail, sentences to run concurrently.

The first offence took place in September, 1934 and Collins was ordered by the court, but he failed to do so. On December 1, 1935, he was apprehended by Chief of Police C. Rocher of Listowel, and was being detained at Rocher's home for a few minutes when he broke away. He was arrested Saturday night.

County Constable Ed Best, Topping, pleaded guilty to a charge of having liquor in other than his private residence and was fined $100 and costs or three months in jail.

RESCUE FUND REACHES $40,000

Immediate Distribution Will Be Made on April 30th

Toronto, April 27 (CP) — The Moose River disaster relief fund today mounted to $40,000 cash. Somerville, K.C., head of the Red Cross Society chairman, announced at a meeting of the committee held this morning and plans made to close collections April 30.

Mr. Somerville stressed the necessity of all subscriptions being received by the committee before date as soon as possible so immediate distribution can be made April 30.

He said there was still money subscribed to the fund lying in savings and other accounts in banks.

The rescue fund money will go to the men who saved Dr. D. R. Robertson and Fred Scadding of Toronto from death in the bowels of the mine. Another fund raised from proceeds from Dr. Robertson's story of his experiences will go to the welfare of Scadding's family, the remainder to be placed in the establishment of a memorial fund. Hepburn Holds Treasury Post

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Reports current at Queen's Park that cabinet members have advised Premier Hepburn to lighten his load of administrative burden because of recent ill health brought from Mr. Stephens today the statement that he has no intention of relinquishing his treasury portfolio.

"I intend to carry on as the duties I have undertaken, as far as I am concerned," he said.

The reports, having no confirmation, indicated some cabinet reorganization may be effected within the next six weeks.

PAROLED 'LIFER' GETS SIX YEARS

Herbert E. Wilson of London Sentenced For Conspiracy

Toronto, April 27—(CP)—Herbert E. Wilson of London, Ont., paroled "lifer", was sentenced to six years in jail by Mr. Holliday, Toronto stock salesman, to 2 1-2 years in Kingston Penitentiary by Judge James Parker in general sessions today. They were found guilty of conspiracy to defraud.

Their trial lasted nine days before the jury retired at midnight. They confessed to conspiracy to defraud G. E. Ames and Company, Toronto Investment House, of $68,348 by sale of commercial bonds. Almost 40 exhibits, legally documentary, were shown and examined.

The bonds were turned over by Holliday to Earl M. Hand, Toronto stock salesman, who sold them to the Ames Company after efforts to obtain a $40,000 loan on them had failed. The bonds, according to evidence, were alleged to be the property of Lyman Stewart, serving a term in San Quentin penitentiary, Cal., for stock evasion, and the money obtained was to be used in gaining his release.

NEW DEVICE AIDS MEDICAL FIGHT TO SAVE LIMBS

Believe Operation on Scadding Will Not be Necessary

MAGILL INTERRED

Full Military Honors Tendered by Toronto Scottish

Halifax, April 27 (CP)—"Definite improvement" in the condition of Alfred Scadding's feet was noted this afternoon in a bulletin issued by his physician, Dr. H. E. MacDonald although he added that the possibility amputation might be necessary had not yet passed.

Dr. D. R. Robertson, who was rescued with Scadding from the Moose River Mine, was recovering satisfactorily from his physical ordeal and, Dr. Ian Macdonald, stated.

Scadding's condition continued to be used to fight off gangrene in Scadding's feet is being flown here from Toronto today.

Halifax, April 27 (CP)—Hopeful that "surgical interference will be unnecessary" was expressed by medical authorities attending Alfred Scadding of Toronto, entombed for 10 days in the Moose River gold mine, but a new device to aid the medical fight against an operation was flown from Toronto by airplane today.

Dr. H. E. Robertson, another of the three men imprisoned Easter Sunday in a cave-in caused by blocked the shaft of the mine that they had been physically fit when they arrived here, and "pretty good" throughout the ordeal, and their share on the

Dr. Dafoe Answers Stand Taken by Quints' Parents Diet Should be Changed

Would Thrive Better on Heavier Meals Say Parents

CLAIM BABIES RESTLESS

Callander, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Mr. and Mrs. Oliver Dionne said today they thought the diet of their quintuplet daughters should be changed.

They indicated they believed the 20-months-old children would thrive better if fed soup made from fresh meat, mashed potatoes with a sprinkling of beef gravy, cooked vegetables, particularly carrots, rice and all the milk they desire instead of what the parents termed "greasy, salt meats", mashed fresh fruit and vegetables.

The parents made their statements in an interview, Mrs. Dionne who frequently presides at the noon feedings, said she has found the children burn away from their main part of the meal, the "greasy, salty meat" which is followed by adding a little mashed banana.

At this feeding, as at another, there was "barely a thief" of a small cup of milk for each child and "they didn't drink it greedily".

At the evening meal, she said, she gives each baby one two heapings of oatmeal porridge hungrily. Sugar is not used for oatmeal, Mrs. Dionne thought this could be varied by using corn syrup. Each child at this feeding was given a cup of milk. Tyrone, on one occasion, was given a cup and a half.

Not Enough Bread, Cake.

The mother added that she would be more liberal in bread allowances, saying the three are regularly limited to one slice of crusty brown bread and one thin white cake apiece at each meal. Mrs. Dionne also

Canadian Play Judged Best in Drama Festival

(By Ray Brown)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, April 27.—(CP)—Their costumes and make-up packed for the annual trek to participants in the Dominion Drama Festival today the curtain on the competition, which ended with a Canadian play by a Canadian.

The Beaubrough Trophy, richly-colored plaque presented by Canada's former Governor General, founder of the Festival, was in possession of the Little Theatre League to hand, for the ensuing year, of the London Little Theatre.

"Twenty-five cents" by Eric Harris was the vehicle which won the approval of Harley Granville-Barker, Festival Adjudicator, and the unanimous decision for first prize.

One of four Canadian productions to reach the finals, "Twenty-Five Cents" was the first play by a native of Canada to win the Beaubrough trophy. Earlier, the Little Theatre, on which a group from London carried off the silver rose bowl.

Now it has moved to London, and the permanent citizens of groups in the Western Ontario region are rewarded.

Honorable Mention

But while it was the main prize of the festival, others were awarded in recognition of plays, players, production and direction. Geraldine Sutherland, Director Moiseiwitsch, Toronto, received honorable mention for her production of "Lady Precious Stream" by Hsi-Tseng-Tsou and Stewart Robb.

The radical play "Waiting for Lefty" by Clifford Odets put the Progressive Arts Club of Vancouver in the winning column, selected by the adjudicator as the best English play entered. Jean Roberts, of Beaubrough prize-winner.

"Twenty-five cents" was the Beaubrough prize-winner is automatically become also winner of the Sir Ernest MacMillan Trophy for the best presentation in the finals of a play written by a Canadian.

Lady Tweedsmuir's awards for the best individual performances by a man and woman went to Ivor Lewis of the Little Theatre League, Toronto, and Judith Evelyn of Toronto Hart House. The former played Lord Ian Clutterbuck in "Over the Rockies" by Percy Mackaye, and the latter Maggie Cheriton in "The Magnanimous Lover", by Stanley Houghton.

LINERS SPEED TO AID OF FREIGHTER

Late Reports State Immediate Assistance Is Unnecessary

New York, April 27.—(AP)—Two giant liners sped to the aid of the freighter Florida, which reported a mid-Atlantic today after another stricken, vessel, the British freighter Cortona needed immediate assistance was unnecessary.

The Georgia-America Liner Pilsudski, which raced through heavy seas to stand by the Ivanhoe after the latter's rudder broke, pointed her bow toward New York after she again was proceeding on her way.

"Ivanhoe now considers can wait until she gets to port," Captain Ward, "says the liner reported.

The Florida, however, was believed to be in a more precarious condition than the Ivanhoe. Nevertheless, the last wireless report from the British cargo ship last night said her steering apparatus was damaged and her radio room flooded.

The Bremen and the Washington, Queens of the German and American merchant marines, sped to give assistance, although bad weather and high seas slowed their progress. Messages yesterday from another British freighter, the Rushpool, also told of difficulties, but in the absence of further reports no vessels swerved from their courses to her aid.

COMMUNIST GAINS A STANDOUT IN FRENCH ELECTION

Balloting Indecisive in Choosing The 618 Deputies

VOTE AGAIN SUNDAY

Edward Herriott, Former Premier Fails to Gain Seat in First Ballot

(Copyright, 1936, By The Havas Agency)

Paris, April 27 (CP-Havas)—Communist gains stood out today as the principal feature in yesterday's election of 618 deputies to the 618 deputies for the next Paris, next. About 40 Communists were elected, to take seats in the Chamber of Deputies.

The election since 1906 was the first day's balloting so indecisive as yesterday, with only 179 seats decided, leaving 436 to be filled by run-off election to be held next Sunday.

Of the total vote cast by 10,000,000 of France's 10,000,000 voters cast-ballots yesterday, the largest vote since the war.

One fatality was reported during the balloting. It occurred at Marseille, where a young voter was killed during a fight between whose persons, described as members of a rival political faction, fired on the car in which they were riding.

The small number of definite decisions made it useless to attempt a forecast of the probable make up of the next Chamber of Deputies.

It was estimated that the Communists will gain from 15 to 30 seats. Premier Leon Blum's Popular Front government held 97 seats in the old Parliament, but the Communist gains were made in the Paris area and in the industrial centres of the north.

Many Socialists were assured to have held their positions in the Socialist strongholds districts of France, or even to have gained votes.

Socialists Fail To Gain

The Socialists were expected to increase their strength over the same number of seats they held in the last election, but about 100.

The Radical Socialists, the most numerous group in the old Parliament, were expected likely to lose about 30 seats, but still maintain their leadership with the remaining 150 places.

Socialist members of Premier Sarraut's Cabinet were re-elected on the first ballot, while fifty others were declared for the run-off election. The Premier is a member of the Senate and his seat was not subject to the present election.

One of the surprises of yesterday's balloting was the failure of Edouard Herriot, former Premier of France, to win a seat, running on the Radical Socialist Party, to win the seat on the first ballot in Thalyon constituency, which he has represented since 1919.

As his nearest rival opponent failed of an absolute majority, it was expected that Herriot, and a score of other Leftist groups behind him, he will be re-elected next Sunday.

Herriot was current Past night after results showed he failed to win on the first ballot that Herriot would withdraw and not contest the run-off. This report was immediately denied.

Taschereau to Use 'It' 'In My Old Age'

Montreal, April 27 (CP) — Premier Taschereau celebrated his second his 69th. birthday anniversary last month, but put something over on his old age.

Recipient today of an engraved cane from St. Mary's Hospital in recognition of his support during a campaign in behalf of extension of the institution, the Premier expressed himself as pleased with the present the donors he would use it "in my old age."

42 Year Federal Charter in Liquor Case Invoked

Hamilton, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Magistrate R. A. Burbidge today reserved judgment on a liquor law problem which has forced the judge to study a charter dating back to 1894. The case followed a raid by the Hamilton Liquor Squad Sunday, March 22, on the Germania Club.

Officers declared they found nine men and two women drinking what is alleged to have been beer. The club officials argue the organization incorporated by Sir John Gibson in 1894 a charter under the Ontario Companies' Act authorizing it to serve beer, ale, porter and wine up to 15 per cent proof spirits at any time.

Magistrate Burbidge will have to decide if this charter grants the club the privileges of serving the beverages on Sundays under the present Liquor Control Act.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

Collingwood, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Walter White and Herb Reynolds won a race and it was lucky they did, footing fish nets a few miles north of Collingwood, they started a race for the harbor. Reynolds with the wind started to blow a large field of loose ice across the bay, they had to race to reach the harbor before the ice. They reached the harbor a few yards ahead of the ice barrier.

Kenora, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Fitted with a steel bottom and a six-foot airplane propeller, a large which invade over both water and ice has been constructed by Fred Arnold and Walter Whalley. It can carry a ton, and has already been used to reach several logging camps.

Hanover, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Drivers passing through Hanover have been made to feel foolish lately. Over a main street intersection, there is a set of lights on their brakes, and wait for the light to change. It is all part of a game. It's just there to let the Chief of Police know when he's tired—on into a street car on the highway at Minion.

Eye-witnesses said Horton's automobile was travelling about 60 miles an hour, when it struck the street car. The impact almost threw the machine 40 feet and terrified the occupants. Horton and Radmore were thrown out on the road, unhurt, but the others were trapped in the back seat.

Travis Horton, brother of the dead youth, said the speedometer on the car had been broken for the last month and was not working at the time of the crash. He said the fact the hand registered 97 miles an hour was not significant, however, speed.

Only one of the 35 passengers in the street car was injured, suffering cuts, when the shock of the crash threw his head through a window, Motorman Peter Davidson, although the windows all about him were broken was uninjured.

Travelling east, Horton swung his car over to pass another automobile on a long straight road, and veered over on to the tracks on the north side of the highway. The high speed made it impossible for Horton to pull his car out of the path of the approaching street car.

Horton distinguished himself several times this year, having played a leading role in frustrating an attempted holdup of the Minion branch of the Dominion Bank. He fired two shots at the bandits, and displayed some well-known assistant professional at the Lakeview Golf Club.

Must Reduce to Stay In the United States

Boston, April 27 (AP)—Miss Nora E. Lee, 51, a British subject, is dieting in an effort to stay in the United States.

The woman, who came to this country from Cowley, England, to visit and care for an ailing sister, was ordered deported to Canada, formerly of New Bedford, has been decided permanent stay, by Commissioner Harry A. Hull, because of "physical obesity".

Miss Lee, who is 5 feet, requirements of immigration officials, Commissioner Hull said today, who is 4 feet, 11 inches tall, has already reduced about nine pounds to 171 pounds. She must reduce to 152 pounds.

MAGILL'S DOG WILL HAVE GOOD HOME

Mrs. Magill Will Take Animal to Her Toronto Home

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—"Moses" will find a home now with the children of the man he loved. "Moses" is the Great Dane, pal of Herman R. Magill who died in the heart of Moose River gold mine while rescuers dug to have Dr. D. R. Robertson and Alfred Scadding.

Mrs. Magill today said she would bring the faithful animal to her Toronto home where he could be the companion of Magill's children.

Fred Scadding, brother of Alfred, in a letter to his mother here today described how "Moses" refused food for several days as his master faced death in the mine cave-in.

TERRIFIC SPEED IS BLAMED FOR DEATH OF FOUR

Car in Which Youths Rode Collides Head-on With Street Car

POLICE PROBE CRASH

Eyewitnesses State Car Was Travelling Over 60 M. P. H.

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Arrangements for the burial of four young suburban Toronto men, killed in an automobile-street car crash, were being made today while police continued their investigation into the crash.

Howard Morton, 24, Swansea; Desmond Robona, 26, George Rodmore, 27, and James Forbes, 26, all of Mimico, died almost instantly yesterday, when Horton drove his car head-on into a street car on the highway at Minion.

Eye-witnesses said Horton's automobile was travelling about 60 miles an hour, when it struck the street car. The impact almost threw the machine 40 feet and terrified the occupants. Horton and Radmore were thrown out on the road, unhurt, but the others were trapped in the back seat.

GETTING READY FOR BIG SHOW AT "Y"

With the YMCA Circus only two days away there is activity aplenty at the Campbell St. location, in preparation for the big show. Practically every previous circus staged on the "Y" Gym has had a greater variety of performers, but will be attested the spectators on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week. Something going on all the time. Plenty of thrills, laughter provoking stunts by clowns and gymnasts, dancing drills, pyramids as well as comical acts will all go to make up a very full evening's programme of close to thirty numbers. The youngsters will want to come out and enjoy themselves and as for the adults, here is another opportunity to renew your youth. To miss the 1936 edition of the Y. circus would be nothing short of a tragedy. Let Down.

TWO YEAR TERM IS GIVEN JONES

Sentence Will be Concurrent With Cobourg

Frank Jones, 23-year-old Montreal seaman, was sentenced to serve two years in the Portsmouth Penitentiary by Magistrate W. J. Butler in the latter's local Police Court. Jones admitted breaking into the safe and entering Myrus' grocery store on the night of April 3rd last and obtaining $30.00 in cash, a set of tools and a revolver from the stock.

The sentence meted out in the local court today will run concurrently with a previous sentence given Jones in a Cobourg court last week when he was given a two year term in the penitentiary after being found guilty of breaking and entering.

George Hill, 23-year-old Montreal sailor, also appeared and was charged with aiding Jones in committing the Myrus' robbery, but Hill denied being connected with the latter robbery. No evidence was offered by Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan, K.C., with the result the charge was dismissed against him. Hill received a two-year sentence after being found guilty of being an accessory after the fact. Jones in the Cobourg robbery. Jones' case was brought to Belleville for trial by Plainclothes Officer Fred Hurst, who conducted the investigation and subsequently procured the information that implicated Jones, with the local robbery.

Both men have waived appeal and will be taken to the penitentiary tomorrow.

2 PAY FINES AND MACHINES SEIZED

Operation of Pin Machines Found Illegal By Magi.

Firmly guilty of keeping common gaming houses, two Gamiffon parlors, George Lyward and Mrs. Ada Carmichael, were fined $10.00 and costs each and had the pin machines confiscated by the police department appeared before Magistrate R. J. Butler, K.C., today.

Both men pleaded ignorance of the law in their defence, stating that when they gave cash and premiums to players, who operated their machines, they were informed by the distributors, that it was perfectly legitimate to give premiums, as long as cash prizes were not awarded the winning player. They stated Mr. Carmichael while Mr. Lyward was equally as frank in his testimony.

The fact that these coin operated slot machines and gave premiums, when the machines are for the purpose of gambling with their pieces of gritty, settles the matter. I therefore ask for a fine and an order for the confiscation of the machines and their subsequent destruction," added Crown Attorney H. C. Donnan, K.C., as the fine was granted by the Bench. The machines are held in custody for a period of fifty days, before they can be destroyed, it was pointed out by Magistrate Butler, however.

Two Canadian youths, Ross and Ralph Downey, were the Crown's witnesses, both stating they had received premiums upon attaining certain scores, while playing the two machines in question. The cases were taken up after the Lyward case, when the pin machine at Lywood's garage was broken open and the cash stolen from the money till. The cases were investigated and brought to trial by Provincial Constable L. C. Carr.

Seven men sitting on the cases after sentences had been meted out. Magistrate Butler said: "Most of these types of slot machine introduced into this country are gambling machines and this practice must be stopped even if we have to go to the full extent of the law", warned His Worship.

"NAME DAY" FOR GREEKS OBSERVED

Happy Function Held at The Mooee Auditorium

Greek residents of this city supplemented by a number of visitors from Peterboro, Hamilton, Kingston, Toronto and Ottawa, met at the Mooee auditorium on Sunday evening for a "Name Day" celebration, those whose Christian name is George. Four "Georges" of this city, George Jones, George Kiss, George Lapros and George Poulis being the hosts to the gathering which numbered eighty.

A most sumptuous repast was prepared by Mick Chargpais, chef at the Hotel Quinte, while Alex Aanis was in charge of arrangements for the banquet room. The toast to the King and Royal Family, Canada, the Greek people, the health of the hosts and others were tendered in order to trigger the light fantastic until the early hours. Entertainment was made in St. James' Cemetery.

Mr. Jones rendered several solos in the Greek language which were much appreciated. Many realizations of the Greek Orthodox Church were invited guests and appreciated the honor conferred upon them.

Mr. Jones is an old standing custom of the Greeks. Instead of celebrating the birthday date, a "Name Day" is held on the day of the saint after which they are named, is observed. St. George's Day came on Tuesday but Sunday being the best day for the Greeks to celebrate. A hearty vote of thanks to the food board was proposed before the gathering broke up.

PILGRIMS SPEAK TO CONGREGATION

Alliance Gospel Tabernacle Prayer Service Well Attended

Yesterday witnessed the beginning of the second week of Revival meetings in the Alliance Gospel Tabernacle. These very uplifting and inspiring services are being conducted by Pilgrims J. O'Neill and Mrs. Dudley of the Faith Mission Pilgrims, of Great Britain, United States and Canada.

Interest throughout the past week has been clearly evidenced by the encouraging and steady attendance and the testimonies of those assembled. Many souls have accepted and received help and blessing from the Word and have found victory therein.

Two outstanding features of the evening hour that have been, the well attended Prayer meeting before each service, and the very helpful after meeting held after the Evening Service each evening has been a time of real blessing and victory as well as being conducive to a splendid fellowship among the entire meeting.

The Messages each evening have been of a very challenging and helpful nature.

The services yesterday were well attended, a record crowd in the evening.

The spirit of the meeting each evening ran high, and a number remained behind after the services to seek help and Salvation. The preacher each evening is Pilgrim for the occasion, Hebrews 2:3 "How shall we escape if we neglect so great Salvation?"

Hospitalization Problem is Discussed

Ottawa, April 27 (CP)— Various measures dealing with ex-servicemen's affairs were examined before the House of Commons Pensions Committee by Capt. E. Browne-Wilkinson, of the Army and Navy Veterans Association, here today. Numerous amendments to the Pension Act were analyzed, with objection or approval registered.

The veterans strongly opposed certain features of the recently issued order-in-council which amended hospitalization allowances of war pensioners. He found some dissatisfaction in their application, giving departmental officials too much power, and others too narrow.

The committee decided to finish hearing all witnesses this week. The morrow spokesmen of the Canadian Corps Association will be heard.

Obituary

MISS LILA MILLER

The announcement of the death of Miss Lila Miller, which occurred suddenly at the family residence, 36 Cedar Street, Saturday night, came as a great shock to her many friends in this city. Miss Miller had not been in the best of health for some time she had been able to perform her duties at the packing section of the job printing department at the Ontario Intelligencer office and on Saturday she was in her place at the desk apparently in her usual state of health. To the management and employees of the Ontario Intelligencer her sudden passing has brought deep sorrow. Besides that she was highly thought of and popular with the entire staff, being of a bright, happy disposition and capable in the performance or her duties. Her sudden passing has brought sincere regret also to her personal friends in this city, but also by all who knew her she was held in high regard.

The late Miss Lila Miller was born in Scotland, her parents being Mrs. Miller and the late James D. Miller. For twenty-five years she has been a resident of Belleville. In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Surviving to mourn her passing are her mother, two sisters, Mrs. Charles Fisher and Mrs. Kenneth Sunnets, both of Belleville, one brother, Mr. James Miller, also of Belleville.

The funeral announcement appears elsewhere in this paper.

MAY HOLD PARLEY AT CORONATION

Empire Trade Pact Must Be Revised by 1937

OTTAWA April 27—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King is expected to give the House of Commons the name of the Commissioner, who will sit with Chairman A. D. Purvis on the National Employment Commission, establishment of which was authorized by a Bill giving Royal assent before the Easter adjournment.

Last week the Prime Minister announced that Mr. Purvis, head of a large Montreal industrial firm, had accepted the appointment as chairman and that those who would serve with him on the permanent commission would be selected as soon as possible.

Cabinet sessions were held daily during the week with a long meeting on Saturday, but the Prime Minister had no announcements ready.

It was believed, however, that considerable progress had been made with arrangements for the personnel of the commission and that further statements would be given the House this week.

Mr. Mackenzie King, who stated soon after his election victory that he would go to England as soon as convenient to discuss matters here with the British Government, has made no decision as to when he will make the trip. He indicated yesterday he would not know until the end of the week.

Revise Agreements in 1937

The Empire Trade Agreements are due for revision after December 31st, 1936 and it has been generally assumed the occasion of the Imperial Conference next year, when all the Dominion Premiers will be in London, will be used as an opportunity for an economic conference. It is believed likely, however, that preliminary discussions will be opened before that time and that Prime Minister King will visit London this year.

Railway Legislation is expected to occupy the House of Commons when it begins the week-end session today. The special Committee on Pensions and returned soldier problems will meet again tomorrow at least three special committees will be in functioning this week. The arrangement of committee work scheduled for the remainder of the session.

Great interest centres about the Budget Finance Minister Dunning will be presenting within the next few weeks. There has been no official indication of its contents on the date it will be laid before Parliament but it is expected before the middle of May at latest. This will probably be the subject of a question by opposition Leader Bennett some time this week.

King Fuad's Condition Grave, Reports State

Cairo, April 27 (AP)—The condition of King Fuad, gravely ill with a throat and lung infection, became more worse today, the Royal physicians announced.

The 68-year-old sovereign passed a restless night and his fever was high. It was feared that Fuad's condition would be critical today.

The ailing monarch's 16-year-old son, Crown Prince Farouk, has been standing by at the bedside of his father.

Stunting Plane Crash Being Investigated

Detroit, Mich., April 27 (CP)—Aviation officials and police were investigating the crash of a stunting airplane last night in which Jay F. Hickey, 34, formerly of Hamilton, Ont., and William Medycki, 18, were killed.

Hickey, who has conducted a tobacco shop on Woodward avenue for the last five years, and who came to Detroit from his home in Hamilton about two years ago, was piloting the plane, flying low over a row of houses not far from the city airport, the plane struck a guy wire and fell to the ground, down in a vacant lot. Hickey was decapitated. Medycki, a passenger, died in a hospital in the afternoon.

Airport officials reported that the plane had been stunting low in the neighborhood. The option was expressed that the guy wire had stopped the flying property and that Hickey was trying to make an emergency landing.

Red Cross Society Sponsors Wide Humanitarian Program

In making its annual appeal for funds to carry on its various health activities in this community for another twelve months, the Red Cross Society has stressed the importance of the underscored humanitarian work it has initiated and is promoting under its peacetime mandate: "The Prevention of Disease, the Relief of Suffering of Disease and the Mitigation of Suffering throughout the World."

"Please we forget"—through its many services for sick, disabled and needy veterans and their families, the Red Cross is expressing Canada's appreciation and remembrance of their suffering and sacrifice.

2. A chain of life-saving stations as Red Cross Outpost Hospitals and nursing centres are conserving the lives and health of our scattered settlers in isolated districts of our Dominion.

3. Children's crusade—35,000 children in Canadian schools are practising health, safety for children's and international friendliness under the inspiration of Junior Red Cross.

4. Crippled children—11,500 crippled children have been assisted by Canadian Juniors.

5. Aid for victims of disaster—the Red Cross is equipped to render effective relief in any part of the Dominion.

6. For the family's health—Red Cross Home Nursing Courses are teaching thousands of Canadian women the elementals of home nursing, infant and maternal welfare, resuscitation, etc.

7. When the mother is sick—the Red Cross Visiting Housekeeper Service sends trained women into needy homes where the mothers are sick to care for the children and to keep the household running.

8. The right to health—through the Red Cross Nutrition Service brings scientific knowledge in regard to food to many communities.

9. For undernourished children—the Red Cross is distributing milk and cod liver oil to undernourished pre-school children in numerous districts.

10. For the destitute—in addition to its emergency relief organization, including hostels, clothing and bedding etc., the Red Cross through its scores of groups of volunteer workers, provides thousands of articles of clothing for the relief of destitute families each year.

11. First Aid stations—in co-operation with other organizations, the Red Cross operates First Aid Stations on Canadian highways.

In a recent radio address, Sir E. W. Beatty remarked: "The work of the Red Cross is one of which we may all be proud. Especially we may be proud of its accomplishments during these last years. It meets during these days a very sphere of federal, provincial and municipal. It has met the test of the times and is stronger to-day than at any time since the War."

William Johnson and Wife Are Commemorated by Font

Impressive Dedication at Bridge Street United Church

More than twenty-three years after his death, the memory of William Johnson, veteran superintendent of Bridge Street Methodist Sunday School who died in October 1913 and of Mrs. Johnson, is shared a very large congregation on Sunday morning at Bridge Street United Church, when a beautiful octagonal baptismal font of oak was presented to the church, inscribed by a granddaughter of the late Mr. Johnson and Mrs. Johnson, Miss Evalyn Johnson, and dedicated by the Rev. James Semple, B.A. D. minister. The font, the gift of Mr. James Sawyer Johnson of Boston, son of William and Mary L. Johnson, was used at the same service for the baptism of 3 children. The font bears a brass tablet inscribed "William and Mary L. Johnson. In memoriam."

Members of the Sunday School for which Mr. Johnson labored for thirty-eight years as superintendent, were present in a body, though only older members, teachers and officials had been invited. Johnson's grandchildren but all knew him by personality but all knew him by name. Many persons who had passed through the school and been members of the congregation were present at the dedication ceremony.

His Memory a Challenge

The service was no more unique than the life of the late Mr. Johnson and the life of Mrs. Johnson, according to officials who took part in the service is a challenge to you all who are here this morning," commented Mr. Semple at the close of the service in which tribute had been paid to the activities of heart and mind and the Christian character of Mr. Johnson.

Those taking part in the ceremony besides the granddaughter, Evalyn Johnson, and Dr. Semple the minister, were Mr. J. Beech Diamond, who made the presentation in the absence of Mr. James S. Johnson, Mr. H. J. Clarke, Inspector of Schools, who accepted the gift on behalf of the board, His Honour Judge O. E. Devoche, who followed Mr. Johnson as secretary, Rev. Dr. E. N. Baker, and Mr. F. B. Deacon, recording secretary, Mrs. Stobie sang "I'm Sure One Shall Not Pass Again" and "The Children's Prayer."

Hymns Were Sung

The hymns sung were fitting for the occasion and meant of Mr. Johnson's great love for and work among children. "What A Friend We Have in Jesus," "When He Cometh When the Trumpet of the Lord, in the Fullness of My Might."

A large framed portrait of Mr. Johnson rested on an easel at the side of the font.

Mr. Diamond in making the presentation said that he lived received the regret of all that Mr. James Sawyer Johnson was unable to be present on account of business engagements in St. Louis. He said was one of the former residents of Belleville who keep in close touch with their native place. Mr. Diamond then said: "I regret that a great friend is not present Mr. James Johnson and his family have asked you to accept from him in memory of his father and mother this baptismal font."

"The board of the church cheerfully accepts," said Mr. J. C. Clarke, "this gift from James Johnson in memory of his parents who for so long filled a large place in the activities of this church. The board would request that Mr. Diamond convey to Mr. Johnson its appreciation of the beautiful and appropriate gift.

Font Fitting Memorial

"I can think of no more fitting memorial to Mr. Johnson than a baptismal font," continued Mr. Clarke. "William Johnson loved little children. They were the most to him in Bridge Street Church. He was gifted with great organizing ability and able to chose workers of outstanding gifts among them. Mrs. Nathan Jones, F. E. O'Flynn, C. P. Holton, W. Flint Jones and our dear friend Mrs. F. E. O'Flynn who has given her life to this church.

"Mr. Johnson was able to build this school's membership up to 1000. The peculiar thing about him was that he knew as all by name. In those days it was the custom to have picnics and the younger scholars were taken free on the boat. But they were not given tickets. Johnson was at the dock and boat and each child's face was his ticket. He knew them all.

"I as a child came to know him. To us he was the ideal man," said Mr. Clarke who himself became president of Mr. Johnson.

"The inspector went on to say that Mr. Johnson's activities were not confined to the superintendency. He was an able worker outside the school. He was the greatest of leaders. Mr. Johnson had a class of boys and young men from the twelve to thirty-five years of age, and Mr. Clarke and scores of them who had come not as members of the congregation became church members."

Font Is Dedicated

The unveiling act was performed at this time and the minister announced the dedication "In the Name of God the Father, the Son and the Holy Ghost we dedicate this baptismal font for service in the Church of the Living God."

The baptismal service followed.

Mr. Beech Diamond, recalled, declared that when he came to Belleville in 1880 at the age of 14 years, William Johnson was the outstanding layman of his church. He was also recording steward and no books were ever like his records which were a whole history of the congregation during the years in which he served. "Mr. Johnson lived, ate, and slept, at all times, membership in the church. He was a live wire," commented the judge, referring to his work among the young people and his work in connection with the organization of the Adult Bible Class of which Judge Deroche became the teacher.

Memorial in Lives

"Mr. Johnson never forgot faces and names of young and old. I have been greatly assisted by Mr. Johnson like here in the loving thoughts of men and women and in their lives scattered throughout he everywhere, as a result of their contact with Mr. Johnson in the Sunday School.

Judge Deroche declared that Mr. Johnson was a man of method, he ran the school on a business basis and his introduction service was unique.

Rev. Dr. W. Baker spoke in highest terms of the association of Mrs. Mr. Johnson with the church and school. "She was the great woman behind the life work of Mr. Johnson possible. Mr. Johnson's chief greatness was his gift for the ministry," said Dr. Baker noted. He related how Mr. Johnson would come to the Wednesday class half an hour ahead of time, spend the time in the intervening time on his knees in prayer in the church, and then at the hour he left the city without prayer with Mr. Johnson.

Mrs. Baker had a fear like Hannah —she made his Christian work possible. If there was anyone sick in the congregation he would be there". Instances of this devotion to the sick were cited by Dr. Baker.

Recording Steward Fred S. Deacon, who presided, said he is one of Mr. William Johnson's boys, said Mr. Deacon. He spoke of the long service superintendent's great affection and kindness for the little children when they came to Sunday School. He had a gift for children's memories, said Mr. Deacon. He succeeded the Hon. Billa Flint as recording steward. Mr. Deacon's records of the church and congregation begin March 1858 when there was a population of 1150.

"I cannot at times if it would not be better for his health here to be real from his activities, Mr. Johnson would say, saying, "I want to die out, not rust out," Mr. Deacon said in closing.

"May I be permitted to add to the saying of the late General Booth, 'God shall have all there is of William Booth.' I would add that the same could have been said by William Johnson of himself, 'God shall have all there is of William Johnson.'"

The minister pointed out instances where former Bellevillians on sojourners in the city in olden days had their child memory of Belleville in William Johnson.

Late James Jordan

Frankford's oldest resident, Mr. James Jordan passed away at the home of his son, Edward Jordan, Frankford yesterday afternoon. The deceased was ninety six years of age and was in good health up until the time of his sudden death. He was born in Picton, the son of the late Edward Jordan and Anne Murphy. He received his education in Picton schools and when a young man went to the Southern States, where he was an employee of the American Government during the building of the Santa Fe railroad. He related many tales of the Indians wars and knew General Custer personally. In 1882 he returned to this country and married Miss Anne Sullivan. They took up residence on a homestead near Frankford and resided there until the death of Mrs. Jordan some years ago. He leaves to mourn his loss, one daughter, Mrs. J. J. Macnab of Trenton and one son Edward Jordan, with whom he resided. The funeral will be held Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock in St. Francis of Assisi Catholic Church in Frankford. Interment will be made in Frankford Cemetery.

LIVES LOST THROUGH GASOLINE

Hon. Arthur W. Roebuck, K.C., Attorney-General for Ontario, issues a strict warning against the dangers of using gasoline for cleaning purposes following a terrible loss of life and serious personal injuries in Ontario in recent months which had been reported to him by Fire Marshal W. J. Scott. Not only is there the personal danger to the user of the gasoline, but also the highest Court in Ontario in a recent case held a concern liable for $11,000.00 damages resulting from a fire which occurred when washing a garage floor with gasoline. Both danger and damage from fires through using gasoline for cleaning purposes can be avoided, states the Attorney-General, by using one of the recognized cleaning solvents prepared by the leading oil companies which are not only as efficient as gasoline but also somewhat cheaper in price.

Six deaths have resulted from gasoline fires so far in 1936, and many persons have suffered severe and disfiguring burns. In the most tragic fire reported this year, four young children were burned to death and their father was badly burned when a bottle of gasoline broke on being taken into their warm home in Western Ontario. A few weeks ago, a London service station attendant succumbed to burns he received in a garage fire. At the time of the accident he was cleaning the floor with gasoline. A short time previously two garage employees were the victims of painful burns in similar fires also occurring when washing the floor with gasoline. Another death was reported from Windsor from the use of gasoline for cleaning purposes. After scrubbing floors in a Windsor home with gasoline, a domestic was enveloped in flames which burned her clothes and inflicted most serious painful body injuries.

Included in the igniting sparks for these gasoline fires were a furnace and an electric cord connection, also an acetylene blow torch, all of which readily ignited the inflammable vapours from the gasoline. Petroleum products accounted for 136 fires in the first three months of this year. Although gasoline was the most serious to life in this period, kerosene was also responsible for many injuries, especially when used in the common practice of lighting stove fires. In one instance, an explosion while kerosene was being poured on a slow-burning fire, burning two persons badly and damaging their home.

The court case as to the civil liability from the careless use of gasoline was one in which the Ontario Court of Appeal gave a judgment the end of February in which the defendant garage proprietors are compelled to pay the plaintiff's costs to the owner of the building and his insurance companies following a disastrous fire caused by using gasoline to wash the floor in the garage. In delivering the judgment, Mr. Justice Middleton says in part: "Gasoline is a dangerous substance. Gasoline vapour is far more dangerous and when it is exposed to the contact of fire, an explosion is inevitable. The care necessary in such cases is consummate care and it is doubtful whether even this be strong enough . . . Anyone who does a patently dangerous thing, should, I think, be responsible."

During the first quarter of 1936, fires claimed the lives of 37 persons and caused injuries to 33 others in Ontario. Casualties resulted in 44 of the 4,124 fires of this period. While there were 19 less fires in the first three months of this year than in the same time in 1935, the property loss was $2,577,751.00, an increase of $759,046.00. Weather conditions are considered largely responsible for the increased fire losses of the past winter. Prolonged spells of cold weather and heavy snowfalls, not only required more heating in buildings, but also prevented fire departments from functioning as efficiently as usual when blazes occurred.

In dwellings throughout the province, 2,293 fires originated during the first three months of 1936, causing losses of $738,521.00 to property. While the number of fires was slightly less than in the first quarter of 1935, the loss was $38,640.00 greater. The loss from factory fires was $467,674.00 in 112 fires. This represents an increase of 29 fires and $302,591.00. Stores also suffered heavily as 342 fires caused damage of $839,016.00, an increase of 62 fires and $215,085.00 in property losses. Barn fires since January 1st, 1936, decreased considerably from the same period last year. Only 33 barns, valued at $49,377.00 were destroyed, a decrease of 16 fires and $455,766.00 loss.

THE POET'S SPRING

O, up the vale light April trips,
On silver-sandaled feet,
Scattering dew from her finger tips,
Where earth and heaven meet.

The South-wind bravely winds his horn
All golden and all mellow,
And all around the garden paths,
The daffodils are yellow.

O'er beside the silvern-stream
Down is on the willow.
And shy-eyed violets peeping up
From nature's greening pillow.

And from the sweetness of her lips,
Spring drops petals drenched with rain,
And by the wooded path she slips
To tryst with Beauty once again.

—Harry Atkinson, Albert College.

WHEN THE SHOUTING AND THE TUMULT DIES there comes an awful calm, a feeling that something is missing in our lives, a vacancy which had been filled for days with shrieking newspaper headlines and amazing radio broadcasts, kept up day and night, some to optimistic, some too pessimistic, while newspapers issued special editions and printed columns of readable news matter from one of the least attractive places, in scenic valuation, on the continent, but the stage where a thrilling drama was being enacted a real human drama in which human lives were at stake, one life had been taken, and it was a thrilling race against Time and the Grim Reaper. The reaction of the spectator at a distance must compare in measure with those engaged in the actual battle for the lives of the men imprisoned beneath tons of rock and earth, a sharp swing back to normal, almost painful in the immensity of the gulf seemingly spanned.

PRAISE GOD FROM WHOM ALL BLESSINGS FLOW, that grand old doxology hymn, was sung by the crowd of miners and others engaged in rescue work at Moose River Mines, as well as spectators, when the men were brought to the surface—and the hymn was sung with fervor, expressing heartfelt thanks that the Giver of All Good had helped and protected the rescuers in their perilous drive to liberate the imprisoned men. It is not strange that instinctively in time of stress the heart turns to God—and it is strange that man forgets so soon when fortune smiles and life flows on like a song.

A TWENTY TON DISK OF GLASS ARRIVED AT PASADENA, California, the other day after a sixteen day journey across the continent from Corning, N.Y., in a specially arranged freight car. The glass disk was encased in a steel protective covering, and represented a year's work by the Corning Glass Works. Eventually it is hoped to be the 200-inch telescope mirror destined for California Institute of Technology, which will bring the stars three times closer to man's vision than ever before, annihilating millions of miles. For nearly a year since it was formed of molten pyrex borosilicate glass the great disk cooled slowly in the annealing oven. The glass weighed 20 ton, the packing case in which it reposed fifteen tons more. The trailer which brought it to the rail spur took thirty hours to move a quarter-mile. A freight car was specially built to carry the glass 3,000 miles across the continent. Flat and without sides it was so cut down in the centre that it's bottom was only 5½ inches above the rails. Its wheels were only 26 inches in diameter instead of the standard 33 inches. A huge railroad crane lifted the mirror slowly to a vertical position, swung it clear of the trailer. Inch by inch it was lowered into the railway car. For a half-hour it was allowed to settle comfortably into its recess. Then the New York Central Railroad men telephoned his home office that the loading was complete. The train was scheduled to travel no faster than thirty miles per hour and since it was impossible to provide lateral clearance of 18 feet the mirror had to be shipped standing upright. Problem of overhead clearance was studied and the best route planned, the tightest squeeze being a three-inch bridge clearance at Buffalo. At Pasadena the big lens will be ground to the required shape, a process which may require three or four years. The giant telescope was made possible by a grant of $6,000,000 of Rockfeller money in 1928.

ITALIAN TROOPS ON LAST DRIVE

Motorized Column of 15,000 on Way to Addis Ababa

By EDWARD J. KEHL
Copyright, 1936,
By The Associated Press.

With the Italian army at Dessye, Ethiopia, April 26—(by field wireless to Asmara, Eritrea, April 27)—A motorized column of 15,000 Italian troops, spearhead of the giant Fascist thrust into Ethiopia, rolled south from Dessye today, driving down the Imperial highway to Addis Ababa.

The great motor cavalcade roared out of the former field headquarters of Emperor Haile Selassie at dawn Sunday, moving toward the capital of the King of Kings and a climax to the final act of this East African war drama.

More than 1,000 huge trucks formed the thundering line. Most of them carried 18 men each, comprising an entire white army column. The others were auxiliary trucks, to provide for possible breakdowns, and bearers of great quantities of supplies.

Hours after their departure, they were approaching the positions of the native Ethiopian Askari who had already advanced far down the road to Addis Ababa by foot.

The weather favored the offensive. The sun rose over the hills about Dessye as the impressive column got underway. Later the skies remained clear, with sunshine pouring down on the tropical-flowered rolling landscape.

The entire population of this town, only recently Ras Dejazmatch Haile Selassie, Crown Prince and Woman and the Ethiopian Imperial Family, turned out to cheer the Italian forces at the start of their "big push" to the south.

RUXTON'S APPEAL IS DISMISSED

"Devil's Beef Tub" Killer Must Pay Penalty With Life

London, April 27 (AP)—The Court of Criminal Appeal today dismissed an appeal by Dr. Buck Ruxton, "Devil's Beef Tub" killer, from the death sentence for the murder of his wife.

Lord Hewart, the Chief Justice, announced the decision after the three judges of the court had considered a long plea by Dr. Ruxton's counsel, Norman Birkett, who claimed the judge had misdirected the jury in the original trial.

No evidence was called for from Crown Counsel and the judges consulted with each other only a few seconds before deciding on the rejection of the appeal.

Dr. Ruxton killed his wife and a servant, "on or about" Sept. 14, 1936, their bodies were dismembered and thrown in a ravine on the Scottish borders called the "Devil's Beef Tub."

He was to have been hanged April 1, but the hanging was postponed while Birkett carried an appeal to the high court.

50 YEARS AGO

April 27th, 1886.

Some noted Belleville dogs. The old dog Rough is remembered by "Rover", a great favorite with its owner, Mr. D. B. Roberton, city clerk, died a few days ago. He was the last of a number of notable dogs owned in Belleville within the past few years. Dr. Hagar's "Prince", age 18 years, could outleap any dog in these parts. Mr. H. C. Hulme's old "Bobber" was never known to miss a duck. Hon. Billa Flint's old dog "Don" was known as the Deputy Reeve of Elzevir, as he always took his master's seat in the County Council when he vacated it, and on one occasion showed his sagacity by bringing to Mr. Flint while he was engaged in a sharp wordy encounter in the council, a stone from the road with which, presumably to make his opponent. Mr. Mc-Fee's old "Jeff" would go for his daily papers and would distinguish between the Globe and the Mail. Mr. Roberson's "Rover", however, never allowed politics to affect his phenomenal faithfully carrying any property given to him. Forgetting his great age (17 years), two days before his death he sprang from the verandah after a cat and had a bad fall, from the effects of which he died.

IN THE NAME OF CIVILIZATION—Tearing a hole in the Red Cross emblem on the side of this tent, an Italian bomb or fragment thereof, brought sudden death to the Ethiopian girl lying amid the shambles. The tragedy occurred when Italian air men bombed and destroyed a British Red Cross ambulance unit in Ethiopia.

Marmora—Under the auspices of St. Paul's Ladies' Guild an excellent film taken by Fred D. Roy of Peterborough "Scenes on Parade" was shown in the Town Hall Friday evening. At the outset Mr. Roy gave a description of the Royal Review at Spithead in July 1935. This was followed by a reel in which the Jubilee Procession of the late King George V was shown in its progress through London, along with the Changing of the Guard at Buckingham Palace, Trooping the Colour at the Tower of London and the Trooping of the Colours at St. James' Palace. Another interesting reel followed showing the Naval Review at Spithead, taken from deck of the H.M.S. Resolution. The final reel showed scenes at Chamberlain Abbey, Wells Cathedral, Cheddar Cliffs and Cowes and Bath City.

The final reel showed the aboriginal habits previously spoken of. The audience was thrilled with the native display particularly the personal in color of the English residence and the decorations and fireworks display of the Royal Review.

The last card party of the season was held in the Separate School on Thursday evening when ten tables were enjoyed. Prizes were won by Mrs. P. Rowley and R. D. O'Connor. The door-prize was also secured by Mr. O'Connor. Delicious refreshments were served at the close of the game.

Little Benny's Noté Book

After supper pop said to me, My dear son, you will probaby find it difficult to believe, but with a minimum of effort I could be induced to go to the movies this evening. I see by the paper that the 4 Goofy Germans are at the Marvelorium in their latest and greatest picture, he said.

O dear I knew there must be a hidden string to it somewhere, ma said. You can call that's the way it's nothing but an empty issue of absurd technology and ridiculous nonsense, she said, and pop said, You must of been misinformed, the thing has a moral to it, and shall I outline it to you breafly?

For goodness sakes no, ma said, and pop said, Then I'll outline it in detail. It's about 4 bellicosly assermen, Bill, Phil, Oil and Dill, who cant sell any more perfectible because nobody pesce has been declared, so Bill, Phil, Oil and Dill either have to go to work or else go out of business, and being bizness men they naturally choose the alternative of starting a war, Bill, Phil, Oil and Dill, naturally, are the 4 Gersons, pop said.

If there's one thing I detest, it's shooting pitchers, ma said, and pop said, Then you'll just love it, because not a single shot is fired and there's not even any sudden slaughter, but I'll get on with the plot. It seems there are 4 girls, Jill, Pill, Mill and Dill who naturally are heavy set about this universal peace and who naturally resent Bill, Phil, Oil and Dill and try to undo their work by such underhand methods as feeding pepsi to the king of some mythical kingdom just before he dances with the queen of another mythical kingdom, he said.

Disdaining, sir, said pop, he said, as a new comes the big sensation, with a rocket from the moon containing 4 monsters, Bill, Phil, Oil and Phil, who are none other than Bill, Phil, Oil and Dill disguised behind each others mustaches.

Withyou I wont Helen to any more and I haven't even listened to that much, ma said.

Pop profanly having made it all up anyways and ma made him compreable by taking her to see Ronnel Ronnel at the Marvelorium.

I.O.O.F. ATTENDS CHURCH SERVICE

All Branches Headed by Municipal Band as They Parade

Commemorating the 117th anniversary of the founding of their order, the members of the Ivy Belleville Oddfellows' Lodges attended divine worship at the Tabernacle United Church on Sunday morning. The Rev. J. R. Naylor, pastor of the church, delivered the special message of the day, when he spoke on "The triumph over the power of mankind: Jesus Christ."

Members of the I.O.O.F. lodges and their associates paraded, led by the Belleville Municipal Band, from the I.O.O.F. Temple, Front Street, to the church and return. Headed by the Belleville Cantons No. 4, under Captain George Cornish, the Ballyrille I.O.O.F. Lodge No. 21 and Mizpah Lodge No. 197 followed by the lady members of Quinte Rebekah Lodge No. 132, Rev. Richard Goodfellow was the assistant of the day.

The Tabernacle Church was filled to welcome the fraternal order of the I.O.O.F., when Rev. Naylor delivered his special sermon of the day. Relating anecdotes of a fishing nature, Rev. Naylor spoke on the numerous beneficiaries of life, some of which were inflicted and others forced upon humanity, and how all such sufferings was the accompaniance of a closer relationship to God. "The power of mankind," he said. "There are two kinds of knowledge of life, one is the intellectual and the other is the sometimes self-inflicted, and other of sorrow," pointing out the importance as he gave his opinion of life to portray his word pictures of the "Good Samaritan" and the "Prodigal Son."

In referring to the loneliness of physical handicaps, the speaker referred to this affliction as the worst of all. "Life's battles are hard enough when we subject to our families and those physically handicapped are forced to seek the companionship of the more fortunate," he said, but again the same selfish fraction is in communion with God," Rev. Naylor. In referance to the loneliness of death, Mr. Naylor was of the opinion that we suffer more from this were the ones left behind, as he quoted Tennyson's poetry from Crossing the Bar to bear out his statements.

"You of the I.O.O.F. are the medium of fellowship, you are the Good Samaritans of the day and urge you to look to Jesus Christ for the solutions of human problems," concluded Mr. Naylor who took for his Scripture lesson the story of the Good Samaritan.

During the service the Tabernacle Church choir sang the anthem, "Open the gates of the Temple." Bandsman Reg. Wardle rendered a trombone solo, "I'll Walk With Me," accompanied by Mrs. M. P. Dutt, organist. At the conclusion of the I.O.O.F. parades marched up the aisle and back to the Belleville Municipal Band, where they were dismissed.

There was no doubt about Don Turner being a busy man. He was making good in the big town like a man who catches a fish with a clear field ahead. So he hardly looked up when the waiter at the Dewdrop Inn came to take his order. Antecedently, offhandedly he asked, "Still love 'em?"

Don thought a lot of his line. Developing it into a staple, he had prided himself on that question particularly. Always it had been applied to a college classmate. "Still love 'em?" he would say, which means they do. If they say "no" you take it to mean they are married. Don had used the question so many times that now, carry dangling hand above the menu, he mechanically repeated, "Still love 'em?"

A cool, drawling voice answered, "Who said I ever did?"

Don blinked in surprise and looked up. Good golly, a blond! He had been brought up in thick blonds were dumb. She had a carriage as queen as a goddess, and her blue eyes were gazing off into space as she waited for his order.

He tried again. "What're going to do when you grow up?"

"Think up answers to fool questions. Order please."

Quickly Don Turner answered brokenlarkily. "Swiss steak."

Sufficiently chastened, he finished his lunch in silence. When the waitress left the waitress from time to time, she still seemed to be looking at anything and never but him. He left a generous tip and hurried out to the Sargent Advertising Agency gave him other things to think about.

That week was a busy one. Don chalked up a valuable new contract almost single-handed. This helped his ego, so much that he ventured "one" the Dewdrop again. "Still love 'em?" he inquired.

Her eyes were aloof, detached. "Order is one source of interest," she said.

Don Turner was a beaten man. Surely he was the last to admit it. To have all his best questions ruined by getting perfect answers was indeed a catastrophe.

He angled a date for a dance at the Old Pavilion one night. She danced divinely. Her name was Blanche Carlton, she told him. To other questions she returned only baffling answers. Her blue-eyed glance was always far away.

A few more weeks of that sort of thing and Don Turner found himself slipping. Losing interest in his work. He only looked forward to the friendly wise-cracking hours with the girl who knew all the answers.

One night he called at her home. He found her parents to be old-fashioned, but understanding. The mother was a tall, stately old Viking who nearly crushed Don's hand in a friendly grip. The mother was the last to admit it. To

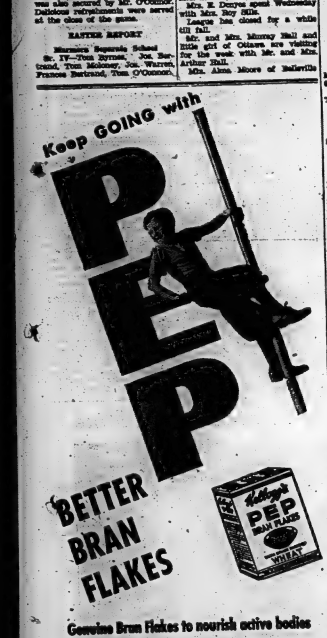
In the comfortable parlor Blanche played the piano for him. Her white fingers strayed restlessly over the keys, striking up a melody in his heart. The blue eyes were still dreamy and far away.

After that evening Don was sunk. In a trance, Don Turner, who had boasted that he was free, white and twenty-eight. After a dance on the next date, they drove far out in the country and parked. The fresh smell of the fruitful earth was in the air. A full moon, going about its night watchman's business, stopped to watch Don as he proposed.

Don told her all his hopes and plans. Blanche listened quietly, but said nothing. He asked her if she would refuse and tried to meet her eyes. Again he talked, and again she listened as before.

In desperation he burst out, "Then, just think I'll ever amount to anything?" Dimly, and too late he remembered that had been one of his favorite questions in the old days.

She turned toward him, smiling at him. "I don't see how you've kept from it for so long, darling, but I'll help!" Don held out a shaky hand as he slipped the ring on her finger. Affirmed later, he whispered, "Look me in the eye, sweet, and tell me you love me."



Her laughter was like the tinkling of bells. "I can't look you in the eye darling, just now. My smiles tells me to start wearing glasses to correct because my eyes have been crossed. But I love you, I'll tell you."

He tightened his arms about her, meditated, and gave voice to his thoughts. "There was only one answer to that, wasn't there?"

She laughed again as she kissed him, "Only one answer."

POPE PIUS XI OFFICIATES AT GOOD FRIDAY SERVICES IN VATICAN—His Holiness Pope Pius XI, crowned with the mitre of his office and seated upon the papal throne in the beautiful Sistine Chapel of the Vatican, is shown as he officiated at services on Good Friday commemorating the Crucifixion afternoon. Ill health prevented the pope from attending public services on Easter Day, and this may be among his last appearances in public at important feasts of the church. It is understood he is feeling the weight of his years and poor health.

Weddings

ABLARD—BENNETT

A pretty wedding took place in St. Michael's Church at ten o'clock this morning when Anna Theresa, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Bennett, Point Anne, became the bride of Mr. Harold Cecil Ablard, of Belleville, son of the late Henry Charles Ablard and of Mrs. Ablard. The ceremony was performed by Rev. O. E. Baker, who also celebrated the Nuptial Mass.

The bride was attired in navy blue and carried a bouquet of white carnations. She was attended by Miss Mary Margaret Bennett, Point Anne, who wore a grey tweed ensemble and carried red carnations. Mr. Charles Bennett, Point Anne, was groomsman.

Mr. and Mrs. Ablard will reside in Point Anne.

ROZABECK—RIDLEY

A quiet wedding took place at Bridge Street United Church at one-thirty on Saturday afternoon when Miss Lorna C. M. Ridley, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Ridley, 382 Ann Street, became the bride of Mr. Morley D. Rorabeck, son of Mr. and Mrs. D. Rorabeck of Picton. Rev. Dr. James Semple officiating.

Wedding music was played by Prof. V. F. Rundi. Miss Helen G. Ridley was bridesmaid and Mr. J. Donald Baxter of Bloomfield, Ont., was groomsman. After an informal reception the bride and groom left on a motor trip to Toronto and points west and upon their return they will reside near Picton.

Sodality Elects Year's Officers

In St. Michael's Academy yesterday afternoon, the Children of Mary held their annual meeting and election of officers. The retiring president, Miss Alice Doyle, was in the chair and the activities of the Sodality were reviewed, Miss Eileen Mulligan, secretary, presenting the report for the past year. The election of officers resulted in the following executive being chosen: Spiritual Director—Rev. J. F. Nicholson, V.G.

President—Miss Alice Doyle.

President—Mary McLellan.

Vice-President—Lillian Courneyea.

2nd Vice-President — Margaret Donoghue.

Secretary—Betty O'Callaghan.

Treasurer—Anne Meagher.

Councillors:

Foster Ward—Bertrude Lynch; Eatonia Quinn.

Samson Ward—Mary Lee; Teresa Donoghue.

Ketchenson Ward—Aileen Wilkins; Mary Hurley.

Baldwin Ward—Mary Butler; Margaret Ryan.

Bleecker Ward—Mercedes Kelly; Patricia Alexander.

Murney Ward—Phyllis Temple; Anna Kobuski.

Coleman Ward—Angela Whalen; Nellie Dorian.

A vote of thanks was tendered Miss Doyle for her splendid work as president during the past two years. In reply, the retiring officer expressed appreciation to the Director, the officers and members for their encouragement and support. Monsignor Nicholson spoke of the work of the Sodality under Miss Doyle's leadership, referring especially to the Study Clubs conducted so successfully during the past season. The group meeting method had resulted in a total weekly attendance at the various homes of about sixty members, and the Director thanked the girls for their splendid co-operation in this important activity.

Shirley Temple Stars In Gayest Film; "Captain January" Crammed With Entertainment

The Belle Theatre is currently host to one of the brightest, happiest and most delightful photoplays the screen has presented in months, "Captain January," in which Shirley Temple returns as a tiny sea-waif who steers straight into your heart.

Surrounding Laura E. Richards' poignantly dramatic story with a flock of thrilling tunes and adorable dances, "Captain January" is the story of a little girl and a grizzled old lighthouse keeper who fights for his orphaned home and finds it after many harrowing adventures.

The villain in the piece is Sara Haden, in the role of a ytsmith revenue officer. She bends all her efforts toward separating Shirley and her protector, Guy Kibbee. Plot moves complicated until Kibbee sees out to sea with Shirley, and the picture ends in happy conclusion when the "old meanie" is thwarted, and Shirley and Kibbee are happily reunited.

Most adorable of the tinkling new tunes, all with music by Lew Pollack is "The Right Somebody to Love," Shirley's dancing partner in "Captain January" is limber-legged Buddy Ebsen, who performs a flock of fascinating new steps with the starlet when he isn't busy falling in love with Jane Darwell. Slim Somerville and Jane Darwell are outstanding in comedy characterizations in this picture, ably assisted by the brood of the spirited and adoring Irish lass.

Exceptional Junior Revue

A grand array of Junior features have been assembled for exhibition on the same program including, "Grand Slam Opera", a very funny all-star personality comedy, the Belle Laieet World Flashes, and Popeye in one of the funniest cartoons seen on a local screen, completes a program of exceptional variety and entertainment that will delight every member of the family.

The entire program will be repeated again tonight and on Tuesday, matinee and evening.

"Wife Versus Secretary"

The "perfect triangle" has been found at last. It is made up of Clark Gable, the husband; Myrna Loy, the wife; and Jean Harlow, the "other woman."

Apparently Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spared no expense to bring these three great stars together to form the "perfect triangle" in its brilliant filmization of Faith Baldwin's best seller novel, "Wife Versus Secretary" coming to the Regent Wednesday for three days, matinee daily.

Fashion Flashes

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

THERE'S A FRESH LOOK to the new Spring hats. An off-face hat of navy blue straw has its cut away at the side front to make room for tightly massed roses in soft pink and cream tones.

JUST RIGHT for wear with smart Spring woolen frocks is a boxy coat of black broadcloth with drop collar and tuxedo front of silver fox.

LADY OF SPAIN is the silhouette for many of the new lace or net evening frocks. A gown of white knife-pleated net has flounces for the skirt set in at a point in front and rounded up to the back from the low sides. The bodice has a deep V front and back the waist line being edged with tiny pleated ruffles.

INVITATIONS to weddings are arriving thick and fast this year. A lovely wedding gown is of eggshell silk faille taffeta, the sleeves puffed to the elbow and sung below. The high square neckline, the point girdle with long panels ends and the rolled bandeau are other important details.

SUNNY DAYS bring out the first smart outfits of Spring. A nice suit is of tweed, brown wool crepe, the little jacket buttoning high in the neckline with dark brown buttons. With the suit is worn a matching cape collared in beige fur.

EVERY OTTAWA WOMAN seems to have designed a dress for the semi-formal has leg o' mutton sleeves and a short peplum, flared and gathered in back.

PLAINFIELD W. M. S.

The Easter meeting of Plainfield W. M. S. was held at the home of Mrs. Erle Dunn on Wednesday, April 15th. The meeting was opened with the call to worship and hymn, "All Hail the Power," followed by prayer with Miss Elsie Hamilton at the piano and the Lord's prayer. Mrs. Wilbert Elliott conducted the devotional exercises and gave a reading entitled "He is Risen". Rev. C. S. Dennis on the Spirit Is Glorious" was sung, and several members offered prayer. Mrs. Clifford Perks, group leader and in charge of the remainder of the meeting. She gave a splendid paper on the third chapter of the Study Book, Mrs. J. Moore sang a solo and Mrs. Horace Palmer gave a temperance reading. Mrs. Jack Gow gave a lovely Easter reading. Mrs. Everson sang and Mrs. Dennis gave report of the Presbyterial and a hearty vote of thanks was accorded them. The Roll Call was well responded to, the key word being "love". The minutes were read and adopted and several matters of business discussed. Mrs. Walter Hall was appointed Christian Stewardship secretary in the absence of Mrs. Campkin. The meeting was closed with the Mizpah benediction. The hostess and committee served lunch and a social half hour spent. Collection $12.00.

TEACHER CHAINED TO STEERING WHEEL

Summoned Help by Constant Blowing Of The Horn

Islington, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Police today pressed their inquiry into the reported attack on Reginald Parker, 32-year-old school teacher, who informed authorities he had been chained by the neck to the steering wheel of his car by an unknown man, his imprisonment in the machine lasting four hours.

Parker was a teacher at Fisher Mills, near Hespeler, about five miles from Galt. Police declared themselves mystified by the attack on the teacher who summoned help from passing motorists by pressing his cheek to the horn on the steering wheel. When found his neck was bruised and swollen from the chain and his face cut from pressing on the horn.

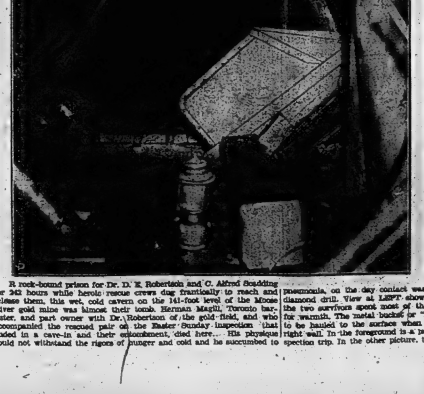
According to Parker's story he was working in his home at Fisher Mills on a day for his school when the stranger, well dressed, appeared. Parker said he opened the door to a side car and the man whistled to him, then informed him he wished help in releasing his car from the ditch.

Wishing To Help.

Parker said he went to his garage, got a chain and moved his car out, driving the stranger to where the ditched car was supposed to be.

"There is no car," Parker quoted the man as saying, "you just keep on driving."

The school teacher said something hard was pressed into his side and he was forced to drive to Guelph, cruising about the city, sometimes within a few feet of a policeman. From Guelph the stranger forced him to drive to Islington which is situated in suburban Toronto.



At the end of the 70-mile ride the car was stopped in a field near the Canadian National Railway and his face cut from pressing on the horn, the teacher was chained to the wheel; nearly choked to death before the continual blowing of his horn brought assistance.

Arnold Stager with whom Parker lived, in the meantime, had informed police of the teacher's absence and a patrol of the highways was made until it was learned Parker also said he would know his assailant if he said him again, was found.

Where Dr. Robertson and Scadding Spent Eleven Days Entombed in Mine

A rock-bound prison for Dr. D. R. Robertson and C. Alfred Scadding for 264 hours while heroic rescuers dug frantically to reach and release them, this wet, cold cavern on the 141-foot level of the Moose River gold mine was almost their tomb. Herman Magill, Toronto barrister and part owner with Dr. Robertson of the gold field, and who accompanied the rescued pair on the Easter Sunday inspection that ended in a cave-in and their entombment, died here. His physique could not withstand the rigors of hunger and cold and he succumbed to pneumonia, on the day contact was made with the surface through a diamond drill. View at LEFT shows the wood-floored platform where the two survivors spent most of their 10-day ordeal, huddled together for warmth. The metal bucket or "skip" in which the trio were about to be hauled to the surface when the slide occurred, is seen by the right wall. In the foreground is a packer, carried by them on their journey.

is shown. It was here that the heroic dragsmen, clawing a path through the condemned Reynolds start, broke through rock and rubble to release the prisoners. Articles of clothing, left by the rescued-pair, or tossed aside by miners who tore off their own shirts to wrap around them, are seen in the tunnel. Dr. Robertson and Scadding were overjoyed in this rock-pinche when the miners successfully terminated their ordeal.

Prevent Evictions Action is Urged

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—James P. Andrews, secretary-manager of the Toronto Board of Trade, urged in a signed statement immediate steps to prevent wholesale evictions of relief applicants in New York, Toronto suburban area. If these evictions are carried out, he declared, "the result will be serious trouble."

The situation is serious and the government of the day will be very unwise if it does not take some action" to prevent the wholesale evictions which are otherwise imminent," he said.

DR. DAFOE ANSWERS STORK

Dionne, "but there are a number of things that can be taught before baby shows how to dance."

North Bay, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Criticism by Mr. and Mrs. Oliva Dionne of his methods of caring for the Dionne quintuplets were answered by their physician, Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe today, as he reviewed the progress made by the babies during the past month, and issued his monthly bulletin.

To the criticism that the babies were rushed in the mornings and sometimes now the parents bring because of unappeased hunger, Dr. Dafoe stated that the sweetness is directly attributable to their plentiful stores of energy which they must work off. Their daytime sleeping periods have been materially reduced too, Dr. Dafoe added, progressing from two and a half to three hours during the day, sleeping longer than that through the day, they wake too early in the morning for their own good.

Mr. and Mrs. Dionne claimed the babies should be fatter than they are, and to this Dr. Dafoe replied they saying it would be an easy matter to add weight to the babies but that their rounding and progressive fatting kept to a low level because it is known that babies not burdened with excess weight are better able to resist possible infection by disease germs.

Not Forced to Eat

Dr. Dafoe explained the babies were not being forced to take nourishment now. At an earlier stage in their existence they had been forced to some extent, when building-up processes began. Now, however, this necessity has passed.

The laying of permanent baby teeth is proceeding day by day in the hospital, with the nurses attending them being similarly teething them.

The nurses clearly understood commands and directions now, and portray a lively interest in their surroundings and all that goes on around them.

They are starting to build up French vocabulary of their own as well as English, and the word "Papa" "Doctor," and "Ner Ner." In addition they are reacting to the names of simple articles around the hospital, all new to the babies of Dafoe and his nurses.

Twenty-three months old tomorrow, the babies are in excellent condition, Dr. Dafoe stated.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 27—(AP)—One of the sharpest reactions of the past 21 months in the stock market set in today, leading issues falling 1 to 6 or more points.

Trading in the selling rush the ticker tape dropped several minutes behind the transactions.

Notables declines were shown by case, Allied Chemical, Anaconda, Consolidated Aircraft, Douglas Aircraft, Westinghouse, Du Pont, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Chrysler, General Motors, Montgomery Ward, National Dairy, Standard Oil of New Jersey, American Telephone, Western Union, Consolidated Edison, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central and Southern Pacific.

The late tone was weak. Transfers were about 3,000,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Prices were trimmed on the mining section of the Toronto Stock Exchange today in slow trading under the influence of New York weakness. Base metals and some gold stocks drifted lower in scattered sales and in the succeeding hour dropped 2 to 5 cents were boarded for Central Patricia, Sylvanite, Dacalta, Chibougamau, McWatters and Coniagrum.

Noranda led the decline. Its drop of 5¼ cash and Falconbridge 10 cents. Eldorado held just above the dollar mark after a drop of 4 cents.

In the first hour Texas-Canadian was up 5 cents here as were gold stocks in the succeeding hour. Developments but the afternoon price of 2.30 showed a net loss for the day.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Prices declined from the opening on small scattered lots in the general little faster in the early afternoon with International Nickel changing hands active at a loss of 1¼ on industrial section, Toronto Elevators 1¼ off and Hollinger 75 c. dropped to 22 for a loss of 1¼ and recession of ½ to a point or more was recorded in Wallace Common, Distillers-Seagrams, C.P.R. and Canadian Traction.

Prices followed the New York trend and all industrials were affected by the recession but the most pronounced were those in the list of Bell Telephone, Steel, Food, Utility and Building shares leaned towards the down side.

Was Depressed and Irritable

Soon Well Again Thanks to Dodd's

Mrs. Wm. Wood, of R.R. 2, Port Perry, Ont., writes: "For years I was depressed and irritable with kidney trouble for about a year I used Dodd's Kidney Pills and now I am well again. I have gained 20 lbs. and my back would catch me with stooped aches but I have pains across my kidneys. I became irritable, developed in spite, I used nasty and nightmares. By the time I had taken Dodd's Kidney Pills I felt fine and all my languid feelings were gone. My husband and daughter have also used Dodd's Kidney Pills and found them excellent."

Livestock

Toronto, April 27—(CP)—The cattle section of the Toronto livestock market was slow after noon with bids 15-25 cents lower on all classes except choice heavy cows, bulls and fed calves were steady with a few handyweight butchers also firm in demand. Hogs and sheep were also steady with the hog and lamb marts unsettled.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were 1,000 cattle, 4,670; calves, 750; hogs, 1,350; sheep and lambs, 1,410.

Good butcher cattle brought 9¼ to $9.50 with a few common grades ranging down to $4.50. A few good and choice heavy steers brought $8.25 to $8.35. Good butcher cows sold steady at $3.50 to $3.90 with plains downward to $2.50. Good bulls sold for export at $3.50 to $3.75 and bolognas brought $3.00 to $3.35.

A song in his heart, a twinkle in his eye and his arm around a beautiful calves, Phil Regan in "I Aspiring Irish Rose" with Evelyn Knapp, at Capitol today and to morrow.

Lake Shore

Lake Shore is operating in mill at an average of over 70,000 tons of ore per month. For the year to date production has produced an average of $18.25 per ton. Gross output for the year is $1,260,000 or about 69,000 tons. Added to this is income from sundry sales.

Lake Shore has built up a surplus of close to $10,000,000 and while regular dividends and bonuses during the past year are by no means unimportant, the main attraction is the surplus continues to grow, even in a favorable outlook for still higher disbursements in due time to the shareholders of Lake Shore.

Despite the setback that occurred last week, no important liquidation was noted. The opinion is also being expressed that the recent liquidation is in prospect. By this it is not meant to imply that technical price conditions are favorable. True, we have had many months of advancing prices without witnessing any reaction of disturbing proportions, and in view of general conditions in Wall Street its restrictions on short sales, and sufficient margin requirements, a danger of serious price recessions is much less than under the conditions that prevailed some years ago. Nevertheless, the fact remains that the markets have not yet arrived, and the possibility of larger recessions than have been experienced during the past year or so has not been removed.

The threat by the American newspaper publishers that they will give their newsprint requirements to Canada if the Canadian Government interferes in any way in the matter of price setting has again cropped up. In this connection it is interesting to point out that while the large American publishers able to obtain their newsprint at satisfactory prices from other countries, Canada would have to pay the production of its market some time ago. No other country in the world has similar newsprint resources and huge timber tracts as this Dominion and the pulp and paper industry in this country is therefore in position to sell newsprint paper at a price under prevailing quotations.

Reductions That May Be Made on Several Products

At this time of the year when every investor is busy making up his Income Tax Return for the year 1935, Financial Service finds that many people have the idea that they are allowed to make certain deductions. Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 27—First cheese exports of the season from the port of Montreal for the United Kingdom went forward last week. The week's shipments were despatched Saturday at 9,343 boxes. Approximately 100,000 pounds of cheese went to the United Kingdom last week.

Receipts for the week at Montreal, Quebec and Maritime points at the Board of Trade on Saturday as follows:

	Eggs	Butter	Cheese
Last week	18,176	6,878	988
Week Ago	18,417	3,286	194
Year Ago	14,230	7,967	1,147

Prices on Saturday generally ruled as follows: Eggs, extras, in cartons, a slightly easier tone again being evident there. For the week as a whole prices were advanced. Butter was weaker.

Cheese, no market graded shipments arriving in carlots or 1-cl. lots were 30 1-2 to 31c for A-large, 30 to 30 1-2c for A-medium, 18c to 18 1-2c for B or C-pullets and 17c to 17 1-2c for C-grade.

The butter market was 30 3-4c to 31c for No. 1, regraded grass butter as there are 22c for solids and 29c for prints.

Johnny Allen of the Indians Defeats St. Louis Browns in 16 Innings by Score of 8-7

Scores Winning Run by Driving Slide to Plate

CARDS AWAKING

Dizzy Dean Shows Plenty of Stuff in Downing Pirates

Allen, under the guidance of O'Neil, who led him to stardom with Toronto Maple Leafs seems to be concentrating his energies on winning ball games this year, however. Yesterday he turned in a fine all-round performance as the Indians defeated the St. Louis Browns 8-7 in a 16-inning marathon, the longest game thus far in the season.

The game was the highlight of to-day's play, which saw Detroit hold the Pirates to six hits as the Cards won from Cubs and Lou Gehrig and Jimmie Foxx, the cannon men of the American League, both boom out homers as the Yankees beat the Red Sox 11-6 in a slugfest.

Allen allowed the Browns only 9 hits in the last 8 2-3 innings but the stout stick behind him in the first was his diving slide into Catcher Rollie Hemsley to score the winning run in the last of the 16th. A long fly drive of that slide knocked the ball from the catcher's hand and a safe Allen the hero and Hemsley the goat.

Hemsley was no "Lucky Rollie" in this inning. He could have caught Allen a bunch of times but let it drop, tried for a double play and threw it to second as the base runners scampered safely to bases. Then he dashed in the throw that lost the game when holding it would have completed a triple killing.

Dizzy Dean is Here

The Cubs-Cards contest was plenty of competition in a 10 inning burlesque deal by Bill Swift of the Pirates. Mace Brown of the Cubs was a star in their half of the tenth and then Schulte, Hartnett, Galan and Pepper Martin's single brought home the bacon.

A total of 30 hits were made as the Yanks downed the Red Sox before 10,000 fans. Gehrig and the Yanks getting 18 off the deliveries of four Red Sox flingers. Boston took a six run lead in the first inning but the Yankees came back to score seven in the next frame. Frankie Crosetti of the Yanks got five bingles.

The Boston game was much like the frame at Philadelphia where Brooklyn defeated the Phillies 10-7 in a battle of 26 hits which were interspersed with 11 errors. Hart Grace and Johnny Moore of the Phillies batted in all but four runs of the Dodgers.

Vic Sorrell of the Detroit Tigers, pitching in a starting pitching performance as his team downed the White Sox 6-4 with 13,000 in the park. Sorrell is the first Tiger hurler this season to have a real chance at pitching a complete game. Rain came along, notched their fourth straight victory, the opener was called off after two innings.

Taz Carleton of the Cubs stopped Howell's pitching when he was holding the bustling Cincinnati Reds to 4 blows and shutting them out 5-0. A crowd of 21,555 saw Carleton handle the youngsters.

Buck Newsom of the Senators held the Athletics to seven hits while his mates banged out 12 to beat the Men of Mack 11-3. It was Newsom's first victory of the year.

Wet grounds caused postponement of the Giants-Bees game.

Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

Johnny Allen and Billy Sullivan, Indians—Allen pitched two-hit ball for eight and one-third innings against Browns and scored winning run in 16th; Sullivan led attack with four hits.

Linus Frey, Dodgers — Clouted homer, double and two singles in rout of Phillies.

Vic Sorrell, Tigers—Limited White Sox to five hits for 6-4 victory.

Dizzy Dean and Frank Demaree, Cardinals—Dean Limited Pirates to six hits, batted in two runs and scored winning run in 10th.

Frank Crosetti, Yankees—Slammed Red Sox pitching for five hits, driving in three runs.

Taz Carleton, Cubs—Shut out Reds with four hits.

Odell Hale, Jake Powell, Senators—Made three hits and two runs apiece against Athletics.

Seek Frost-Defying Tree

Canadian forestry officials are attempting to find or develop strains of black walnut trees that will stand winter temperatures of 60 degrees below zero, with a view to planting them in the Ottawa river valley in Ontario and Quebec. New York, April 27.—(AP)—Got's a jump for old Ed Barrow . . . His heroweed gave the Yankee skipper's Seven League Boots and hopped from the Arabian Nights right into the middle of the wrestling business on first look now, but probably won't get to second without his head all off the 45 degree angle . . . The Barrow Empire has 15 Dick Bibbs! merely turned title over to Ali for one evening until Dick beats, that sort us in 15 rounds . . . anyway, there were no hallelujahs in the Hoosier-Eastern "trust" circles when Richard lost . . . even though he is the "trust's" Public Enemy No. one at the moment . . . Instead, there was plenty of moaning . . . You could hear the good Jack Curley all the way from Ohio . . . Consensus: Shikat put over another fast one.

What do you think of Brevity now? . . . Tom Shaw, one of the biggest bookmakers, has listed his odds on the colt to 4 to 5. . . . Incidentally, Jack Doyle, another No. 1 Shaw client, is scooping no more bets on Washington to win the American League pennant.

Dan M. Daniel, the World-Telegram's baseball expert, talked with Dolly Stark in Philadelphia and came up with a brand new angle on the original baseball writer's position . . . seems Charlie Rigler, who spent 30 years umpiring in the National League, left an estate of only $12.86 when he died last December . . . Then and there Dolly began to think about his own future . . . Right now he's broadcasting the home games of the Athletics and Phillies . . . Though a new job has been made, he gets $30 per week, which is considerably more than the Hall of Famer was willing to pay its tops Umpire.

Arthur Bevlin, the old Giant third sacker, sat with Ed Barrow in the Yankee box at the Yankee Stadium the other day. . . . Jim Tilly's biography of Ned Hanlon may have been tentatively postponed . . . Previous contracts on Dempsey's part . . . Jimmy Johnston, former Dodger-Mc-Larnin to Kayo Tony Canzoneri.

American League pitchers are going out of their way to give Jimmy Foxx a pitch to hit . . . Joe Sawdoff's wrestling "drop kick" which got him in bed here, has been O.K.'d in the coast.

ANDY MOEN IS PRETTY SHIFTY

Unknown Will Have to Show Plenty of Class in Final Bout

Just how much experience is behind the Unknown, Masked mystery wrestler, who is to oppose Andy Moen of Minneapolis in the Arena the next Monday evening, it is impossible to say. But it may be one of the well known stars of the sport taking this method to force his way to a championship bout, or he may be some well coached young wrestler who considers it time to make a reputation for himself in a spectacular manner. This fact, however, stands out, that he will have to be considerably better than average to win from Moen, one of the shiftiest and most powerful grapplers in his weight ranks. The Minneapolis athlete had two years of careful coaching before he even entered professional ranks, and his record in the United west during the past four years must be regarded as outstanding Moen will be the favorite of the crowd is something of a surety for he made a decided hit at the last show here in contrast to which is the fact that the Unknown was hissed to rough it.

Steve Znoski

Steve Znoski, who is matched with Al Dunlop for the semi-final record-holder from Gallipolis where he was a big card. He is looking for future main bouts here and a victory Monday night over the winner will be the one who will be given the preference.

Contrast in wrestling style will be provided by the preliminary between Buffalo Joe, Indian Bad Man and Antoine Parkin, the French Flash. The Redskin has one of the best holds ever strenuous, while Parkin features wrestling speed and cleverness.

VICTORIA DOMINOES ON WAY EAST FOR FINALS

WINNIPEG, April 27.—(CP)—All aches and pains as the result of six hard a series of basketball games as they had ever played, Victoria Dominoes were headed eastward for the Canadian championships today.

The next Windsor Ford, Eastern Utilita, in a best-of-five-game series for the Dominion title opening on the Ports' own floor Wednesday night. Losing only the finals by niche after successfully beating back Winnipeg Toilers in the Western Canadian title series the ended here Saturday night.

They won the third and final game 34-25, after losing the first 32-28 and squeezing through to a one-point victory, 36-25 in the second encounter.

HOME AND BARN BURNED

Kingston, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—The home and barn of David Wallace, farmer, 1 1-2 miles south of Harrowsmith, was totally destroyed by fire on Sunday, with their contents.

Mr. and Mrs. Wallace and three children were awakened when the house filled with smoke, and all made their escape.

Nine head of cattle and two horses were burned to death. One horse was rescued.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Exactly four weeks from today the O.O.B.L. will pry off its 1936 season being in operation for 19 consecutive years, the Peterboro' team taking a bye in the year 1927 to keep the league active insofar as the O.B.A.A. is concerned. The information coming from the office of President Mike Brosseau informs that the league will hold its semi-annual meeting next Saturday at which time all entries must be in the hands of Secretary Thompson and the clubs ready to complete their executive business. The question of umpires and the deadline will be the paramount questions next Saturday.

The reason for our bringing the matter up at this time is to have it known the local baseball magnate responsible for this information is not organizing. On Friday last the players' committee recently appointed reported to the league executive that favorably regarding the hiring of a ball-fielding players certainly felt their desire to play senior baseball in Belleville. On Friday the committee adjourned for a week in order to place the matter before their various clubs. Next Friday they will be governed accordingly, and there will be no laughing. Perhaps the diamond fields could be covered and other officers are necessary thereby giving the possible 1936 executive a boost. Let us hope that the powers that be attended the league meeting on Saturday. 'Tis only a suggestion, anyway.

Recently we reviewed what material we knew available for the outfield and batteries of the local Belleville seniors, if a team is sponsored locally. Gerald Cole in the infield, however, there are a few vacancies, that need filling badly. Of course there may be improvement in our midst, who may fill the bill to perfection. We have every reason to believe playing the game locally in the junior, intermediate and senior ranks are going about and ready to step on to the field and try out for positions. At first base is Bill Smith, of last year's team and Art Cole, a promising player who has considerable service around the local sack. At second Cy Barrigar is the only player who has available, while at short there's Vicky Bevis and Ken Hamilton. Over at third Chuck Barrigar might try out again and then there's Teddy Rogers, Stewart Thompson of last year's junior team are still around, while we will have a couple of fairly good infielders up at the Airport.

"Pepper" Mills gave up catching two seasons ago, we tried to persuade him to continue his baseball activities around the field. "Pepper" was always one of the most loyal ballers on the O.B.A.A. and with his knowledge of the game should be able to hold down the initial sack position, such as he is going to have his seasoned service of last year out, and nothing yet but for his hitting he could be approached relative to resuming active play, either in the outfield or at first.

With the newly appointed Shiner Johnson as taskmaster, the 1936 edition of the Peterboro' O.B.B.L. entry held its first workout on Saturday. All of last year's squad was on hand except Art Legge, Belleville didn't see much of him as a pitcher last season; Big Cowman, he's going back to his Michigan; Eddie Murphy, he's turned pro with Kingston and Mel Keating is not on hand to usher in the season.

During Friday night's O.B.F.U. baseball meeting the Hon. President F. C. MacLaurin suggested a new angle to more fully acquaint the patrons of the game with the playing rules. Starting late in August, President MacLaurin will supply us with a condensed set of football rules following which for this suggested we publish one rule each day, that is to be accompanied by explanatory notes. Through this medium the Belleville Rugby Club hopes to acquaint the citizens with the playing rules of the game and will create a better interest in the fall classic. Saddler, late visit paid to Belleville by Mr. John Hardesty, president and Mr. Mar, old Bailey, secretary of the O.R.F.U. created a great boon to the game locally.

"Give me a crack at that 'masked scrub' and I'll pull him apart, just watch me make him dish," remarked Andy Moen at Matchmaker Jack Corcoran following last week's show here. "I'll get a fall here, sign this contract right here, but remember, it's a winner take all affair, when you enter the ring with The Unknown. There's none of this 30-45 or 15-30 percentage split to the winner," shot back Corcoran. "That's fine by me, but tell that mug I'm just a little tougher than he, so he'd snapped back Moen as he signed the articles. Corcoran's fountain pen and nearly broke his wrist. Moen proved his aggressiveness and pugnacious style last week and he is a great favorite to win for the "unknown quest". The problem, however, need no introduction in a local sense, for Belleville's own Steve Znoski, the Polish Thrasher-ski, who has been performing like a rough, tough customer, so says Al Dunlop is out for a going over. Steve is one of Chief Caldwell's Buffalo Joe should meet with public approval.

Perhaps our statement regarding Belleville having won an American Legion championship will be highly misleading, but see it was one of those coincidences in ball. As any fan a baseball team from Belleville, Illinois, won the semi-professional baseball title at Wichita, Kansas two years ago. Yearly at Wichita semi-pro teams from all over the country assemble for a week and play for the American semi-pro baseball championship. The Belleville, Illinois team are known as the "Stags".

Hither and yon—well it remains for the local senior-intermediate union in the current softball season. Tomorrow the O.S.S.D. nine pry off their 1936 season at Campbellford versus the St. Mike's nine. . . . And on Friday if you have to have afternoon of fun and frivolity and also witness some smart gymnastics at the Y.M.C.A. you can attend Wednesday or Thursday night.

Harold Bawden, manager of the Belleville intermediate softball team issued the season's initial call for practice today. The team will report its first practice at the Cricket Field this evening. The latest rumours in the local softball realm are to the effect that only one O.A.S.A. team will be operated in Belleville this season.

BREVITY EMERGES AS COLT TO BEAT IN KENTUCKY DERBY

Louisville, Ky., April 27 (AP)—Tested in the Derby mill, Brevity emerged as pure and todays-calibre entry of the colt to beat in the 62nd running of the rich bluegrass classic on May 2.

An impressive winner in the Southgate handicap, last Saturday the opening day's program at Churchill Downs, Brevity fulfilled all the hopes of the Widener Stable after his 9 lengths lead in front of Ben Joll, Col. E. R. Bradley's Derby hopeful, by six lengths.

Yet all the glory was not for Brevity, standing out as almost equally potent Derby threats by virtue of their performances in the Wheatley Stable's Twirl and William Woodward's Granville were two staged a thrilling stretch duel in the Wood Memorial at Aqueduct, with Twirl closing fast to barely nose out the son of Gallant Fox to win the mile and 70 yard test.

Hal Price Headley's Hollywood Park contingent ranks in the Derby future books, finished a dismal last in the Wood and probably won't be shipped to Louisville for the classic. Marshall Field's Timbuctoo and C. V. Whitney's Bright Plume probably will also remain in their barns at Belmont Park by virtue of their mediocre performances in the week. Mrs. Ethel Mars' Ned Reigh, which finished fourth, behind Granville in the race, will probably be shipped to Louisville. Delphinium, however, is definitely "out," trainer Bob Smith announced.

Starting to Rodey

Des Moines, Ia., April 27 (AP)—The Brevity money around Des Moines started burning a hedge today, for Mrs. Marvin Johnston, who claimed she picked 14 Kentucky Derby winners in the last 18 years, disclosed she liked Colchesteam to come home first Saturday.

"In fact," she said, "I like him very much, but Grand Slam may have an outside chance if the track if very muddy."

Mrs. Johnston, Kentucky - born and Louisville rear, said it wasn't just a hunch. "First, he's got the breeding—and all the hunches in the world notwithstanding, a horse's blood counts most. Then, he's a horse with a long body and strong hips.

"Brevity? His breeding is doubtful. Gallant Fox's 3 victories in Florida horse isn't as good as the Derby."

Burgoo King was the only Derby winner that crossed up Mrs. Johnston's picks. "I like Burgoo King, him a thought," she explained, "I was hot for Bubbling Over."

Newark Run Winning Streak to Ten Before Defeat

By HUGH S. FULLERTON, JR.
Associated Press Staff Writer

The season's first clash between the two teams that have been the dominant forces in the history of the International League race remained at a standoff today but Newark's flashy streak of victories was at an end after ten straight triumphs.

The pace-setting Bears, after virtually clinching the first half double-header with the runner-up Montreal Royals, 7-4, ran smack into a Toronto Maple Leaf team that the Montreal pitching staff, and that's down U.S. a couple of other cracked records marked the Sunday doubleheader with the Leafs winning double duty. The Hoosheer Red Wings broke a string of six straight losses by trimming the Buffalo Bisons 7-3 in the first game of the twin bill, a game in which the Toronto Orioles 13-8 in the second game to give Syracuse their lasting the first 10-7, while Buffalo and Rochester battled to a 9-9 tie in the longest game of the season, before the Hawks pulled out a 19-9 decision.

The comparatively humble Toronto Maple Leafs, playing host for their first eight games, were the only team to break even in the twin bill, trimming the Albany Senators 1-2 and 5-3. At a record for the year's fifth place Leafs up only a half game behind Albany and Syracuse, the Leafs had Jimmie Ernie (Chief) Koy was the principal cause of the Albany Senators' misery, bringing home five runs with a pair of homers and a double, Toronto outpitched Harry Smythe. His mates got a hit off Mydlywanga, Syracuse's ace former Jamestown ace gave only six blows and a curve ball in the seventh and final inning broke up a deadlock.

Rookie Breaks up Game

Five runs behind in the last half of the 11th inning, Rookie Bill Harris to cover, scored five times and tied the count at 8-8. Then Leo Mangum and Johnny Wilson took up the mound carnage and didn't allow a run until the 17th. The longest International League game ever played at Syracuse finally broke up in another burst of hitting. Wilson, the Toronto rookie, pounded a double with two mates on to send the Bisons ahead. The Chiefs threatened to tie it up again, scored once and had the tying run on third when the last putout was made.

Scarsella's homer marked both games of the Baltimore-Rochester set. The Orioles slammed out five runs in the first inning, when Les Munns hit safely with the bases full, to easy opening triumph but the victory-starved Red Wings came through with 13 runs in the nightcap, scored eight times in the seventh inning. Ray Poat's brilliant winning although their rivals connected for 14 hits, with Scarsella clouting one by Boland of Rochester in each game, marked the slugging.

A combination of the breaks and Jimmie Foxx gave only two hits and Al Benton's Orioles 13-8 in the second game. Alex Strange and Russell Maxey let Harlin Pool score the only run in the second inning.

WOMEN'S TEAM OF BRITAIN IS CHOSEN WITH GREAT CARE

GLENEAGLES, Scotland, April 27 (AP)—Great Britain, at present the proud possessor of not a single International Golfing trophy, has a stubborn hope of getting one of them back from America when the pick of her women stars of the United States invaders in the Curtis Cup matches here May 25th.

The British women never yet have been victorious, but this time they have put together a team they believe can break the American "rush".

The team has been selected with a great more care, and with more attention to actual playing ability, than marks the biannual choosing of the Men's Walker team.

As a result, there has been a great shake-up of the team that lost the last Curtis Cup match in the United States two summers ago. Only three of that side survived: Pam Barton, Wanda Morgan, and Mrs. J. B. Walker, the others—Jessie Anderson, Betty Nevall, Phyllis Bond, Enid Wilson Varna, and Mrs. Andrew Holm, have proved themselves fine competitive golfers.

Betty Nevall, for instance, is a sister and the youngest Justice of the Peace in England, shot a 78 in one of her trial matches over the King's course here. That sort of golf, point out the British critics, should be sufficient to hold Mrs. Glenna Collett Vare, Miss Pam Berg or any of the other American guests.

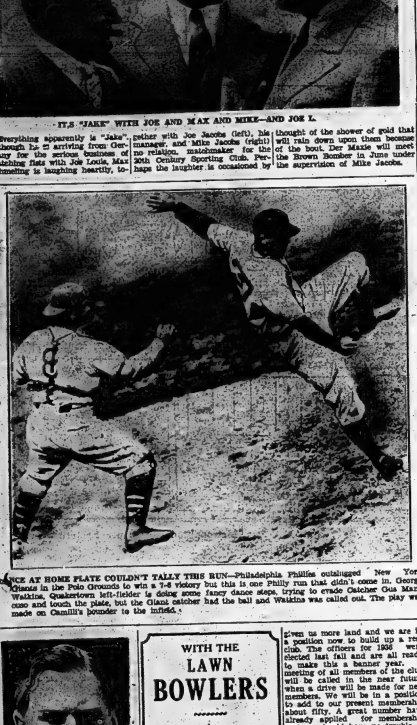
CONNIE MACK

BASEBALL'S GREAT STRATEGIST STARTS AGAIN.



Gazing somberly out across the baseball diamond from the shadows of the dugout, you see Professor Cornelius McGillicuddy of Philadelphia.

Cornelius McGillicuddy is virtually unknown to baseball followers, but Connie Mack, tall, spare strategist of Philadelphia Athletics is known far and wide. They are one and the same.

The maker of baseball magic through gently waved score cards, is 74 years of age, builder and wrecker of three great baseball machines since he founded the Athletics in 1901. He was a catcher himself, has been in baseball since 1884. He knows the heights—has won seven pennants and four world championships—and has lived in the baseball depths for seasons on end.

This year, at an age when most men are retired he starts anew. Selling almost all his brightest stars—and no man has developed more crack ball-players than Connie Mack—he starts the 1936 season with an unknown, loyally untried aggregation and raised a bad last by all the experts.

But the imperturbable Mack refuses to be discouraged. Here you see the famed Diamond Fox in an excellent study.

BALANCE AT HOME PLATE COULDN'T TALLY THIS RUN—Philadelphia Phillies outslugged New York Giants in the Polo Grounds to win a 7-6 victory but this is one Philly run that didn't come in. George Watkins, Quakertown left-fielder is doing some fancy dance steps, trying to evade Catcher Gus Mancuso and touch the plate, but the Giant catcher had the ball and Watkins was called out. The play was made on Camilli's pounder to the infield.

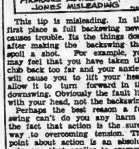
WITH THE LAWN BOWLERS

by

GEO. E. WATKIN

Five weeks from now our greens should be opened. Although the weather is backward our greens never looked better at this time of the year. A lot of work has been done during the winter, a new fence has been erected and four more greens added, these greens should be in use on the 5th of June. Lawn bowling is increasing all through Ontario. In the city of Toronto seventeen clubs have been built by the Toronto Parks Commission and three more will be under way this year. Kingston have sixteen greens and built a new club house last year. Peterboro have a wonderful club and Oshawa are building a new greens at the present time.



We in Belleville are very fortunate we have a wonderful location to my mind one of the best in Ontario. The Parks Commission have given us more land and we are in a position now to build up a real club. The officers for 1936 were elected last fall and are all ready to make this a banner year. A meeting of all members of the club will be called in the near future when a drive will be made for new members. We will be in a position to add to our present membership about fifty. A great number have already applied for membership and we should have no trouble in getting a full quota. The success of any bowling or any other sport is in the hands of each individual member, all must pull together and do their share and success is assured. Belleville has been very unfortunate along these lines. I have seen during the past twenty years good clubs come and go, just because they fail to face their responsibility. If a club's expenses are fifteen hundred dollars a year then that amount of money has to be found or your club will soon be defunct. We as a bowling club have two ways of raising the money. No. 1 by raising the dues. No. 2 by raising the membership. My advice to the members is to get a new member. It is not my intention to advertise our dues but I might say that a member joining our club can bowl five or six nights a week cheaper than you can go to a movie for once a week.

I would like through the officers of the club to thank the Commission, the City Council and the Press, for the help they have given us in the past and look with anticipation to their support in the future.

GOLF

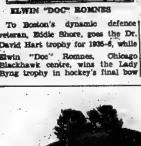
BY ALEX MORRISON

Among the many explanations for Bobby Jones' high scores, recently was a tip from his friend, Tommy Armour. Tommy told him that he should shorten his swing that he was getting into trouble through making a long backswing.

This tip is misleading. In the first place a full backswing never causes trouble. Its the things done after making the backswing that spoil a shot. For example, you may feel that you have taken the club back too far and your anxiety will cause you to hit your head, allow it to turn forward in the downswing. Obviously the fault lies with your head, not the backswing.

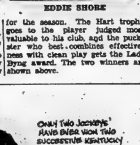
Perhaps the best reason a full swing can't do you any harm is the fact that action is the surest way to overcome tension. The point about action is an absolute rule, one that applies to everyone, regardless of age or size. The greatest advantage Bobby Jones held over the field was his full free swing and he knew it. Many times he won by letting out instead of cutting down.

Volumes have been written about what you are supposed to be doing as you hit the ball. Space does not permit me to deal with even a few of these misleading suggestions.



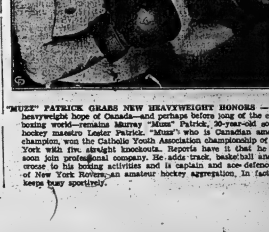
You should do but one thing as your clubhead meets the ball, and that is to avoid interrupting the smooth swing you have been making. Avoiding interruption in the hitting area is a big contract.

Above all things it means skipping any anticipation of the moment of impact. In other words, you should not be conscious of any such point in your swing. As far as you are concerned there is no such point. When there is you spoil the shot by whatever preparation you try to make.



You can practice avoidance of interruption in the hitting area by concentrating on your chin. Try to turn your head to the right and keep your chin pointed back of the ball until well after the ball has been hit. You can be sure of one thing this only when you can count one, two, three before looking up. Next week, the finish of the swing.

SHORE AND ROMNES GET HOCKEY AWARDS



ELWIN "DOC" ROMNES

To Boston's dynamic defense veteran, Eddie Shore, goes the Dr. David Hart trophy for 1935-6, while Elwin "Doc" Romnes, Chicago Blackhawk center, wins the Lady Byng trophy in hockey's final bow of the season. The Hart trophy goes to the player judged most valuable to his club, and the puckster who best combines effectiveness with clean play gets the Lady Byng award. The two winners are shown above.

"MUZZ" PATRICK GRABS NEW HEAVYWEIGHT HONORS — Ace heavyweight hope of Canada—and perhaps before long of the entire boxing world—remains Murray "Muzz" Patrick, 20-year-old son of hockey maestro Lester Patrick. "Muzz" who is Canadian amateur champion, won the Catholic Youth Association championship of New York with five straight knockouts. Reports have it that he may soon join professional company. He adds track, basketball and lacrosse to his boxing activities and is captain and ace defenceman of New York Rovers, an amateur hockey aggregation, in fact he keeps busy sportively.

John Sawyer, junior, at sixteen, persuaded his mother to allow him to leave school and go to work. Mrs. Sawyer acquiesced with some misgivings. And it was not right for Jean to assume so great a share of the family's support. It had become increasingly evident that John felt his father's disgrace keenly. As time passed, he became silent and taciturn, spent many evenings away from home, resorted to "running with a fellow" was his usual explanation. He groused for one, Jean attempted in vain to appeal to his old-time interest, frequently offending herself as a companion for some after-dinner excursion.

When she found that she was tolerated only, she abandoned the experiment.

Mrs. Sawyer likewise proved something of a problem to her oldest daughter. She devoted her entire time to the household and younger children, going about her tasks with the same cheerful patience and gentleness that had always been hers. Yet she seemed ever to be moving among shadows apart.

"It's as though Daddy Jack were dead," Jean frequently found herself thinking. "Mummy's living on memories."

LENGTHY SESSION

Question to be Decided at Special Meeting Today

A written request from the Board of Education to the City Council signed by the chairman of that body, George F. Ostrom and the secretary, J.B. Finlay, asking that the council provide the necessary funds, $60,000, for an addition to Queen Mary School was dealt with at the regular meeting of the city council held on Monday evening and it was decided without discussion, that the request would not be granted unless approval by vote of the ratepayers was obtained. The latter asking for this grant was not read on the floor of the council but the recommendation, that accompanied was passed unanimously. It is understood, there was little discussion of the request in committee when the council had expressed their opinion in a special meeting of the council held last week.

The session, which continued well

EGYPTIAN KING DIES—Fears expressed at Cairo for the life of King Fuad, Egypt's 68-year-old monarch, following posting of a bulletin by his aides announcing that a "quite important hemorrhage" had complicated the ruler's lingering illness were realized today when he succumbed. For some hours he rallied and breathed bottled oxygen.

EGYPTIAN KING FUAD I DIES OF THROAT TROUBLE

Conducted Government Business Shortly Before Death

BRITAIN'S ALLY

Won For Himself Recognition as Wise And Congenial Monarch

Cairo, Egypt, April 28 (AP)—King Fuad I, of Egypt, died today.

Shortly before death came to the monarch, he had made a surprising rally from unconsciousness.

He sent for Premier Ali Pasha Maher and palace officials and insisted on transacting Government business.

Among other matters, the 68-year-old monarch, critically ill from a throat infection, instructed that messages be sent replying to the many messages of sympathy received at the palace. Only a short while earlier, the fatal throat and blood infection of the monarch had brought him to the verge of death.

Crown Prince Farouk, 16-year-old student at Cambridge University, announced he planned to leave tomorrow for Cairo, uncertain at that time whether the Crown of the Pharaohs would await him upon his arrival.

The gangrenous spread of King Fuad's throat infection had previously been taking any food for more than four days.

The death of King Fuad removes a diplomatic, non-military figure that has stood as a powerful aid to Britain through more than one critical period, but through none more pregnant with possibilities of international flame than the past months of Afro-European turmoil.

Was Counsellor

First crowned ruler of Egypt in 2,000 years of the ancient land's later history, King Fuad I, won for himself recognition as a wise and congenial monarch.

Fuad, 68, was a six months' tour of Europe, visiting Sicily, Italy, Germany, Switzerland, France and England. Two years before he had visited France and England, greeted by pomp and pomp.

Aging and ailing, the 67-year-old King in 1935 was confronted with anti-British riots which threatened to dislodge the British from the Egyptian cabinet's planned resignation in December, he decreed reforms of the 1923 constitution which had been suspended a year before.

The many reforms by ambulance among the country's opposing political groups and the Cabinet did not halt.

The Wafd (Nationalist) party's leader, Nahas Pasha, clutched on for concern in Anglo-Egyptian relations.

In 1929 the internal situation was serious. In June a newspaper published a statement by Fuad, alleged to show documents which, if genuine, connected the Zaghlul party with Egyptian nationalist colleagues with an unsavory intrigue.

Seizing the opportunity to tighten on his rule, King Fuad forced Premier Nahas from office the next month, dismissed Parliament for three years, and announced he would take the reins of Government himself into his own hands. Later he made Mahmud Pasha, liberal leader, Premier under his hand.

16 Year Old New King

London, April 28 (AP)—Egypt's new king is the 16-year-old Crown Prince Farouk, whose name means "the one who is perfectly educated boy".

The death of his father, King Fuad I, came on the eve of the prince's planned departure for Cairo from Cambridge University, where he has been studying for six months in the Royal Military Academy at Woolwich.

The six foot prince will rule under a regency until he is 18 years old, his father having left a sealed envelope which will be opened to disclose his choice for Regent.

Young, athletic, and unusually mature in appearance, Farouk has been carefully educated from childhood in keeping with his father's maxim: "I want my children to be princes, but is something to be useful."

Farouk was not immediately informed of his father's death, pending the receipt of official word from Cairo.

The new king reads widely and has an ardent stamp collector, a good amateur photographer, and an ability as a sportsman. His favorites are boating, swimming and polo.

Fair Price for Newsprint Object of Ont.-Que. Entente

Premier Taschereau States Paper Companies Must be Allowed to Live

BOYCOTT THREATENED

U.S. Publishers Object to Government Regulation to Raise Prices

Montreal, April 28.—(CP)—Premier L. A. Taschereau of Quebec last night rejected flatly suggestions that the American newspaper publishers' association should boycott Canadian newsprint because of Government regulation in Ontario and Quebec.

Addressing a banquet, the Premier said that if an entente existed between Ontario and Quebec, it had no other objective than to maintain a fair price for the paper—"As a price to let the manufacturers live".

If the so-called agreement maintained that result, he said, then the government would have done all that was wanted of it.

"They are worried about an alleged understanding between Ontario and Quebec Paper Manufacturers to increase the price of their product," the Premier said. "But if there is such an agreement I am glad; it was wrong.

"All I can say, though, and as businessmen our counsel is the south will not prevail, is that no entente exists at all to profit from the situation and to boost prices unreasonably. There is no intention to oppress anyone; all the manufacturers wish is that the paper be sold at a price which will allow one of the largest industries in both provinces to live. If that is the result the efforts of Ontario and Quebec will not have been in vain. They will have done just what, as man directing the destinies of the provinces would desire."

Heenan for Mines Report is Current

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—Premier Hepburn said today activities of the Department of Northern Development were being studied to determine if they could be carried out more economically by other departments.

Further reports, unconfirmed, were to the effect the Cabinet later today will discuss proposed changes affecting the Northern Development Department and that should Hon. Peter Heenan, Minister of Lands, Forests and Northern Development, retire soon he would be replaced by Hon. Paul Leduc, Minister of Mines. Under this change, it was suggested, the present Minister of Mines would become Minister of Natural Resources, administering lands, forests and mines.

REFUSES TO OBEY RULING OF HOUSE

Peppery Pouliot Called to Task For Remark Made

OTTAWA, April 28.—(CP)—This capital's political gossips today waited in vain for Speaker Black to set what will happen to Jean Francois Pouliot, Temiscouata's impetuous Liberal House member, who stormed from the Chamber last night, shouting his refusal to obey a Speaker's ruling.

The peppery Pouliot, lawyer, author and House member for 12 years stamped from the floor after Speaker Black had ordered him to withdraw an assertion that former Prime Minister Bennett and the cabinet guaranteeing a $60,000,000 loan for the Canadian Pacific Railway and neglected to consult his Cabinet colleagues first.

Mr. Bennett demanded withdrawal, saying the statement was untrue.

Mr. Pouliot refused to do so and checked before the House Banking Committee. He said the room is the record with him so he was unable to quote it exactly. He declared he was sure of the facts, however.

The Speaker ruled he must withdraw, Finance Minister Dunning urged him to do so, but the fiery member, a former schoolmaster, grandfather and father before him were politicians, strode from the House, waving his arms and shouting:

"I will see the book before withdrawing".

His other remarks were lost as he charged down a corridor.

Later he said there was a possibility he had made a mistake. "If I am wrong," he declared, "I will withdraw. If I am right I won't.

$50,000 FIGURE FOR MINE FUND

Toronto Board of Control Recommended $1,000 to be Donated

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—The Moose River Relief Fund, to be distributed among the men who rescued Dr. D. A. Robertson and Alfred Hamilton from the Moose River gold mine, today reached $46,866. This does not include the scores of contributions received and other lists still unchecked.

To add to this are $2,300 collected by the Red Cross in Montreal, $150 by Winnipeg and $180 in British Columbia. Before the end of the day the $50,000 figure is expected to be reached.

Toronto Board of Control today recommended $1,000 be contributed to the fund. Final approval will be sought from council next Monday afternoon.

FORMER LIBERAL LEADER IN NOVA SCOTIA DIES

Hon. Wm. Chisholm Succumbs to Pneumonia at Age of 66

Antigonish, N.S., April 28.—(CP)—Hon. William Chisholm, Liberal opposition leader in the Nova Scotia legislature during the eight years of the Rhodes and Harrington administrations, died at his home here today at the age of 66 years.

Taken ill suddenly last Thursday, he developed pneumonia and the crisis was reached yesterday. He had not been in good health during the last few years.

His name was widely mentioned as a probable candidate for the seat made vacant by the appointment of Hon. William Duff to the Senate more than a month ago, but his close friends knew his ill health to be quite a certainty. He declared he was sure of the facts, however.

The Speaker ruled he must withdraw, Finance Minister Dunning urged him to do so, but the fiery member, a former schoolmaster, grandfather and father before him were politicians, strode from the House, waving his arms and shouting:

"I will see the book before withdrawing".

His other remarks were lost as he charged down a corridor.

Later he said there was a possibility he had made a mistake. "If I am wrong," he declared, "I will withdraw. If I am right I won't.

DOG IS FAITHFUL TO DEAD MASTER

Attempts to Drive Away Fireman From Fire Which is Fatal to Cabin Owner

Guelph, Ont., April 28.—(CP)—Charred remnants of a body believed to be that of Peter Kelly, 55, lay amidst the scorched debris of his shack, converted into a street car, in Wellington Place today, while police, crown and fire department authorities carried on an investigation into a fire that cost the life.

A few feet away from the bits of charred bones and viscera which once were a human body lay Place's dog, which last night refused to be driven away as it emerged from beneath the raging inferno of heat and jagged furbishes of flame to lick its long chain as it endeavored to drive away those fighting the fire.

The dog, maddened by heat and excitement, was shot.

The blast furnace heat of the fire curled the metal posts of the old street car and melted a glass found in the ruins. The body was found in the ashes beneath.

The head was completely gone, the arms and arms were missing, and the front of the torso was burned away.

KILLED UNDER MOTOSCAR

Windsor, Ont., Ont., April 28 (CP)—Jean P. Desfosses, 26, was killed near there today when the automobile he was driving left the road and turned over, pinning him beneath. Two companions escaped injury.

Advocates Judges Handle Adjudication on Pensions

Ottawa, April 28 (CP)—Complete separation of the Veterans' Bureau from the Department of Pensions and the placing of this body under an independent Quasi-Judiciary National Commission was urged before the House Pensions Committee here today by LL-Col. O. R. Phillip, of the Canadian Legion Executive. At the same time Capt. Wilfrid W. Parry, for the same organization, urged publication of decisions on pensions matters becoms a function of district and County Court Judges.

Pensions Minister Power, who presided, declared the first of these suggestions echoed an old complaint—that as soon as a man became sick pay the Government he was paid by the soldier and he applied by the veteran as an antagonist. To get rid of the Veterans' Bureau from departmental juristic-tion would please the ex-service men, but the same time it would relieve the Minister of much worry.

The general effect of this, said Col. Phillips, would be the extension into the new voluntary machinery of the same adjustment bureaus operated by the ex-service men's organizations. He declared the system would be more economical.

With regard to hearing of pensions sitting in County and District Court judges, Capt. Parry said the legion had no fear from a civil tribunal.

"On the other hand, he has much to hope and in many instances would prefer to risk his chance for pension to a proper legal authority than to the temperamental adjudications that have come from a board some members of the courts established by pension legislation."

CONDEMNS HIGH INTEREST CHARGES ON SMALL LOANS

Toronto Board of Control Inquires in Activities of Loan Firms

MAY TAKE ACTION

Large Number of Money Lenders Charge 60 to 75 Per Cent Yearly

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—Board of Control today held an inquiry into operations that loan firms in Toronto were charging from 60 to 75 per cent. Ralph W. Harris of the Central Finance Corporation and Alderman R. E. Saunders appeared before the board.

Something should be done about these people who charge interest at the rate of 750 per cent a year," Alderman Saunders said, from a letter to housewife them on the city hall steps. They are vultures."

Mr. Harris was asked to explain his statement before the Canadian Educational Association "that there are over 70 money-lenders in Toronto charging anywhere from 60 to 750 per cent per year."

He explained there were three companies in the provinces with special charters permitting them to charge interest on loans at the rate of 3½ per cent per month on the unpaid balance of the loan, and others are permitted to charge interest not in excess of 12 per cent a year.

"There are a great many people who want a business of making small loans as any rate they care to charge," Mr. Harris said he could give at instances of excessive interest charges, which could not be climed to divulge names.

The board requested Mr. Harris to place his information before Attorney General Roebuck as action might be taken.

ROYAL CIVIL LIST $2,165,500 YEAR

Select Committee of British Commons So Recommends to Commons

London, April 28 (AP)—A select committee of the House of Commons recommended to the House that the annuities payable to members of the royal family in the reign of King Edward XIII should total $433,100 (about $2,165,-000 a year.

This sum is known as the civil list, and is voted by the House of Commons to the various members of the royal family, following the accession of a specially-appointed select committee.

The committee proposed that $50,000 (about $300,000) be set aside to the widow of the late monarch, King George's marriage, but that this sum be paid for as long as King Edward remains unmarried.

Included in the recommended civil list are $1,134,000 (about $5,670,000) for King Edward's personal income from His Majesty's Privy Purse $110,000 (about $550,000) for the upkeep of the royal household, including retirement allowances, $134,000 (about $670,000) and expenses of the household, $152,-800 (about $764,000).

The Duke of Windsor, will not draw the $110,000 provided for the privy purse as long as his revenues from the Duchy of Cornwall remain above $112,000 (about $560,000) a year.

The other members of the Royal Family will receive a total of $194,-000 (about $970,000).

The civil list in the reign of King George V, including the sums paid to members of the Royal Family other than the king and queen, was $543,700 at the beginning of the reign. The civil list of the late king was subsequently reduced by $50,000 a year as from Oct. 1, 1931.

King George recommended that this reduction be made while the country was passing through a serious economic depression.

"TRICK OF FATE" FAVORS ENGINEER

Was to Have Accompanied Trio Who Were Imprisoned in Mine

Detroit, Mich., April 28.—(CP)—One of those little tricks of fate that crop up, Robertson, Nova Scotia mining engineer, from being incarcerated for 942 hours in the Moose River Mine with his cousin, Dr. D. H. Robertson, Toronto surgeon, and two others.

Here today on his way to mining properties in Georgia, Robertson, who owns the Moose Land Gold Mine only 11 miles from the Moose River property said:

"Originally I had planned to be at Moose River the day Doctor Robertson and his associates made their inspection," he said, "but later developments made it impossible for me to come to the United States."

Robertson, who has made numerous descents into the Moose River mine, said the cave-in on the mine "slip" or derelict.

"I think the slip caught on a key timber, pulling it out of place. This caused other timbers to give way, resulting in the cave-in," he thought.

The Toronto man who spent 10 days in a rock prison with Dr. P. R. Robertson, was responding favorably to special boot treatment. He is suffering from "trench feet", Dr. Robertson was reported to be making a satisfactory recovery at the same hospital.

ROTARY ANNES GUESTS OF CLUB

Rev. G. A. Leichliter of Toronto Heard in Humorous Address.

That two and two do not always make four, that a straight line between two points does not always furnish the quickest way to traverse the distance between those two points, contrary to general belief, and that many popular axioms are not as accurate as has been generally supposed when subject to analysis, believe it or not, was demonstrated to Rotarians and their guests Monday evening at the Hotel Quinte by Rev. G. A. Leichliter, of Toronto, in a semi-humorous speech which had many interesting angles. The occasion was the annual "Ladies Night" of Belleville Rotary Club which was largely attended, and the address given by the speaker was assisted by Jack Gulbridge.

Belleville Male Voice Quartette, consisting of Messrs. Bankier, Moorman, Howard and Evans, contributed to the program two vocal numbers very agreeably.

Club President Charles Dolan, in his best Will Rogers manner, disclosed well known failings and disclosed some startling information in regard to the private and public lives of well known personages—all of which ended in a big laugh.

Music by the Commodores orchestra was a pleasing feature of the program.

Past President Ed. Bernstein in his witty introduction of Charlie Spalding also contributed to the general hilarity.

Joe Shortt was introduced as the personal friend of Belleville Rotary Club and briefly acknowledged the honor.

A fifty dollar contribution from Rotary funds, presented to the Crippled Children's Committee, for the Moose River Miners' Fund, in appreciation of the services rendered Belleville Rotary Club in its Indigent Accounts Little other business is scheduled for their attention.

New Rotarian Introduced

The Baby Rotarian, born into the club at this meeting, was introduced in Robert John Spalding.

"Truth That Lies," was the subject of the address of the guest speaker, Rev. O. A. Leichliter, of Toronto, who in a humorous way showed that the accuracy of various popular axioms under certain conditions. He also gave a humorous recital of a trip to old Kentucky, which he visited recently, in his characteristic way in the beautiful grandchild daughter of Nancy Hanks, the trouble with the roads and the hospitality in sensational fashion, some years ago. Following the trip he undertook a trip through the wonders of the Great Smoky Mountains, and visited the mountains and a visit to the "Old Home," interspersed with reminiscences of her life on a Kentucky mountain farm. The speaker has a very pleasing delivery, and his dramatic force and he held the close attention of his audience for more than an hour, arousing laughter at times, then pathos in the pathos which almost started the tears. He was introduced by R. V. Gerry and Rotary appreciation was expressed by President Bert Hoyes and President Elect Joe Shortt.

ELECTRIC SIGNALS ARE EXPLAINED

Harry Drew in Charge of Department Tells Of Workings

"Railway automatic electric signals and their operation", was the theme of an address given to the local Y's Men's Club at their meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last evening. Mr. Harry Drew, who is in charge of the automatic signal department of the C.N.R. in division No. 8 was the speaker of the night and his general outline of the operation of the automatic signal system proved interesting as Mr. Drew thoroughly explained the various phases through which the automatic signal system passed in its operation. It is one of the latest systems of its kind and has proven highly efficient in operation. "What makes the system so effective is the fact that whenever this system becomes affected in any manner and fails to function properly, a red light in the area, turn immediately to the danger signal, thereby warning all approaching trains", declared Mr. Drew.

Opening the meeting Y's Man Herb. Mulk acted as the special chairman of the evening and announced, that the annual election of officers would be held next Monday night.

Following the regular meeting the Junior Y's Men's Bridge party was held in the auditorium of the "Y". A splendid turnout was on hand including members, their friends, and kin. The winners at the bridge tables were: Mrs. R. C. Walker, Mrs. Doctor, Fred Dyneen and Mrs. Wayden. The following the bridge games a dainty luncheon was served by the Y's Men.

POLICE BLOTTER

Found abandoned on Victoria Avenue, a Durant roadster automobile that had been stolen in London last week, was recovered yesterday by Constables Arnold and Reid. The vehicle, bearing Ontario license plates U-704 had been seen parked on Victoria Avenue ever since early Monday morning.

Robert Collins, 209 Dundas Street, complained to the police authorities he had lost his bicycle last night. left my bike at the upper end of Front Street while attending the picture show. When I returned for it, the bicycle was gone. I never gave anyone permission to take it," related young Collins.

An epidemic of the thefts of bicycles has been noted in Belleville during the past few weeks with the result that police have been ordered to keep a strict look-out for alleged bicycle thieves in the district.

While proceeding westerly on Bridge Street last evening, Sergeant Booth gave chase to a speeder. "I was forced to travel fairly fast an hour before I procured the license plate of the fleeing vehicle on Highland Avenue", added Sergeant Booth as he stated charges of speeding would be laid against the offender.

One lone inebriate and thirteen transients shared the cell block at the police station last night, all being allowed their liberty early today, but the drunk was instructed to return in time for police court on Friday morning.

FATHER AND SON FACE CHARGES

Hillier Men Are Charged With Setting Upon Fish-ery Warden

Alleged to have set upon Game Warden Herb McCabe of Belleville, and struck him while the official was performing his duties, Gilbert and Ross Phillips, father and son, residents of Hillier, Prince Edward County today, face the charge of assaulting an officer. The charge was laid today.

It is alleged by Game Warden McCabe, that the father and son set upon him and struck him after he had apprehended them in the act of illegal fishing, namely fishing with spears and a jack-light after sundown.

Inspector McCabe, working upon orders from his department, was investigating reported illegal fishing in the neighborhood of Hillier, when he suddenly came upon a party who were jack-lighting. The officer, hone-handed, approached the party and had seized a number of spears and jack-lights, when the two men set upon him and struck him on the head, and, according to the officer's statement, struck him repeatedly. The officer was knocked down and before he could get to his feet again he had regained their spears and beat a hasty retreat.

Informations were today sworn out by the game and fish warden, charging the Phillips men with assaulting the officer in the performance of his duties. The case will be heard in a Picton court on Wednesday along with eight other informations laid by the officer preferred for alleged illegal fishing.

Ald. Cushing Advocates City Managership and Three Man Commission

Visions of all municipal and public utilities departments, including police and Magistrate Court, with the familiar "efficiency" of the five department, housed under one roof in the old Belleville Hydro, a three man commission, preferably with a city manager at the head, are entertained by Alderman Thomas Cushing, who on previous occasions has advanced suggestions toward this end.

Ald. Cushing is the mover for these departments. We haven't any money to spend, but I believe that this accommodation could be made without 500 great an expense. We have it right here in the city hall. Experts in construction have told me that the roof could be partitioned so only a fraction of the cost of building new quarters, and for the police station, which is so credit to a city this size, and is practically condemned.

"One suggestion given me by a local business man is the raising up of the city hall and making an auditorium below. The raising up would provide all the new room we need for departmental offices, a new police court and a modern station combined.

"The reason is that the roof is removed from the present main city hall and the building now putting an extra story on there. Certainly the work be done at less expense and has been advocated by several citizens before. As it is the city hall is badly in some places already and repairs are necessary at times that old roof will have to be replaced, and gradually leaking to the whole building. In these extra quarters a splendid place would be provided for the police court, coroner's jury rooms and so on.

"All this will have to come, just as certain as a city manager will come into being. We ought to soon take charge of affairs in the city. Just now we're running far ahead of ourselves. Our outlay is growing our income. There is inefficiency and waste of money—I can see it on every hand. Under a system controlled by one responsible man all this would be avoided. We've got to go with the times," declared Alderman Cushing.

COUNCIL REFUSES GRANT

past the midnight hour was one of the longest sessions of the year and the matters on the agenda for decision were not completed, the gas question being referred to a special meeting, which will take place this afternoon. The time was extended twice during the proceedings of council and finally there was hardly a member present to vote on the decision to hold the special meeting was arrived at. Aldermen Hinchey, as chairman of the special gas committee with Aldermen Bateman, Lewis and Armstrong as colleagues has thoroughly considered the counter proposals offered by the Ontario Hydro Gas Company and they all expressed their opinion that the future of the company was in doubt with respect to paying off the indebtedness now owing the city, that the company was now $23,000 and interest in default under the present agreement, and they believed, that the city could operate the plant and show a greater margin between the operating cost and operating revenues.

Would Peaceful Possession

Alderman Jennings, who has given considerable attention and time to this vital question stated the committee was not trying to force the matter through but that the committee was trying to assist in taking peaceful possession of the gas plant. Aldfeman Jennings explained there were two ways to gain control, one by litigation and the other by asking the Company under the original agreement.

Alderman Safe: "I understand the company has made some proposals to the committee and we are concerned with the gist of their proposals."

Alderman Armstrong: "They have offered counter proposals and that is why we are asking for a special meeting."

Alderman Jennings: "The committee is unanimous in the opinion to take the plant back and run it for the city and I think if we had power to act in the operation of the plant there would be a considerable difference in a short space of time."

Alderman Safe: "I protested against giving the committee power to act."

Chicago Company

Alderman Armstrong: "I believe the Chicago company is completely divorced from the Ontario Shore Gas Company and that the only asset of the company is now established is in the Belleville plant. The only thing the people of Toronto is that we form another company to carry with a few changes from the one now in force. By running the plant ourselves we could eliminate a lot of charges but by the present condition we are assuming the liability with no resources."

Alderman Jennings: "It is whispered on the streets, that the plant is going to be closed down and I want to deny that statement emphatically."

Alderman Lewis: "There does not appear, to be any hope in the old company, there is little ability and the resources are depreciating hourly."

At this point, the members one by one, began leaving the council chamber and Alderman Armstrong stated he was sick and tired of the whole affair, "When the time comes I will make my views on the matter, but I do not think there should be many special meetings called."

Mayor Hill: "I think there should be a full attendance of the council for the decision is made respecting this plant and I will not set a precedent for members to decide the question."

Alderman Clapp: "I thought when the notice was sent to the company terminating the agreement the city would take over the plant at the end of thirty days."

Alderman Wells: "The notice was only to terminate the agreement made last year and the original agreement still has to be disposed of."

Alderman Bateman: "The arrears are continuing to mount up and something should be done immediately."

At this point the council adjourned to meet this afternoon.

No Tag Day

Alderman Clapp protested a Tag Day for the Memorial Hall, stating that there were a number, that needed helping in our own city, "I admire the work done by the miners in rescuing Dr. Robertson and Mr. Spalding but I believe they will receive recompense through the fund now being raised." Alderman Jennings, who was in the chair stated "I think the lodging of the motion was unfortunate."

A recommendation, that taxes on the Memorial Hall be remitted was brought forth from Alderman Wills, she executive had both stores rented, selling at Easter, the premises was permitted and he was of the opinion the question could be discussed at greater length and the place to discuss the matter was in estimates. Alderman Church Domenico stated the executive of the Memorial Hall had been under a great expense and they had improved the property and were now contemplating a new heating plant for the coming year. I think for this year at least, the taxes should be remitted. The matter was referred to estimates. The City Yard will be improved by plans provided the executive at their meeting. A tire was ordered purchased from R. Charles Motors and the sum of $350 was ordered expended on repairs for number one fire hall.

The rent question was under discussion in committee and a recommendation was passed, that the City Treasurer was to supply to the council the name and address of tenant of city property in arrears of two months rent subsequent to this date. The special committee appointed to make an investigation of city property reported to the council and many of the buildings will be advertised for sale, while each resident in these houses, who are in arrears of rent must pay at once or eviction proceedings will be undertaken by the City Solicitor. Those present at the meeting were Mayor Hill, Aldermen Thompson, Arnott, Baragar, Safe, Bateman, Jennings, Clapp, Domenico, Cushing, Hardey, Armstrong and Lewis.

Threatens Home When Money is Refused

Threatening to burn her home unless his demands for cash were promptly adhered to, a transient named Domenico Mio, 37, Maidens, 163 Victoria Ave., early last evening, Mrs. Maidens immediately informed the police, who secured the threatening neighborhood in search of the man, who had apparently taken refuge under the cover of darkness.

Early last evening Mrs. Maidens answered a knock at the side door of her home. Upon opening the door she was confronted with a short stocky man, well dressed and wearing a peaked cap. "Would you give me some money for a meal?" asked the man gruffly.

"I'm sorry but I haven't any change," replied Mrs. Maidens, immediately the man demanded more cash, "and if you don't produce some money pronto, I'll burn down your house," threatened the burly stranger.

Mrs. Maidens managed to slam the door in the man's face and successfully locked it as he pounded from the outside. Mrs. Maidens immediately telephoned to the police authorities with the result, that Sergeant Woods and P. C. Evans hurried to the scene and upon receiving a description of the man searched the surrounding neighbourhood, but without results, as the man had doubtless beat a hasty retreat.

Other East Hill residents have registered complaints relative to indignant transients calling at their doors and demanding cash. We are repeatedly being insulted in our own homes by saucy and indignant transients, who approach our doors and boldly demand money and insult us when we are not in a position to assist them. Something should be done with this type of a person," added one East Hill resident today.

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

"Exclusive Story"

Drama of Newspaper Racket Against Vice "East of Java"

As timely as the black headlines from which it is fashioned is the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production, "Exclusive Story", featuring Franchot Tone and Madge Evans and coming Wednesday to the Capitol Theatre.

Written by ace reporter Martin Mooney, it is a dramatization of his crusade against the racketeer overlords of New York, dealing in particular with the notorious "policy game," which is said to rob citizens of millions each year.

Gaining fame from his dramatic exposes, Newspaperman Mooney has recently given a tall sentence for failing to divulge the sources of his astonishing information. It is this material which provides the framework of the new screen play.

Briefly, the exciting theme of "Exclusive Story" is told in the lives of a group of people who are in one way or another affected by the machinations of the gang bosses.

A beautiful girl, daughter of a "policy racket" victim, appeals to a great metropolitan newspaper for aid. With her help and information, the paper's young attorney and crack reporter bring to a dramatic close the supremacy of his gang.

Franchot Tone portrays the attorney and Madge Evans the girl. Both players have distinguished themselves recently on other pictures. Tone in "Mutiny on the Bounty" and Miss Evans in "Red Salute" and "Espionage".

Heading the featured cast are Stuart Erwin in the role of the crusading reporter and Joseph Calleia in the Ace Accello.

"EAST OF JAVA"

Shipwreck Survivors Undergo Fur Existence With Savage Beasts on Jungle Island

One of the most thrilling and tense of all jungle productions is Universal's "East of Java", starring C. Bickford, opening Wednesday at the Capitol Theatre. Bickford, cast as an American gangster fleeing from East Africa with "G" men on his trail, champions seven castaways in their struggle, including a beautiful woman, against seven lions, when a tramp schooner is wrecked on the reefs of a jungle isle hundred miles from the nearest civilization. This is the film in which Richard Arlen is shocked by a crazed lion and nearly died of his wounds.

In the cast are Elisabeth Young, Dale Fuller, Addison, Leslie Fenton, Clarence Muse, and many other noted players of stage and screen. The production was directed by George Melford from the book "Tiger Island", by Gouverneur Morris, and adapted for the screen by Paul Perez and James Ashmore Creelman. Paul Kohner produced.

"Last Times Today

Tonight is your last opportunity to see "Laughing Irish Eyes", in which Jimmy Ellison sings romance and music starring Phil Regan and Patricia Knight. "Hostess Overaware" free to the ladies.

AT THE BELLE

"Wife Versus Secretary"

Gable, Harlow, Loy Together In Faith Baldwin's Widely Read Novel

Individually among the most popular stars of the film world; collectively the greatest star triumvirate of them all, Clark Gable, Jean Harlow and Myrna Loy will be seen together for the first time in the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer magnificent production, "Wife Versus Secretary", filmization of the widely read Faith Baldwin novel.

The new picture which comes to the Belle Theatre for three days starting tomorrow was directed by Clarence Brown, whose recent triumphs were "Ah Wilderness!" and "Anna Karenina."

It was produced by Hunt Stromberg, responsible for such hits as "Rose Marie", "Sweeting All Others" and "Naughty Marietta". Norman Krasna, John Lee Mahin and Alice Duer Miller collaborated on the screen production.

Supporting the remarkable trio of stars is a prominent cast of players with screen headliners as May Robson, George Barbier, James Stewart, Robert Cavanaugh and also Gilbert Emery, Margaret Irving, Billy Arvell, Marjorie Gateson, Gloria Holden and Tim Dugan.

The story presenting a society "eternal triangle" from a new viewpoint, casts Gable as Van Sanford, the successful business man very much in love with his wife, Linda, played by Miss Loy. Jean Harlow as Whitey, the secretary in the "other woman" who brings about an emotional crisis in the life of her employer.

Van, millionaire magazine publisher, returns from a vacation to find Whitey, his secretary, in complete command of his affairs. She conceives the idea of combining his magazine with another, thus gaining control of the field.

Linda, left with the office While Van sees Whitey only as an efficient secretary, Linda, poor fool as a woman, is not jealous, but a series of incidents convince her that it would be well if Whitey were out of Van's office.

Dave, just another young fellow on a salary wants to marry Whitey. When she refuses him, Dave is convinced she loves Van.

Linda begins to consider Whitey a menace to her happiness and quarrels with her husband, but through his differences Linda and Van suggest a second honeymoon trip to Havana. When the time arrives for the trip, he finds that he cannot take Linda. In order to swing the magazine deal he must stay home and attend a convention of magazine publishers.

Whitey makes a discovery concerning the activities of a rival magazine which might ruin Van's plan. She telephones Linda and informs her that the first plane to Havana. After two days and the discovering of a missing word they put the deal through. Then they relax, enjoying dinner and a few dances together. It is two a.m. when they arrive at Linda's apartment. Van's room to get her notes. The telephone rings. Whitey answers. Linda . . .

Believing that Van and Whitey have been together, Linda leaves for all for Europe. At the boat she finds Whitey with a note. "I am a fool to leave . . . that if she does, Van will turn to her. She admits frankly that she loves Linda to go, but she also tells her that Van should never be permitted to realize, although she is willing to take him second best, Linda speedily deaf to her plea and Whitey returns to Van after Van has been for the taking. But her earnestness has convinced Linda, who refuses to find Whitey waiting for him upon arms, Dave and Whitey are reconciled.

Another very funny all-star Personality comedy is titled "Public Ghost No. 1, and Vitaphone celebrities featuring favorite famed stars will be included in the same program.

"Shirley Temple Leaving

Shirley Temple's twinkling toes are dancing up to Hollywood again in her latest ivy-filled picture "Captain January", featuring Slim Summerville and Guy Kibbee. Fox has exhibited for the last times tonight at the Belle, with a new Sunny Jill Star Personality comedy, a smart Sports Parade and Fox Movietone. Tomorrow Columbia will be presented at 7.10 and 9.15 p.m.

Fatally Burned When Clothes Ignite

Owen Sound, Ont., April 26 (CP)—Mrs. William Maxwell, 64, of Amerherst Township, resident died at her home early today from burns she suffered when her clothes ignited in her kitchen stove Monday afternoon.

Flames leapt from the stove to her clothes and she was terribly burned before the fire could be completely off her body.

The infant child was the only other person in the home at the time.

When Dr. Cater and Dr. Martin of Dundalk arrived it was found her condition was too severe to have her removed to Orangeville Hospital and first aid was applied.

She leaves her husband and five children.

THE ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER

THE DAILY ONTARIO INTELLIGENCER is published every afternoon (Sunday and holiday excepted) at The Ontario Intelligencer Building, Front Street, Belleville.

THE KING'S MESSAGE TO MINERS

King Edward's message to the rescued men and the miners, who took part in the epic rescue from the Moose River Gold Mine, indicates the democratic mind of His Majesty and his sympathy with suffering humanity and his appreciation of the possibility of courage and self-sacrifice in every walk of life. King Edward was brought up in an age which has left its marks upon him as a ruler, who knows the throbs and the pulse of the world.

It is this democratic principle which sets the British monarchy as something apart from the general view which the world holds of the kingship as it has been exemplified in some other lands. Indeed it is only in the northern world in such monarchical states of Denmark, Norway and Sweden that one sees anything like this.

The peoples of King Edward's vast Empire know that in their ruler they have a man who knows them and feels with them. He was gifted by nature with this interest in mankind, and he had under the direction of his father the late King George Fifth apt tutelage in developing those sympathies and enlarging experience for the great office he is privileged and called upon to fill in these days.

There never was a day that required more courage than today, courage of the kind shown by the miners and the heroic men who were caught in the mine collapse, as well as the courage of living bravely under whatever circumstances, and performing one's duties like men. His Majesty the King appreciates such courage.

THE ACTIONS OF THE JUST

"Only the actions of the just Smell sweet and blossom in the dust"

They do more, they live in the lives of men and women, boys and girls and little children.

Nearly a quarter of a century has rolled away and time is a great burier of the past, but the life and work of William Johnson and his wife linger in the public and in individual memory. It is well that people of today can though the impulse of the life of the one time superintendent of Bridge Street Sunday School halt and think for a moment on the lives of those who have been "lost a while". The noble example of such lives fills the minds and hearts of hundreds many years after they have gone. When time sifts men's lives, it is well if at the end the sieve contains, not the dust of wealth or position, but the solid worth of human love.

LIVING LONGER MORE HAPPILY

King Edward Eighth's doctor, Lord Horder, has arrived at New York and in an interview said that the average life span was long enough and that the wiser task of life was to enhance life, rather than prolong it.

"Don't they live long enough?" he mused. "How to live more happily would be rather more to the point. People are living longer. Every year their expectation of life at any age is increasing. But what is the use of living longer if we are not happy, with economic conditions what they are and the infernal noise of cities and with machinery we have created running away with us." He thought "man is to be done in" by the machine he has made.

"From the standpoint of medicine we are no longer so much concerned with acute fulminating diseases as with chronic disease. With the ear and tear of life the heart, arterial and nervous diseases are all increasing. Acute diseases have almost died out."

Most people will want to live longer and believe that they will be able also to live more happily that they do today. Happiness in the mind of Lord Horder would probably be achieved through the elimination of much of the noise and the distractions and nerve-wearing processes of city life.

Many persons will say that the English people know how to achieve greater happiness than the folk of the New World who rush like madmen about their work. Some of the poise of the Englishman is necessary in our life.

MAKING THE CAR DO IT

Will there be a safety car which will take the market for good? By that is meant a car which will prevent occupants from being killed or injured and prevent them doing injury to others or damage to property.

A photograph of such a car has been published—wreck-proof, carbon monoxide proof, built by Dr. Calvin Bridges, nationally known biologist of California Tech. at Pasadena.

It does seem that unless some such device is built elimination of death toll and terrible accidents on the highways will not be possible. How it is possible to make the car do what the driver should do is something engineers will have to work out.

Rub them with cloud wisps, islanded in blue:
Dry them in breezes which take lazy toll
Of salted-surfed seas and pine trees on a knoll,
Of mignonette and rosemary—and rue.

I dare not let the blur of tears remain,
Nor dullness of the toil-filled round of days:
I wips all free of pride's deceiving glaze
And quickly wash off anger's blinding stain.
For only then I realize again
The healing glory of God's mystic ways!

THE STORY OF SAPOLIO. —"HOW TO BECOME GREAT."

"Diligence, Perseverance, and Genius May be of Some Help, but it is Ingenious Advertising that Tells in the Long Run."

This, then, is the story of Sapolio, one of the most interesting romances of Big Business, yesterday and today:

SAPOLIA A CLEANING COMPOUND which became known to millions through newspaper advertising and made millions of dollars for its owners until they stopped advertising and struck the skids, is coming back to life via the advertising route, and "Spotless town" will regain its position upon the map. Here's the story of Sapolio in brief, as reported in Time Magazine:

No dust or dirt, no grease or grime
Burnished their bright domain:
Then thousand sleuths could comb the town
For a grimy spot in vain!

By last week a last campaign of grocery store handouts and small advertisements in Manhattan newspapers had gone well enough to convince Enoch Morgan's Sons Co., maker of Sapolio, that old soap advertising jingles like this were still good copy in 1936. Morgan's new Sapolio itself, named by the Morgan family doctor, was not manufactured until 1868 by Enoch's three sons. Its world-cleansing career began in 1883, when a high-powered adman named Artemas Ward, (not to be confused with Artemus Ward, Abraham Lincoln's favorite humorist), was hired to push Sapolio sales. Adman Ward took a cake of greasy, gritty soap and put it in almost every grocery store in the U.S. He sent four salesmen to England at a time when virtually no one sent salesmen abroad. One of them was King C. Gillette, inventor of the safety razor. Two others are still on the company's payroll. In 1885, while Adman Ward was Sapolio advertising manager, Morgan's fitted out Captain William Andrews, a onetime plano-maker, with $250 and groceries, aboard the captain's Gloucester from Atlantic City for Palos, Spain, in a 14¼-ft. sloop called the Sapolio. When Captain Andrews turned up at Christopher Columbus' home port two months later, he stole the show from reproductions of Columbus' fleet which had sailed to publicize the Chicago World's Fair. Sapolio's name became so well-known in Europe that Punch made a hot joke to the effect that local children knew it better than Napoleon's.

Bret Harte was one of the many rhymesters who sold verses for Sapolio advertising. His parody of Longfellow's Excelsior served as a handout in 1877. The original Sapolio Town Jingles were submitted to Morgan in 1890 by a Cornell undergraduate named Fraser, later a partner in the advertising agency of Blackman and Co. Given away by the million in grocery stores, these and later lyrics were sung by vaudeville troupes, dramatized for church and school entertainments, clinched Morgan's thesis on "How to Become Great" in the company's Witchcraft magazine in 1904: "Diligence Perseverance, and Genius May Be of Some Help, but it is Ingenious Advertising that Tells in the Long Run."

By 1908, when Adman Ward left the company to do independent advertising work, Sapolio's decline had definitely begun. As powdered scouring soaps entered the market, Sapolio sales dropped steadily, amounting in 1930-1935 to 500,000 less than the oldtime advertising budget alone. Morgan's experimented with a powder in 1913, in 1915, and again in 1930, but Sapolio powder had lost its appeal. But not until this year did the company develop a new and improved powder for which it was willing to try another Sapolio revival.

The advertising agency of Mason, Inc., which got the Sapolio account, invented Hopkins, these stratosphere explorers named Peep, Sniff and Touch, made them slight apprentices in Sapolio Town where they could peep, sniff and touch with only fabulous results for Sapolio, the Town's cleanser.

AN ELECTRIC CLOCK

A certain nice little family broke up amiably a couple of years ago, the woman keeping charge of her small daughter and remarrying, the man returning to his pipe and his book.

He takes his daughter to luncheon and a matinee every now and then, and it was while they were returning from one of these excursions, on a bus, that she said loudly and clearly, "By the way, Father, have you heard that Mother has a new baby?"

LOOKING BACKWARD

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

April 28th., 1916.

Mr. Wm. Carney, Colby County Crown Attorney, is in Tweed today on business.

The Rev. H. R. Kenny of Cobourg, is spending a short time in the city.

Mr. Walter Alford of Hamilton who is connected with the 38th. Battalion, has returned to Hamilton, after spending Easter here with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Alford, Church Street.

Mrs. F. Herrip is spending a short time in Toronto.

Mr. Joseph Waddell is managing the warehouses at the wharf for the Canada Steamship Lines.

The schooner Tyler is undergoing repairs. Captain Joseph Fagan expects that the vessel will be ready for the season's work in the near future. The Tyler will be one of the best schooners on the Lakes this Summer.

30 YEARS AGO

April 28th., 1906.

In honor of the 67th. anniversary of the founding of Independent Oddfellows in America, the members of the order in this city attended the morning service at Rokeway Street Methodist Church on Sunday. The Pastor, the Rev. R. H. Letch, preached an excellent sermon.

Mr. Richard Arnott will commence operations shortly on the new skating rink which will be erected at the corner of Dundas and Pinnacle Street. The building will be 212 feet long by 178 feet wide, with an ice surface of 180 feet by 78 feet. It is expected that the rink will be completed in two months.

The 15th. Battalion paraded for the first time this season last night. Major Stewart was in command in the absence of Lt. Col. Halliwell.

40 YEARS AGO

April 28th., 1896.

Mr. J. W. Pearce, Reeve of Marmora, was in the city today.

Mr. G. Wilson of the Port Hope Guide, called at the Intelligencer office today.

Mr. J. Earl Halliwell, barrister Stirling, was in town today.

Mr. W. Carscallen, M. P., Marmora, was in the city today enroute to Napanee.

Mr. N. Gould of Plainfield was in the city today.

Mr. W. J. O'Flynn of Madoc was here on business today.

Mr. John G. Meagher, the well known manufacturers' agent, is spending a few days in the city. He has been in Ottawa for some time.

50 YEARS AGO

April 28th., 1886.

At a meeting of the Building Committee of Bridge Street Methodist Church, which was held yesterday the tenders for the erection of the new church were opened and the contract was awarded to Mr. Leslie Grills of this city whose tender of $23,-000 was the lowest of the eighteen tenders received. Mr. Grills' contract is for the entire job, leaving only the heating plant, gas fixtures, organ and bell. The architects hope that to furnish a lecture room ready for use by Oct. 1st. and to have the church completed by Jan. 1st., 1887. Work was commenced this morning with prayer and praise.

The Hon. Billa Flint left for Ottawa today.

Mr. P. O'Brien of Toronto is spending a few days in town.

The steam yacht Annie Oil-bert took a party of excursionists to Napanee this afternoon.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was sewing on her sewing machine and I said, Hay ma, what does incorriptible mean?

O, it's a long word and I'm busy, ma said, and I said, I know, ma, but what's it mean?

Well, incorriptible means not able to do anything with, that's the general sense of it, ma said, and I said, How do you mean, ma, do you mean like your tire after you just washed it?

Certainly not, ma said, and I said, Well, you always claim you can do anything with it. Well then how do you mean, do you mean like a old rotten tube that's all full of holes and leeks you cant even blow it up? You cant do anything with that, I said.

It's no used for things at all, ma said, and I said, Well how is it used for people ma? Do you mean like a baby is used, ma said, and I said, Well how is it used for people ma? Do you mean like a baby holding a baby and she suddenly discovers somebody has stolen the baby carriage and there she is holding him out there in the street with nothing to do with him? I said.

Now listen, I told you I was busy and I need my concentration and it's a word you'll practically never have to use in conversation, ma said, and I said, But I do, ma, that's just the thing. I mean I have to use it rite now. I mean Miss Kitty kept me after school this afternoon and she made me promise to tell ma that I've been incorrigible, so what's it mean, ma? I said.

It means you'll stay in the house from now till dinner time and from then till bed time, the idea, ma said, and I said, Aw O, ma, how do I mean that?

You'll find out by being the living proof of it, ma said.

Which I was, making me wish I hadn't said her till the last record before I had to go to bed.

Negro is Lynched Shortly Before Trial

Boynton, Ga., April 28.—(AP)—Lint Shaw 50-year-old negro who was to have gone on trial today for criminal assault, was taken from the Hopkins jail by a band of masked men shortly after midnight and hanged to a tree near Colbert, Ga.

Mrs. T. L. Henley, wife of the Sheriff of Madison County, said the body was found about 5 a.m. Colbert, the negro's home, is about 20 miles from here.

Sheriff Henley immediately left his home at Danielsville and went with other officers to recover the body and seek the lynchers.

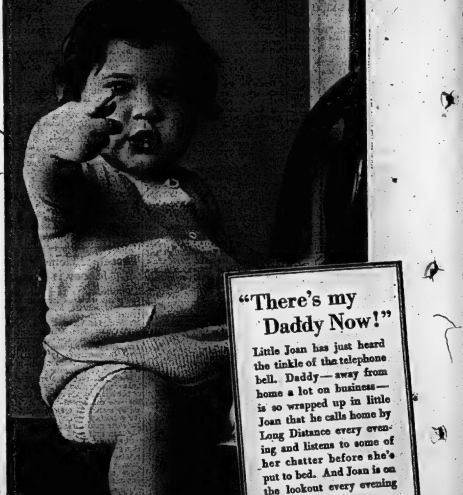
HERMAN GOERING NOW DICTATOR

Will Manage Foreign Exchange And Raw Materials

(Copyright, 1936, By the Associated Press)

Berlin, April 28.—Dr. Hjalmar Schacht, Minister of Trade and Germany's economic structure, became the Reich's No. 2 man in commerce, industry and economics today, and the dynamic general Herman Wilhelm Goering superseded him as far as management of foreign exchange and raw materials was concerned.

An official communique announcing the appointment of the Air Minister and Premier of Prussia by Adolf Hitler last night as supreme Dictator over all Foreign Exchange and raw material questions, asserted:



"Inasmuch as in handling of questions concerning raw materials and foreign exchange, numerous government and party offices must co-operate, Lor Puehrer and Reichschancellor has delegated to the Prussian Prime Minister examination and execution of all necessary measures."

"There's my Daddy Now!"
Little Joan has just heard the tinkle of the telephone bell. Daddy—away from home a lot on business—is so wrapped up in little Joan that he calls home by Long Distance every evening and listens to some of her chatter before she's put to bed. And Joan is on the lookout every evening for Daddy's call.
Expensive? Not at all! Night Rates begin at 7 now, and they are surprisingly low, especially on "Anyone" calls.

A jack rabbit came off best in its battle with two chicken hawks. Attacked by one hawk, the rabbit fought it off while her young one rushed towards a bush for safety. A second hawk joined the attack, but the buck confirmed his defence tactics of springing into the air as the birds and frightened them both away.

COVENT GARDEN SEASON OPENS

No Gala Performances Are Being Given Owing to Court Mourning

London, April 28 (CP Cable) — The London season which had consisted of unofficial opening on Saturday with a performance of Richard Strauss' "Elektra" at Covent Garden Opera house, who is a great favorite in Berlin, and Margery Booth, who is to sing Magdalene. The latter like another Toscanini is a very different coloratura soprano.

Gracie Fields—is originally from Lancashire. She will later sing French and Italian roles. Sir Thomas Beecham conducts.

The Royal Academy, twin starting-post for the London season, opens Friday.

LOCATED IN BED MAN ARRESTED

Charged With Stealing Car And Crashing it Near St. Joachim

Chatham, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Located in bed in his hotel room where he retired this morning after being treated for scalp wounds, Norman Carpenter was arrested today by Detective Sergt. Hugh Douglas and Provincial Traffic Officer Al Lawrence of Tilbury on suspicion of being the thief who during the night stole a car from a parking lot here and crashed it on No. 3 Highway near St. Joachim.

Carpenter did not plead on being arraigned before Magistrate Arnold later on the theft charge. He was remanded for a week in jail for a week his injuries not being serious.

The driver of the car that crashed had a remarkable escape from death or serious injury, police said.

Officers said it must have been travelling at a terrific rate when it crashed. There were marks to indicate that after a bad skid it turned on its side, slid over the pavement 100 feet, jumped a six-foot ditch, and came to rest against a telephone pole which was snapped in two feet from the ground.

Carpenter elicited information that the driver of the car, who was alone was picked up by a group of motorists and driven to Chatham.

10 Jurors Selected in 2 Weeks' Time

Oakhill, N.Y., April 27.—(AP)—Veniremen at the Alfred Volckmann murder trial who promised counsel to avoid jury service faced rigid questioning by Supreme Court Justice Gilbert Schenck today.

The jurors have been selected in two weeks.

The court, seeking to hasten completion of a jury to try the 30-year-old Cranbville boy for the murder of Helen Ulm, excused 100 in two hours of questioning today. One hundred and eighty-six veniremen reported.

The murdered child was the daughter of a wealthy flavor dealer who time lived sb Hamilton, Ont.

$900 STOLEN FROM WAREHOUSE

Hamilton, Ont., April 27.—(CP)—Smashing the combination of the safe office also, thieves stole $900 from the seat and brewer's warehouse during the night. Police are seeking fingerprints and other clues.

The safe breaking came after a long list of such crimes in Hamilton. Several months ago one office after another was entered by an organized gang and the safes shattered and robbed.

A sidewalk grating in plain view of every passerby was lifted by the robbers, and the cellar entrance smashed. A door leading to the upstairs part of the building was also smashed. The thieves departed via the rear door.

The safe was in an axle room in the front of the building and was also in plain view of the street.

HOPE LIES IN UNITED ACTION

New Plan of Reconstruction Needed Says Minister of Labor

Kingston, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Recovery after the depression in Canada is not merely a matter of getting back to the old stock market prices nor of regaining the position as third greatest trading nation in the world, but is a task of reviewing the manner in which the Dominion has developed since Confederation and seeking wherein Canada has been successful and wherein she has failed and then setting forth on a new plan of reconstruction, Hon. Norman McLeod Rogers, Minister of Labor, told the Kingston convention here during the week-end.

One of the more serious results of the depression has been the growing lack of cohesion, said Mr. Rogers. He said he was certain, however, that these evidences of feuds, mistrust and sectional antagonism can be removed very largely by the realization that Canada's only escape lies in united action.

Mr. Rogers said he was confident that by 1939 the people of Canada would be able to look back and agree that there was indeed a goodly heritage.

"Cleanup" Campaign Sets Chimney Afire

Woodstock, Ont., April 27 (CP)—Fire Chief Ed Mellon declared his "spring cleanup" admonitions seriously to heart this week-end and successfully cleaned up all the unnecessary inflammable materials he could around the A. McNamee household. This morning before leaving for the firehall he used the services of his cleanup to build a fire in the furnace. A little later the chief's wife passed some alarming word to the chief that Mrs. McNamee thought the chimney was on fire. She was right.

The chief made a one-man fire department and quelled the blaze. No damage was caused.

McINTYRE CREW APPROACH HOME

Three of Four Leave North Bay on Last Lap of Journey

North Bay, Ont., April 27 (CP) — Relieved after the strain of their efforts to aid in the rescue of Dr. D. R. Robertson and Alfred Standing from the Moose River Gold Mine, three of the four members of the McIntyre Mines rescue squad which was rushed to Nova Scotia nearly two weeks ago, started on the last lap of their homeward journey from North Bay to Timmins at noon today, impatient for their arrival home.

George Mitchell and Elmer Morgan, Timmins, and Sholair Mac-Millan, Schumacher, reached the city, this morning and after stretching their legs for a few hours, left for Timmins on the T. and N.O. noon local. W. J. Hesp, pilot, head of the rescue squad, remained in Halifax where he will transmit notes to be made during conversations carried on with Dr. Robertson via the diamond drill hole.

Captain Hannigan was the most frequent speaker at the curbside end of the communication link. "The transcription of his notes will be made a part of the history of the grim battle against death both below and above ground which it is proposed to compile.

Unstinted were the words of praise voiced by the Timmins "hard-rock miners," for the courageous French screen of the Nova Scotia coal mines, to whose a large part of the credit for the rescue has been given. But the Timmins men are themselves experienced rescuers, for even though they disclaim it themselves, many experts are agreed that they, too, played a considerable part in the rescue.

When they first arrived at Moose River, the job revealed, they were working in shifts underground. A man went below for the working day and knowing there until he was exhausted, sometimes, by three or 14 or 16 hours. Then his place was taken by a worker fresh from the surface and he, or 4 hours sleep since coming off a similar shift. Working periods were abandoned as the strength of the men was sapped, but then reinforcements from the north and from the Nova Scotia coal mines commenced to arrive.

Then working shifts were out to two or three hours and a man would work at almost his top speed in that length of time before his place was taken by a relief man.

VOICE FOR MOOSE ASSISTS RESCUE

Ordinary Voice Fail in Phone Talks Through Drill Hole

Moose River, N.S., April 27 (CP)—A voice trained to call moose in Nova Scotia forests was useful to rescuers in talking with miners entombed for 11 days in the gold mine here.

For four days before the two men were brought to the surface, a telephone line dropped down a two-inch diamond drill hole to the ore-body reached Dr. Robertson and Alfred Standing in the gold mine here.

The situation was becoming hopeless when Sergeant Roy Beckwith, a guide, were offered. His strong voice was relayed through the hole to the imprisoned men so well to the imprisoned men so well to the job for two days and two nights.

See Robertson Back At Post in Two Weeks

Toronto, April 27 (CP)—Dr. D. R. Robertson, who was entombed after being from death in the Moose River Gold Mine, will be back at his post in the Hospital for Sick Children here in about two weeks Dr. W. E. Gallie, who visited the Moose River during the rescue made this statement on his return here today.

Dr. Gallie was not so optimistic about Scadding, who suffers from trench feet.

"He is very miserable," Dr. Gallie said. He said he did not know if amputation would be necessary as he had not seen Scadding for two days.

Alleged Counterfeiter Is Held at Buffalo

Buffalo, N.Y., April 27 (AP) — Harry Colling, 34, giving a Buffalo address and described by assistant detective Chief Frank McCarthy as a clever stock certificate counterfeiter, was held without charge today for investigation.

McCarthy said Colling, who admitted formerly living in Montreal, was arrested in his room with stock certificate writing machine, chemicals, printer's brushes, pens, and stock certificates calling for 3,000 shares in various mining companies, mostly Canadian, were seized.

McCarthy said Colling's method was to buy 100 shares, take the certificate to 1,000 shares and sell it through a broker.

Detective Sergeant Alfred Hicks of Toronto said Canadian authorities for months had been trying to trace counterfeit stock certificates.

ROSLIN

Roslin, April 28—A re-organization meeting of the Willing Workers' Mission Band of St. Presbyterian church was held in Carlaw School house on Friday afternoon April 24th with the leader Mrs. D. C. Hill occupying the chair. The meeting opened by singing a hymn. The Mission Band prayer was then repeated. The scripture reading from John 15 11-26 was especially read by Dorothy Poole after which Rev. D. C. Hill led the Bible story.

Officers for the coming season were elected as follows:

President: Marie Collins.

Secretary: Elizabeth Alford.

Treasurer: Mabel Cross.

Attendance Secretary: Dorothy Poole.

A number of items of business were dealt with.

An interesting part of the programme was the presentation of the Presbyterial Mission Band banner by the leader. This banner was won by the Roslin Mission Band for the past year and will be hung in the church for the coming year. The offering was taken up by Ruth Poole and dedicated by Rev. D. C. Hill.

A hymn was sung after which Peggy Jean Hill told in a very effective way the story of the "Snow Bird While Dove." A hymn was sung and the meeting closed by all singing and the mizpah benediction by Rev. R. H. H. Boulleot of Oronhyatekha.

Miss Minnie Hamilton Beg. N., left last week for Detroit.

FORMAL AND INFORMAL sprites are repairing for all occasions. Nice for informal dinner wear is a long slim suit of printed silk in bright shades of blue, white, purple, bright green and aqua. The fitted jacket has stitched revers and there is a tucked bosom-front blouse of white moussoline de soie.

COME ALONG and join the flower hat brigade. A charming model is made entirely of pansies in various shades of purple, ranging from lavender to deep violet.

NOW'S THE TIME to satisfy that craving for a new suit, since everything is in fashion. A useful suit of green woolen has a short, boxy jacket trimmed with a collar and tuxedo fronts of fox shaded from eggshell to dark brown. The wide armhole is marked by pleats.

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

(Copyright, 1936, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

Mother Worries Over Son's Choice of Mate for Life.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

My son was obliged to abandon his profession during the hard times, and went to another city to get a clerical job. He boarded with a family of people who are not of our class, and fell in love with the girl. She is pretty, but uneducated, ignorant and thriftless, the kind who bore her mother do all the work around the house, while she goes to the beauty parlor.

When things began to get serious and my son told me he was in love with this girl, I went there to visit him, and was amazed that a son of mine could so far have forgotten the ways of his own family that he would be willing to ally himself with those people.

I tried to get next to the girl, but she was suspicious and kept me at arm's length. I've said nothing against this family, because I do not wish to lose my son's affection. But I can see the arrangement is headed for disaster.

As a last resort, would it be well to tell the girl she would be unwelcome in our family?

Distracted Mother.

A girl such as you describe is unlikely to give up a chance at a desirable marriage, no matter how her one's family disposes of her. And as for my plainly, in taking that line you may lose the affection of your son.

Sometimes young men recover from these strange infatuations when they again meet girls of their own class. People who have been brought up with different tastes and standards seldom hit it off in marriage.

If your son's fiance were sensible and ambitious she might educate herself out of her present status before—but she does not seem to be of that type. Better trust to Fate and not break with your son. The situation is discouraging.

I'm at First, But Now It's Serious.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

It all began when we were in high school together. It was just liking at first, but it has grown to be something stronger. I've begged to enter college this fall to study for a career, which will take me out into an open, lonely life — and which is surely unfit for a girl.

I have to pass up most of the fun which our old crowd enjoys, but she never complains of this, and would as soon go walking with me as go to the theatre — but I don't think this is fair to her.

She has just entered college, and has wonderful opportunities for meeting the right sort of people. Still, she sticks to me. If I succeed in entering college, I won't have any time for girls, even this beloved one, for course will require concentration and much study.

Chick.

Affairs of the heart like yours, my dear Chick, are all on the knees of the gods. If you two young people care enough for each other you may be willing to wait till you are in a position to marry. But if long waiting and circumstances should part you, this friendship will always remain a beautiful memory. And that's something to be thankful for.

She Thought It Was Platonic Friendship, But It Proves to Be Love.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

From the time we were in high school we were the best of chums, and always worked out our mathematics and studied together in such ways felt that my duty was to remain with my parents, who are old, but very active, and depend on me absolutely.

This platonic friendship that I had with George satisfied me completely. We went to theatres and concert together — he bought the music mad — and in the spring went hiking. It was lovely.

Then a younger cousin of mine came to visit us, and George has fallen deeply in love with her. I've had to go along and pretend that I'm glad, but in other things George caught me weeping, and he seems to have an inkling of how things stood between us. He asked me if I cared for him and I didn't answer. I'm 21 years of age. My cousin is 21.

Unhappy.

You are not the first woman who imagined it was a case of platonic friendship until the other girl came along. As your friend of so many years seems to understand at last that you really care for him, he could not deny for long. With such congenial tastes, I think you would make him happier than the visiting cousin. Always bear in mind so deeply in love with her as you profess to imagine. Novelty always arouses momentary interest.

Good Manners
By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

(Copyright, 1936, King Features, Syndicate, Inc.)

"AT HOME"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. We are a young married couple ....married just about a year and a half, and during that time we have lived with relatives. Within a month we expect to be established in our own apartment. Will you kindly advise me the proper way to let our friends know, and how to word an invitation or "at home" announcement?

2. What does one do at a housewarming?

Mr. and Mrs.

1. If you just want to "let your friends know" of your new address, the best way is to mail Mr. and Mrs. cards, the large visiting cards engraved with the name Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Dale in the center of the card, and the address in the corner, the street-address — 420 High Street — engraved in the same type of engraving, but in smaller lettering.

The next best way, if you do not wish to order these engraved cards, is to buy some "Informal Message Cards", the double cards with the fold at the top, and write the names and address. To carry out the informality of these, you might write the telephone number on the inside pages, and any other message you wish to send. Or, on semi-note paper, you might write a short note, giving the new address and the new telephone number, and a hospitable invitation to your friends to "come to see you soon".

And, if you wish the announcement of the new address to carry also an invitation to an "At Home" or a housewarming, any of the three above forms is also correct for this.

The first form, the engraved Mr. and Mrs. cards, may be used first as a visiting-card is used for a tea-invitation:

Mr. and Mrs. John Allen Dale
Housewarming
Sunday, April tenth
Four to seven
420 High Street

On the second form, the "Informal Message Cards", you could write the name and address on the first page, and then, turning the two inside pages so that they may be written on as one page, write the invitation on this page, in the form of a note. Or the note of invitation is just as good on the semi-note paper most convenient for this.

You may give your housewarming as a tea, from four to six or seven, or a buffet luncheon or a buffet supper. The tea or buffet luncheon would most conveniently be given on Sunday, when the men guests will find it easiest to come.

The only difference between a housewarming and any other kind of party given at the time you choose for your party is that, at a housewarming, if your guests are taken on a "tour of inspection" of your new home. So, as one housekeeper to another, I warn you that every nook and cranny of your new home, including the closets, lady!—must be in perfect order. As the hostess you should not try to be the guide of these tours, for you should not leave the living-room where you are receiving your guests. Ask two or three of your close women relatives or close friends to be co-hostesses to show the guests your new home.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A very dear friend of mine is going to be married very soon, and my husband and I are to be the attendants. She will be married in church, and her brother, who is a minister, will perform the ceremony. As she looks better in tailored clothes, she is going to wear a strictly tailored dark suit and hat. Her brother insists that she walk down the aisle, and that we follow her. I have never heard of this being done in this way, and to my mind it does not seem proper. Please give me your opinion.

B.

Your husband, as the best man, would enter with the clergyman and the groom, from the vestry or robing room at the front of the church. The clergyman enters first, and he is followed by the groom and best man, altogether. You, as the bride's attendant, would come up the aisle first, followed by the bride and whoever is to present her in marriage. If no one is to give the bride in marriage, you and the bride might walk together up the aisle.

Ice Jam Halts Boats At Port Colborne

Port Colborne, Ont., April 28 (CP) —The vessels were also bunched together in the ice jam one-quarter mile from the Port Colborne breakwater this morning. The vessels were stranded in all directions and were apparently finding great difficulty in making headway.

Since the arrival of the Kenora at six o'clock yesterday afternoon, no other vessels have been able to penetrate through the ice to the harbor. Two other vessels, the E. C. Pope and Thunder Bay quarries, arrived ahead of the Kenora yesterday.

Movies Can Be Aid To Child

But Writer is Against Submitting Him to Sadistic Spectacles

By LISA GRIDWELLE

A Long Island woman has been having movie trouble again.

After having carefully avoided all pictures dealing with gangsters, sex and murder, and shooting for her children only those based on the classics or with an historic background, she finds that some of these, too, bring tears, nightmares and hysterics.

From the stabbings and shootings of the old-fashioned melodrama and mystery play; the machine gun fire of the musical-accompanied gangster movie, we pass to the sadistic spectacles of whippings, hangings and torture depicted in great and repetitious detail in the newer classic and educational movies. No scene of agony is omitted; nothing suggested, but all given in full detail, and then repeated. In the next scene, Endless close-ups are shown of tense, drawn, pathetic and pain-distorted faces, writhing bodies, mad mobs, flinty prisons, the wheel, the whip and the gallows.

"Even father," she writes, "could not sit through one of them. I know the fair did a wonderful piece of selling, but I never shall forget the pain and fear on his tortured face. The picture was beautifully made, splendidly produced. But would it have been any less effective if the brutal incidents had been suggested rather than depicted in every detail?"

Yes, madam, it would.

I am no sentimentalist about the innocence of children. I don't believe in sheltering them too long or too exclusively. I don't believe in protecting them against every unpleasant truth or in an unnatural and extended preservation of their innocence.

But the child is very young, or abnormally sensitive, I would not deprive him of seeing a picture because there was a hanging in it, a shooting, or even a suggestion of torture. But I don't think any child, or for that matter, any adult, should be subjected to these sadistic spectacles. No, not even if the story is based on fact, or has an historic background, is beautifully and well produced. Nothing excuses a complete lack of taste and discrimination.

More of the movies need are a few good editors who realize that the most important factor in any artistic endeavor is to know what to leave out and to know when to stop.

Our children want to go to the movies and we want them to go. We think the movies are not only a great pleasure, but a gift of great educational value. Let's have more of the movies that are beautifully produced and acted, and yet without horror.

OLD FRIENDS to dinner means a nice hostess gown. Done on long lines, it has a high neck and wide armholes for the bodice, which has a deep V in front, is a tea rose crepe with a bunch of velvet violets at the front decollete.

1800-lb. Lead Roller Passes Over Man's Body

Port Hope, Ont., April 24.—(CP)—Under the heavy four-ton land roller, dragged by a runaway team, passed the body of Arthur Hall, 50-year-old middle-aged farmer on the Port Hope-Peterboro Highway, it was told to tell the tale.

He is in the Port Hope hospital, badly bruised, with one broken rib and one hand so badly lacerated, that at one time amputation was deemed advisable.

Austin, driving the roller, attempted to cross the highway from a field, when the horses bolted as the roller came in contact with the pavement. The rider was pitched head first, behind the flying heels, and the machine passed over him. Today his condition is reported as good.

Wayside Management Reports on Development

The Company has had full power supply since April 17. During low water period the mill was handling between 80 and 90 tons daily. Since the 17th the mill has been gradually accepting more until it is now handling 135 tons daily.

Ore is being drawn from development raises between 2rd and 4th levels. The daily mill feed comprises 100 to 150 tons ore from the mine and 30 tons of tailings from the old mill which average about $7 per ton. A wire from J. A. McKenzie, superintendent, 10 Vancouver office explains that these tailings must be treated at this time as there is danger that the freshet would carry them away or into the creek. The approximately 3000 tons of the tailings still to be run.

The drift on the 7th level north has still about 100 ft. to go to reach the point where the downward extension of the A-A ore-zone is expected. The drift ended after following ore for 200 ft. has been discontinued owing to the flow of water seepage from the river.

Option on 50,000 shares at 15c to April 16th was not taken up, thus cancelling the balance of the option which covered another 50,000 shares at 18c to April 30th.

Paymaster 1326-Ft. Level Still in Ore

According to advices received in Toronto the 1326-ft. level was first face at Paymaster Consolidated Mines is in ore averaging 0.60 ounces of gold per ton over 11 inches and on the 1460-ft. level 12 inches of rich ore has also been encountered across better than 5 feet of face. The face of the wall at this point revealed two feet width averaging 0.40 ounces per ton.

To date on the 1460-ft. level which is entirely below the fault working have been advanced for 350 ft. on which about 63 ft. is very high grade.

The reason for the decline in the alcohol output is explained in the press despatch from Washington to the effect that American industries have been considering the banning or liquor shipments into the United States from Canada unless the firms unless they pay taxes on which are not mentioned. It is believed they are Distillers-Seagrams, Hiram Walker-Gooderham and Worts, Canada Malting, Alcohol and Brewers and Distillers. With members of the latter group into many millions of dollars and it is quite likely that the imposition threat will be put into effect. Rather a complicated affair, it would be. Canadian companies today have too large a stake in the American business to put up a strenuous effort to straighten out the situation. What has been apparent after Canadian liquor interests argued that the Canada-Russo proposed bill would greatly reduce exports of whiskey to United States States, first to customers, and mitigate the beneficial effects of the trade pact.

Some bets are understood to have been placed in Wall Street at 1 to 5 odds favoring Roosevelt's re-election.

Holders of the various Canadian liquor shares will watch with considerable interest the publication efforts that are presently under way. Some are in the dark and should continue to mark time.

Livestock

Toronto, April 28.—(CP)—Cattle trade ruled active on Toronto livestock market this afternoon with prices steady. Calves also showed little change. Hogs were unsettled.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: Cattle, 1,000; calves 200; hogs 1280; sheep and lambs 1100.

Steers and good weighty steers sold from $4.50 to $5.75 in the cattle trade. Bulk of the purchases brought $4.25 to $5.00 with a few at $5.25. Common bullocks were in ample supply at $3.00. Good butcher cows sold from $2.50 to $3.75 with a few tops at $4.00.

Common cows ranged down to $2.25. Bulk of canners sold at $2.50 to $2.75 for good butchers. Choice feeder calves brought from $6.00 to $6.50 with good kinds from $5.00 to $5.50. The calf mart was steady at $8.50 to $8.75 for choice vealers, unsettled. Yesterday hogs closed at $8 F.O.B. country points. Today trade was unsettled and $8.75 off cars.

Lambs sold steady and 25 cents lower on the market today at $8.50. Spring lambs were easier selling from $4 to $6 each according to weight and quality. Sheep sold mostly at a top of $5 with the common grades downwards to $1.50.

Hogs sold at $10.25 to $10.50; medium, $9.50 to $10; sows, $7 to $9.

Sheep, good, light, $4.50 to $5; heavies $3 to $4; culls $1.50 to $2.50.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 28 (AP)—The Stock Market suffered intermittent liquidation today.

Declining periods found the tickers lags behind floor transactions while the rallies were rather dull.

Steels, coppers, rails and General Motors—each off about 2 points at the approach of the final hour—were the weakest departments.

Resistance was exhibited by American Can, Northern Pacific, Allegheny Pacific, Douglas Aircraft, Allied Chemical and Johns-Manville.

On the down side fractions to 2 or more points were Case, Westinghouse, Du Pont, American Locomotive, American Telephone, Western Union, Bethlehem and International Harvester.

TORONTO MINES

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—The Toronto Stock Market was a bit shaky in the lags today, due possibly to the weakness in London and nickel weakness though the French political upset was again charged with being the chief disturbing factor. Trading moved along quietly in the early forenoon session through the morning session but prices slipped back faster around noon when selling in New York speeded up. Losses in the base metal shares reached a full point or more and in the secondary golds the declines of a few points prevailed. Trading slowed down in the afternoon and there were scattered recoveries.

Rexoana lost ½, Hudson Bay was off ¼. Falconbridge declined 10 cents, Sherritt Gordbury Basin and Vinnipeg Yellow each 5 cents each.

Siscoe drooped below the dollar mark for the first time in more than a year. Cash weakened a few cents.

Sigh in the senior gold list were Hollinger off ½ to 14¼, and Lake Shore, Malnyre, Pioneer and Wright Hargreaves all off a few cents to the minimum fraction.

Pickle Crow was down ¼ to 5.80 but came back to close with a gain of 5 at 5.85. Lamaine off 2 to 5 cents lower showing at the close for the Lebe, Macassa, McWatters, Little Long Lac and Teck Hughes declines lost a few cents. Leya Cap. a new industrial, sold down 1.20 to 3.26.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—Toronto Industrials shares displayed a slightly nervous condition and sharp declines were boarded around mid-day. Trading was active in spots. Local inspiration for the weakness was the political upheaval over the impending Federal Budget and Treasury statement and the unmarked weakness of New York and the French political upset with its threat of currency disturbances. International Nickel declined $2 but the majority of losses were fractional loss for the day of about a point. Abitibi Power common showed about 5 points net and losses of fractions were showing at the close of the session. Canada Bread, Brazilian Traction and C.P.R.

Gold stocks were firm and steady to strong while Distillers-Seagrams showed a loss of a small fraction. Industrial Alcohol A was off about ¼.

In the utilities, moderate heaviness appeared for Bell Telephone, off 1½ points, Gatineau off 1 point and Power Metals and Page Hersey were down fractions.

Consol. Pfd. lost 2¼ while Dominion Tar Pfd. was off 2. Cyanamid dropped ¾. Banks weakened ½ to 3 points. Steels and the miscellaneous group losses included 3¼ for Rubber Pfd. and ¼-point each for the Goodyear stocks.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 28.—There was a firmer tone on the local egg and cheese markets yesterday. Receipts of eggs were on the light side, and prices tended a shade higher. Arrivals of cheese were fairly small, and, with the early start to the export season, the market tone has become firmer. Butter market started was steady at last week's closing levels. Receipts were adequate, with further export sales to the United Kingdom reported. The potato market was steady on new potatoes. Receipts for 25th day were posted as 64 cars of 50 lbs. and boxes of butter. Truck receipts are not given until Saturday for the week to a whole.

The egg market was quoted on graded domestic stock prices: Extras or Lc. 1 lots, generally at 21c for A-1 lots, 20c for A-2 quality, 18-18½c for B, and 17-17½c for C. The butter market was 29½c to 30c for No. 1 graded grass in cartons or 1c. 1 lots, with No. 1 fresh pasteurized 30c to 30½c.

GRAIN

Winnipeg, April 28 (CP)—Brisk overnight export sales of Canadian wheat enabled future prices to score partial recovery in early Winnipeg grain dealings today from yesterday's two-cent recession.

Values near mid-session were ¾ cent higher. May at 80¾, July 81 and October 83¼ cents. Export sales of 500,000 bushels of wheat took care of scattered selling that started into the pit.

ROOKIE HURLER SCORES FOURTH STRAIGHT WIN

Al Piechota of Newark Bears Seems to Have "It"

ORIOLES SECOND

Score Nine Runs in First Frame to Down Rochester

(By The Associated Press)

The Newark Bears have gained a full measure of revenge against the Montreal Royals for the latter's act of brushing Newark's long string of victories in the International League.

After 10 straight triumphs, the Bears, leading the pack in the league race with the Royals then in the runner-up position, ran into a stumbling block in the person of Lauri Myllykangas one of the Montreal pitching staff, and went down to defeat on Sunday.

Yesterday the two teams met again, however, and Newark turned on the Royals administering a 13-3 drubbing. The Bears ended their first home stand by pounding four Montreal pitchers for 15 hits with Al Piechota, young right hander, chalking up his fourth straight triumph.

Dan Boyle, right fielder for the Jerseymen, got a hit a day at bat, getting five safeties in five trips to the plate. He got a triple and five doubles and scored four runs. Johnnie Schmitz helped a bomber for the Bears while Gus Dugas hit one for Montreal.

The Baltimore Orioles, scoring nine runs in the first inning of their game with Rochester, moved into second place in the league. The final score of the game was 14-4, 11 being the eighth victory for the Birds in their home series of 11 games. Rochester now has lost seven of its last nine games. The Hook Set on Lee Mimms in the first third of the opening inning to saw in his place then and there. Larry Benton, on the mound for the Orioles, was touched for 13 blows, one of them a homer by Buster Mills, but the latter pulled or gave him an ample margin to work on.

The Syracuse Chiefs scored a 7 to 4 victory over the Buffalo Bisons as Reggie Humphrey, rookie right hander, faltered in the final frame after holding the Bisons scoreless for the first eight frames. Humphrey had allowed only three hits until he blew up in the ninth and was yanked. Buffalo collected three hits and as many runs in the final innings and Ky Vandenburg was sent in to finish the game. The Chiefs bunched 12 hits off the deliveries of Bob Kline and Ted Pomorski to score their seven runs.

UNDERCURRENT OF EXCITEMENT NOTED BEFORE RACE DAY

(By Orio Robertson, Associated Press Sports Writer)

Louisville, Ky., April 26 (AP) — Like a mighty volcano smoking to unknown depths, say charts, this Blue Grass Metropolis today awaited the 62nd renewal of the Kentucky Derby.

Outwardly there was little to indicate that four days hence the pick of the three-year-olds would answer the bugle call at Churchill Downs for the great turf classic. There was no parade. The crowds of 50,000 fans would pack the quarter-mile Kentucky thoroughfare to rather.

Underneath the unconcerned appearance, however, there was a restlessness, which will burst forth with a roar Friday and Saturday, when the multitude descends on the city.

The Downs itself will not assume a festive aspect until the day before the race, today its straggling stands resembling from the head of the home stretch to the other end, were bare and forsaken except in spots, where the few thousand gathered to watch several of the leading Derby candidates match strides in the one-mile of the trial.

Only a comparatively few of the mutuel windows were open and they were not overly busy. Saturday the man, who wants to play his two dollars, will have to fight his way through the mob.

Across the track in the green-painted barns, there was a different sight. Almost every stall found activity as the horsemen, from the trainers down to the swipes, went about the task of preparing the three-year-olds for the big race.

Here and there could be found a group of exercise boys or jockeys discussing only one subject— the Derby. Almost without exception they picked J. E. Widner's Brevity as the horse to beat over the one and one-quarter miles.

THE NORWEGIAN HEAVYWEIGHT

"ANDY" MOEN

Successful promoters usually match winners with winners and that is the kind of bout promoter Jac Corcoran of the Queensbury Club will present at the local arena this evening when The Unknown meets Andy Moen, speed boy from Minneapolis. Both were impressive victors at the opening show a week ago and their clever match work served to provide a contrast with major heavyweights and the lightheavies.

Moen has had five years of professional experience so must be considered well equipped to meet any emergency which may arise. It is a great chance for him to add to his reputation for the first man to beat the Unknown will be in receipt of lucrative offers from all the large mat centres where the opening man of the sport has been campaigning during his remarkable winning streak.

Al Dunlop who has improved as have few heavyweights and who certainly acquitted himself creditably in his draw with Irish Jack Kenny at the last show, will meet strong opposition again when he engages Sieve Zanoski, powerful Pole, in the semi-final of forty-five minutes. In the opener the speedy Antoine Parkin will wrestle Chief Lynx the Rama. Reserve any emergency which may arise, as it is a great chance for him to add to his reputation for the first man to beat the Unknown will be in receipt of lucrative offers from all the large mat centres where the opening man of the sport has been campaigning during his remarkable winning streak.

Indians Thumping Horsehide Behind Swell Hurling With Every Player Full of Fight

Steve O'Neill Handling Team in Fine Manner

REDS DOWN CUBS

Ernie Lombardi And Thevenow Supply Batting Power

By ANDY CLARKE

(Associated Press Sports Writer)

American League managers are scanning the record of Cleveland Indians these days and finding therein little solace for the road that lies ahead.

The Indians currently are leading the pack with eight wins in 11 starts this season but it isn't the number of victories as much as the way they scored them, that impresses the old campaigners.

Steve O'Neill the former boss of Toronto Leafs, has moulded a cohesive band of ball players, who will fight down the line until the last ball has been pitched and the last blow struck. The Indians have been thumping the horsehides with vigor and their pitching gets better as the season moves along.

Mel Harder, Oral Hildebrand, Johnny Allen, Lloyd Brown and George Blaeholder all have been showing plenty of stuff and if Willis Hudlin takes a new lease on life, the Indians will have a pitching staff, that may make the fans forget about the Yankees, the Sox, the Yankees and the rest. Harold Trosky, the first baseman, Earl Averill, Joe Vosmik and Bruce Campbell seem capable of taking care of the heavy batting chores. Trosky is leading the league in home runs with five and his 16 runs batted in is only one behind Bill Dickey of the Yanks.

Harder Holding Up

Brown, Harder, Allen and Blaeholder all have won the distance and won. Harder and Allen each have notched two victories apiece, handed.

Blaeholder came into his own in his first start of the season yesterday when he held St. Louis Browns to seven hits and won his game 5-1 but it was Campbell's homer in the seventh that proved to be the winning run. The Indians, who got eight hits off Rowe, Van Atta and Vern Kennedy, were impressive with the Campbell belted the horsehide over the wall in deep center with the bases team the lead.

It was the only game played in the American League, the only other Major League contest being the Cincinnati Reds nosed out the Cubs 5-4 in 10 innings.

The Indians scored their first run in the opening frame, when Joe Vosmik singled to right, stole second, went to third on Averill's fly to Myer and scored on a single by Vosmik's single to left. The Browns tied the score in the second on Myer Bill Cliff's triple and Rollie Hemsley's single to left. It was Cleveland's turn in the next six games with the Browns.

Ernie Lombardi slashed with two outs in the last of the 10th started the Reds on the road to victory over the Cubs. Tommy Thevenow met one of Lon Warneke's slants for a single and the Reds game was over. Thevenow went into the game in the sixth after Larry French had retired Vosmik on a line drive batter and until that 10th inning gave the ruling Reds only two hits.

Billy Herman, the two-bagger king of last year, who has had a bad start at his favorite blows, along other of his fellow Chicago Cubs, picked up three safeties for himself.

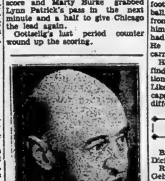
BLACKHAWKS WIN 5-3 OVER TORONTO

Johnny Gottselig And Mush Marsh Fine Majority of Goals

Vancouver, April 26.—(CP)—Led by Johnny Gottselig who bagged two goals, Chicago Blackhawks won a 5-3 decision from Toronto Maple Leafs here last night in the first of a three-game total-goal series for the Foster Hewitt Trophy donated by the Vancouver Service Club for the winner of the Exhibition series.

More than 5,500 rabid fanatics saw the two National Hockey League teams perform.



Mush Marsh was the only other player to collect two points. He assisted on the two Blackhawk two first-period goals on a pass from Bill Thoms after Wilfred Mann soloed through for the first. Syl also laid down the pass for Gottselig's counter in the third, the only one of the period.

Jack Hamilton, 18 year old unassisted marker for the Leafs before the game, failed to score.

Charlie Conacher, Toronto's big gun, was checked through the Hawks' defence early in the middle session to drill home a shot, that knotted the score and eight minutes later Bill Thoms duplicated to give Leafs a short-lived lead.

Just past the 14-minute mark Gottselig put Blackhawks back in even terms with an unassisted score and Percy Burke grabbed Lynn Patrick's pass in the next minute and a half to give Chicago the lead again.

Gottselig's last period counter wound up the scoring.

OLYMPIC HEAD—President of the International Olympic committee which rules the 11th Olympic games at Berlin is Count de Baillet-Latour (ABOVE), called "Father of the modern Olympics." He is a Belgian and is seen as he arrived in America from Japan where he went to study Nipponese bids for the 1940 games. The site will not be selected until after the Berlin meet.

DRY DOCKLE OUTFIELDER, BREAKS ANKLE—Randy Moore, right-fielder for Brooklyn Dodgers, is carried off the diamond at Ebbet's Field, with a fractured ankle, received when he tried to steal second with a slide. Moore will be lost to the Brooklyn outfield for at least six weeks.

EDMONTON GRADS STILL QUEENS OF BASKETBALL

Edmonton, April 26 (CP)— Edmonton Grads were still queens of international women's basketball competition today but they faced another challenge from the United States Quintets.

Three sharp-shooting champions in international play since 1922 turned back local lass-playing Tuxis Sixes 35-30 last night to win the best-of-five games series with two victories to one. The win let Grads retain their North American and International championships.

The next challenge they face comes from the U. S. Preferred Lions and is scheduled to start May 28.

Yesterday's Stars

(By The Associated Press)

Ernie Lombardi and Tommy Thevenow, Reds: The former hit homer to tie score against Cubs and then doubled in 10th and scored winning run, when Thevenow singled.

Bruce Campbell, Indians: His homer in the seventh broke pitcher's duel and gave Cleveland 2-1 win over St. Louis Browns.

McGrath's grip

UNORTHODOX BACK-HAND — Vivian McGrath, of the doubles-grip back-hand is again placed on the Australian Davis Cup team. On their way to Philadelphia, where they play the U. S. cuppers in American zone finals, they will play several matches in California.... Here is McGrath. He plays doubles with Adrian Quist.

GOLF BY ALEX MORRISON

Lew Lehr, of news reel fame, recently made the statement—and one that it would pay many golfers to repeat. He learned that he could play with the same for both iron and wood shots.

WOOD AND IRON SHOTS ARE ALIKE TO CHARLIE McCARTHY, ALSO

The similarity was brought out in the starting position he used for both shots, in playing an iron club he stood with ball opposite his left heel, and the shaft of the club leaning forward slightly so that his hands were a bit ahead of the ball. In this way he his a good ball.

When Lehr attempted to use the wood club he took an entirely different starting position. He stood with the ball nearer to his right foot and had his hands behind the ball. In this position he delivered the blows with all he could muster

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH HERGESHEIMER

"Ah.....And did Stewart feel that he had to come matter to you?"

"Not at all. I happened in while he was conversing with that fine young lady." He used to get Stewart in his office. "Miss Sherry of Sherry-Gaines, your orders, Mr. Cannon, I admit her to remain."

"Really?"

Cannon asked the question earnestly. His pale eyes and Harold Sandby. The corners of his mouth were motionless.

"I'm sir. I believe you may have had a wrong impression about Miss Sherry. She's a conscientious and satisfactory. The department will suffer if she leaves."

"And the Iron Block will suffer if she stays. Possibly it is you who are mistaken, Sandby. I'm told that Miss Sherry is a young woman of refinement. An artist. I had an interview with her."

"I see. May I hope, Sturges, that you are not hesitating to be unacceptable?"

"You may," that young man declared coldly. "But it happens that I am interested in fair play. That I read every magazine. Man or woman. Young or old."

Cannon shifted his pose to the desk top.

"I am sorry, Sturges," he remarked coldly, signifying that he considered the discussion at an end. "It might make it best we call on without the young person's assistance. Did you have an opportunity to glance over those papers I left with you?"

"Parden me, Mr. Cannon," Sturges, as leaned nearer and rested his knuckles hard against the desk. His blue eyes stared unflinchingly at the merchant. "I very much fear it will be necessary. You are overlooking an important matter."

"Yes?" Cannon's voice was almost silent.

"My stenographer. You insisted we have one. I was to be given my authority over her. I have not....that was my one stipulation. It still is. I trust that shall be my position in plain terms."

Cannon sat motionless, staring. Then he breathed.

"Then you retain you."

"Precisely!" Sturges interrupted. "I'm glad we understand each other."

For the first time, the general manager saw Spencer Cannon blink.

X X X

Back in her little corner workroom, Jean regretted the promise she had made Sturges. It seemed impossible to go on with her work. Much time she spent counting her heart gave a little jump. It might be Mr. Cannon coming to ask why she was there.

The day dragged to an end at last. Instead of going directly home, Jean made her way swiftly to Le Salon Mimette. A furtive peep through the door revealed the proprietor sitting at her little desk in the corner of the reception room. So once she was in sight.

"Oh, Max! Are you alone? Can we talk?"

"Hello, Gorgeous. Sure....all solo mio. Just sent the slaves home and was going to lock the joint. What's on your mind?"

Jean dropped wearily into a low boudoir chair, pushing her hat from her forehead with a listless gesture.

"What's wrong?" Max demanded suspiciously. "Job gone sour today?"

"No....not exactly."

"Meaning ye, Dearie. You'll have to wait until I get the slaves out of before I get all the sad story. My dogs are killing me."

Max left her seat and lunged painfully in the direction of a door. Jean, today, a queen or brilliant green was molded closely to her voluptuous curves. Satin pumps encased in a pair of shining pumps. A source of her present discomfort.

"That's more like it," she sighed seem always to understand."

A few moments later when she reappeared with her silken feet thrust into disreputable bedroom slippers, she sank into a chair opposite Jean's. "Now, then, take it slow. You've trouble. I....I've lost my position."

"What!" Max bolted her words by bounding into an erect position. Her small eyes were wide with disbelief. "You says so?"

"Mr. Cannon told Mr. Stewart I would."

"Why, the old....." Max checked the epithet that rose to her lips. "And just when you were getting so well set. I don't get it, Gorgeous."

"I will, if you stop to think. I suppose I should have known. I've been a fool to expect any other kitter. But this is what makes it so difficult, Max," she added. "Mr. Sturges told me to stay."

"Then I could go for Mr. Sturges in a big way. Who is he?"

"The new manager."

"Oh, yeah.....I don't hear something about that. Well, if he's boss and tells you to stick around, you ain't that the answer?"

"I don't know what to do." There was a despairing note in her voice. "It does sound rather complicated, doesn't it? I suppose you discharge it a bit. Tell me something about this boss man."

"He's nice."

"That's a big help."

"Of course I know what Mr. Cannon's reason was. I've been afraid of it....of him, I mean. I thought he had forgotten. But Mr. Sturges didn't know, so I had to...."

"I get it."

"He will ever so nice about it. He...."

"Why shouldn't he be? It was best for you to tell him."

"I suppose I thought. He told me I must stay at the store. Act as though nothing had happened. But I can't do that, Max.....I just can't."

"Wait a minute, Gorgeous....." Max minutes. Miss Gamble stretched out her legs and licked herself free of the slippers. She scrambled with her suffering feet, wiggling them cautiously. "Tell me some more about this new man. I don't get that him until today. But he's ever so nice....."

"He must be....that's three times now. Tell me more about the big silk and satin man. If he has place in his lapel I don't like him. How old is he? Is he married?"

"About thirty, I guess. Maybe older....I don't know. He's a bachelor, I wish you could see him. He isn't such a big man, but he's.... well, sort of distinguished. And attractive. He has beautiful teeth, blue eyes and dark hair. The girls think he's marvelous. You should hear them rave."

"Your little act isn't so bad. Rather a new one for you."

"Well, you'd admire him, too. I...Oh, I'm so tired and sick of it all!"

"I know. But it's no time to be running out on yourself."

"It's like a dream. Almost every day, meeting people....trying to act like any other girl. Everybody thinking I'm trying to be somebody when Daddy's....where he is. If they try to be nice to me, I feel they're sorry for me. It makes me hateful and suspicious. I can't help it, Max."

"Nobody's blaming you dearie. But it's the wrong slant. You'll have to work it out for yourself, though."

"And I was so happy over Mr. Stewart. I thought I was getting somewhere. I wish now I had stayed where I was."

"Nonsense. If this boy Sturges has got the drag he seems to and if he says stay....then stay. Wait and see what happens."

"But I'd feel dreadfully if Mr. Cannon made any trouble for Mr. Stewart. He's been such a dear. Or Mr. Cannon might come to me."

"I still would like a chance."

"You may be right," Jean sighed. "I don't know what I'd do, Max, if I didn't have you to talk to. You seem always to understand."

THE TARZAN TWINS

(Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

As the panther sprang, it could not refrain from a snarl of anticipated victory, for it was certain of its prey. But that triumphant snarl was a split-second warning to Tarzan. There was neither time nor need for him to look back to determine the source of his danger.

No logical reasoning determined the ape-man's consequent behaviour. He acted with the sure instinct of the hunted beast, and with a swiftness which few beasts could duplicate. There seemed no measurable interval of time between the panther's snarl and Tarzan's reaction.

His muscles snapped taut and one side of his former position. Cradlike swiftness was not sufficient to escape entirely from that bolt of black lightning. A clutching hand landed heavily on Tarzan's shoulder and scraped his flesh.

Flung his body to But even his lightning reactions were not quick enough to save him entirely from the full force of the first attack, voiced a terrifying scream, whirled quickly, and rushed the apeman at close range.

But as the beast darted its head around to sink its relentless fangs into the body of its prey, Tarzan leaped to his feet. And now the panther, infuriated by failure of the first attack, voiced a terrifying scream, whirled quickly, and rushed the apeman at close range.

INSTALMENT VI.

Nan Gamble received Jean's impulsive tribute in contemplative silence. Presently, she sighed and remarked slowly:

"Maybe I do understand some things, Gorgeous. I should've steered her aside with a little grimace of discomfort. Her old slippers hadn't eased her feet as yet.

"And if you are smart, you'll go around with your chin out. They'll land on it a little oftener, but it's over with sooner. You're probably framing some once-back about my chin being pointed. But it wasn't always that way. Believe me."

"I didn't suppose people ever bothered you!"

"No? Well, that's because I don't let them. I'm too wise. Look at the women in this burg who know I have a past. Just because my hair isn't the same color that came with me, and because I don't let my hips run at large. But when those dames want to improve on God's handiwork they take a chance on their reputation and come up smiling.

"That's because you do better work than anybody else."

"I don't deny it. Even that Canyon girl friend of yours comes here instead of patronizing the Cannon store parlor. Say! You got the old man on to do the eggs! She old man on to do his dirty work, do you? I wouldn't put it past her.

"Why, I don't think so. But she's with her father when he came down to talk to Mr. Stewart about me, I saw them."

"If I thought she did, I'd sure fix her the first time I found her in here with a wet towel on her face. She's one more reason for your sticking it out there. You were just speaking of your dad, too. It won't be so long now before he'll be home. Then that part of the picture will be cleaned up."

"I know," Jean admitted.

"When that time comes, you want to be sitting pretty for his sake. It'll be a big help to him."

"Do you think so?" Strange that Nan should have spoken of it. Almost the same words Mr. Sturges had used.

"I know it. Folks are funny that way. I've a notion the fold here is pretty modern....goes in for trenches and barbed wire. The lost sheep gets a great big hand when he tries to barge into the trough with the rest of the ninety and nine....Or am I thinking of hogs? Anyway, you get the idea."

"Yes, I get it."

Just what was Daddy Jack's return going to mean?

"You know," Nan continued musingly, her eyes half closed, "I've always had a sort of weak spot for that mutton lethal. It's one of the few I remember from the time I was a little kid. My old man had a carpenter shop and he used to sing that song when he was working at his bench. I don't know why....he had used.

"I know it. Folks are funny that way. I've had a lost sheep, if ever. I had a pen for sitting on the floor and playing with the shavings. I still think of sheep as being yellow; I've an idea a good many of the ninety-nine are, at that."

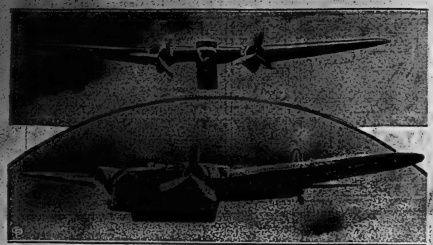
"Maybe I don't care!" Jean burst out defiantly, bringing her hat into place with a savage tug. "He's my Daddy Jack, no matter what. I love him and.....I'm going home. It's late."

"Come upstairs and have a bite with me. There's a couple of chops in the cooler.....speaking of lost sheep, I don't dare get more than one. The old girl's figure, you know. Help a fellow out, won't you?"

"Not tonight, Nan. Thank you. Mummy will be looking for me."

"You're welcome to take luck here. But you know that. And you sit tight on the job."

"I promised Mr. Sturges I'd think it over. I still don't know what's best. But you've helped a lot."



"Thanks."

"More than you know, Nan. You always give me confidence in myself. Yes, you do."

"What's the child! Just because I've showed you what you could do with that face, and tried to make you stand up straight. You didn't look so hot the first time you came in here," she added with perfect candor. "Beat it. You make me feel mushy. I'll be wanting to kiss you next....."

"Good night, Nan. And thanks."

FRANCE'S NEWEST "MYSTERY" BOMBING AEROPLANE—Built in greatest secrecy, France's newest military aeroplane, the Amiot 144, is said to be capable of tremendous speeds at altitudes of more than 12,000. The aeroplane is equipped with two Hispano-Suiza engines of 1,200 horsepower each.

SOME UPSETS MADRID MILITARY PARADE—A remarkable picture of the stampede of horses and humans, that followed the explosion of a bomb and the rapid fire of pistol shots during the military parade held on the fifth anniversary of the founding of the Spanish republic. Note the panic-stricken horses of the troops dashing in all directions in mad stampede. At the LEFT is the band stand on which stands President Martinez Barrio and behind which a bomb exploded, starting the near-riot. One person was killed and a number injured by the bomb and flying bullets. The adventurous lads are paddling a sail-equipped, 17-foot canoe named Muriel. They expect to cover the distance in 18 months, including a winter stopover in northern Alberta.

FLY MINE VICTIMS TO HOSPITAL—Dr. D. E. Robertson, who was rescued from the Moose River Gold mine after his long entombment, is borne on a stretcher from the Royal Canadian Air Force seaplane, which carried him from Moose River. Dr. Robertson and his companion, Charles Alfred Scadding, were rushed to Halifax for hospital treatment after their thrilling rescue from the living tomb where they had been buried since Easter Sunday, and which had claimed the life of Herman Magill, another companion.

"SORRY, HANK, YOU'RE ONE STEP TOO LATE"—Centrefielder Hank Lieber of N.Y. Giants took to the air in an effort to beat the throw on his infield blow in the second inning of an inter-borough clash with Brooklyn Dodgers. Buddie Hasset, crack rookie first baseman, pulled in the shortstop's snap throw, however, and Hank was called out while still off the ground. Here you can judge the play for yourself. Dodgers won 4-3 in 10 innings.

AS MOOSE RIVER MINE VICTIM LAID TO REST—Thousands of citizens in Toronto and Hamilton witnessed the funeral service of Herman Magill of Toronto, who was buried with full military honors by fellow officers of the Toronto Scottish. Premier Does Not Entirely Favor Representation by Population

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Elimination in the membership of the Ontario legislature before the next election was promised today by Premier Hepburn.

Prior to the last election Hon. George S. Henry, Conservative leader, reduced their number of seats in the house from 113 to 90. Now Mr. Hepburn proposes another reduction, probably to 75 or 80. The biggest cut, Mr. Hepburn indicated, will come in Toronto and York now represented by 17 members. 13 in the city of Toronto and four Yorks.

Representation of the small area of Toronto and York by 17 members, the Premier described as "preposterous".

"I cannot agree entirely with the principle of representation by population," the premier explained. "There are other considerations such as the area and sparsity of population of the people."

DRAEGERMEN IN TORONTO ON VISIT

George Morrell And Jack Simpson to Tell of Rescue

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Headed away from the mark and muck of Moose River and into the glow of the footlights, a couple of draegermen arrived in Toronto today.

Lean George Morrell and Chubby Jack Simpson stepped off a train to face a battery of exploding flashbulbs and didn't seem to mind a bit.

An early morning railway station crowd—trainmen, taxi-drivers and a few stand-outs—gathered and cheered around for autographs, and Morrell objected to taking off his hat for photographs, because he "hasn't any hair." It was Morrell who crawled into the corner of an elevator, who thought the cage that lifted him upward in the blackwith-ash-and-shower was "worse than the Reynolds shaft.

Tonight these laughing boys with the pallid faces of the underground dweller take in their movie equipment and go on the stage to give an audience some weakened conception of the 10-day struggle to free Dr. H. R. Robertson and Alfred Gadsby from Moose River Gold Mine. Their day is full of appointments but they will find time to visit Mrs. Herman Magill, widow of the third man imprisoned—who died before the rescuers could complete their tunnel of escape.

Then the double shaft, of course, Morrell and Simpson and the men they led didn't use the gas-fighting apparatus they are trained to carry in the gold-mine section around Stellarton. They had little more than their bare hands there.

Representative Refuses to Admit, Deny Marriage

Washington, April 29 (CP)—Rep. resentative Thomason of Washington State today prepared a brief on Constitutional immunity while John Nance Garner and received congratulations on his day-old marriage to the widow of a pretty stenographer, he quipped:

"If only I knew whether I'm what the other is doing."

The brief dealt with immunity from arrest. He said it was inspired by his skirmish last week with police when he was held for speeding and contempt of court.

Informed that Rev. Paul R. Diehl, of Annapolis, Md., had confirmed that he married the Congressman said:

"This all reminds me that there is a connection in his name and the ocean is full of commotion."

'PAY UP' WINNER 2,000 GUINEAS IN FIRST MEET

Race at Newmarket, England, Opens Season in Flat Racing

FAVORITE FOR DERBY

Aga Khan's Mahmoud Second And Outsider Third

Newmarket, Eng., April 29 (CP)—Pay Up won the two thousand guineas here today in the first classic race of the English season. The Aga Khan's Mahmoud was second and Mrs. J. Shand's Thankerton third.

It was the 128th running of the one-mile race for three-year-olds.

Pay Up was one of the favorites while Mahmoud and Thankerton were outsiders.

Pay Up will take among the favorites for the Derby, to be run at the winning post and Thankerton was three lengths behind Mahmoud.

Lord Astor's colt started at odds of 11 to 2. Mahmoud was quoted at 100 to 8 and Thankerton was a rank outsider at 40 to 1.

The winner was ridden by Dick Wells and Tornagrine was Maharajah's jockey.

PRESS GALLERY MOURNS WRITER

Harry W. Anderson Was Popular Figure at Ottawa

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)—Members of the parliamentary press gallery were saddened today by the death in Toronto of Harry Anderson, their colleague for many years and latterly former managing editor of The Globe.

Word of his passing reached the gallery executive the following resolution was adopted:

"Resolved: that the parliamentary press gallery, in common with the whole Canadian press, and Mr. Anderson as a whole, has suffered a distinct loss in the death of Harry Anderson, a beloved fellow-worker and a brilliant member of the profession.

"Further it is resolved that the secretary of the press gallery convey to Harry's family this expression of our heart-felt sympathy in the hour of their bereavement. Personal qualities were always a delight to his associates, and when professional eminence was a matter of pride to Canadian journalism."

City Council Takes Action To Repossess Local Plant Of Ontario Shore Gas Company

Recommendation Passed at Special Meeting of Council

PLANT NOT TO CLOSE

Five Members of Council Appointed as Governing Body

As soon as details can be arranged, the Corporation of the City of Belleville will take over the assets and buildings of the Ontario Shore Gas Company in this city and the plant will revert to the management of the city under which it was operated for many years before the purchase by the newly formed gas company. This decision was reached at a special meeting of the City Council held on Tuesday afternoon, all members being present with the exception of Alderman Ben Sarderson, a beloved fellow-worker and a brilliant member of the profession.

"Further it is resolved that the secretary of the press gallery convey to Harry's family this expression of our heart-felt sympathy in the hour of their bereavement. Personal qualities were always a delight to his associates, and when professional eminence was a matter of pride to Canadian journalism."

Small Moderately-Priced Rented Houses in Demand

Considerable Construction Throughout Ontario is Forecast

OUTLOOK IN DETAIL

(By the Canadian Press)

Ontario's annual big move with its hustle and bustle brings a brighter picture to the construction industry and housing problems for cities to solve. A heavy demand for small reasonably-priced homes has made its appearance as May Day approaches and moving vans start rumbling.

Although most cities in Ontario report slight gains in building figures compared with last year some real activity is founded in the Toronto and district area with the Northern Ontario city expecting a record programme to become the business outlook.

Toronto City building department officials declare the construction picture this spring is only "a little better" than last. Up to the end of March total value of building work was $942,41, slight increase over 1935 figures.

Expansion At London

About $300,000 will be spended in London, the majority in industrial expansion. Hyrgade Corrugated Products Limited, manufacturers of containers and packing cases, are arranging for a $30,000 addition to their plant. Imperial Oil Limited edifice Tea Company plans spending $35,000 on two new stores.

For the first three months of 1936 total value of new buildings in Hamilton was $160,000 compared to $140,000 last year.

This year a $64,000 factory under construction and other large contracts are appearing.

Building operations at Sudbury for the first three months of 1936 total value of new buildings in Sudbury was $140,000 last year.

Plans for 13 new stores, 13 new homes and a new factory are among the 1936 permits issued in the first three months of the year.

WORKER BURNED AS GAS EXPLODES

Damage Gas Rocks And Damages Plant at Montreal

Montreal, April 29 (CP)—A man whose name was withheld was injured today when an explosion, reverberated by every gas rocked the Canada Wire and Cable Company plant here today.

Police said the injured man, slightly burned and thrown several feet by the blast, was an employe of the company who was allowed to return to work after treatment. A rod mill of the plant was wrecked.

Plant Not To Close

"A report on the street, the plant will be dismantled and wrecked is entirely without foundation" said Mayor Hill after the matter had been discussed. The vote was nine to four for taking the plant. "Business has been held up" continued the Mayor "but the plant has to be paid for and I believe with the passing of this recommendation the air will be cleared and operation of the plant will be on a much cheaper basis." The discussion on the question was similar to other times the matter has been before the council. The counter proposals of the Ontario Shore Gas Company were also discussed at length but the majority were of the opinion, the company had nothing new to offer. The proposals did not state, when any of the money in default would be paid. The amount in default at the present time is $32,000, which includes interest.

Another recommendation: "That a committee of four members of this council be appointed to act with the Chairman of Gas as a management committee to supervise the operation of the gas plant when the plant reverts to the Corporation of the City of Belleville, this committee is to have supervision of the management of the plant or expenditure other than ordinary maintenance service to patrons of the plant shall be submitted to this council for approval with power as granted to any other special committee of council." was unanimously passed and Alderman Jennings was named, as Chairman with Mayor Hill, Aldermen Bateman, Lewis and Armstrong as the members. Alderman Barlow was in the chair in the committee of the whole and there being no other business as the special meeting was for a specific purpose the council then adjourned. The session lasted less than two hours.

KIDNAPPER GETS 25 TO 50 YEARS

Judge Says Kidnapping is Most Horrible of All Crimes

Allentown, Pa., April 29.—(AP)—A twenty-five to fifty year term of years was imposed today upon Richard D. Taylor, Akron Washing Machine salesman, who kidnapped Charles Howard Berry, Jr., and collected $30,000 ransom less than a week ago. It was Taylor's first offense, the crime for which he was convicted guilty.

Judge Johst said: "This is a fearful sentence— fearful for you and fearful for me. You will be an old man when you get out of the penitentiary. Kidnapping is the most horrible of all crimes. I would rather see my son dead than kidnapped."

Young Hoch, who escaped while his abductor was sending a ransom note, testified privately.

ARTISTS PROTEST GALLERY METHOD IN SELECTION

4 Toronto Men Contend Jury is Predominantly of Laymen

MODERNISTIC TREND

Invitations Sent to Artists Says Sir Wyly Grier

Toronto, April 29 (CP) — Four Canadian artists today joined in a protest against what they termed the Modernistic procedure of the National Gallery in the choice of the jury of selection which will assemble the exhibition of Canadian paintings to go to South Africa, Australia and New Zealand.

The four, all members of the Ontario Society of Artists, are Archibald Barnes, Kenneth Forbes, Arthur Hemming and Evan MacDonald. They contend the jury is comprised of five laymen and two artists and these laymen are in favor of modernistic art though not one has successfully practised as a painter. It will mainly be persons who are not qualified to decide what shall or shall not represent the national art of Canada.

Sir Wyly Grier, president of the Royal Canadian Academy and the one practising artist on the jury, said he thought the Gallery Trustees-for-life to enter into the discussion except to point out the invitations were sent from the National Gallery to individual artists. He said those persons "what shall or shall not be" their opinion.

BLAME STUDENTS FOR 'KIDNAPPING'

Disappearance of Actress Seen as Hoax or Abduction

Edinburgh, April 29 (CP)—University of Edinburgh undertook today sought to ascertain whether an attempted "kidnapping" of Norma Shearer, well-known comedienne, was a student prank or something more serious.

Miss Houston was "kidnapped" from the Empire Theatre here last night by a gang of young men believed to be students. She was taken to a car, driven into the police station and the end of the school term so near. The paper has 13 editors.

Ottawa, April 29 (CP)—France has honored one of its sons, a Canadian by birth, Canadian by life, with the conferring of the Cross of the Legion of Honor, Bishop E. C. Vorvoult, apostolic vicar of the Hudson's Bay territory. The insignia of the Legion of Honor was presented at Ottawa University yesterday by Raymond Brageux, French Minister to Canada.

100 CHICKENS STOLEN

Kingston, Ont., April 29 (CP)—Police today were notified 200 chickens were stolen from the farm of Frank Brown near Glenvale during the night. The marauders made a clean sweep of the barnyard.

Runaways Have Swell Time As "City's Guests," They Say

Chief of Police Notes What Entertainment Costs Belleville

EXPENSE TOO GREAT

Belleville is fast becoming a haven for runaway boys in their teens. Annually when the warmer breeze blow and more adventurous youths take to the road in search of romance the world, Belleville seems to be a favorite stopping place with the result that the local police department are too frequently called upon to deal with these truant youngsters and, sometimes 'saucy' youths.

Last week-end two boys aged 13 years old—were found trespassing on C.N.R. property, taken into custody and lodged at the local police station for a period of three days. "During the time we had to look after those boys and see they were safely returned to their Toronto homes, it cost this city nearly $50 for expenses," Chief Ridd explains by the registered objections relative to the cost of providing the meals and board for such runaway miscreants.

"Yesterday two more teen aged boys from Toronto were removed from a C.N.R. freight train in Belleville and placed in the custody of the police. These boys knew all about the escapades of the former two Toronto lads and the swell time they had while confined in the police cells in Belleville. These lads who run away from their homes in search of adventure or romance, like to think of it as a reformatory sentence meted out to a few of them when they return to their homes after trouble.

It begins to look as though these teen aged youths will have to be dealt with in a firmer manner in the future, that is if they continue to run away from home and cause extra police work," added Chief Ridd this morning.

"Aw, we wasn't hurtin' nothin', We only wanted to Belleville and we gettin' on a train to go back home," was the reply the police got this morning at the police station.

NEWS BRIEFS AND ODDITIES

St. Louis, April 29 (CP)—Next time your bridge partner overbids, or discards just because it is on the color, red.

Dr. Herbert Dickens explained it thus to the Missouri Optometric Association:

"The tendency to overbid is exaggerated by the fact red requires greater eye correction to be seen clearly. A handful of red cards cannot be seen nearly so clearly as clubs or spades."

Five Fined For Shooting Wild Ducks Out of Season

Picton, April 30.—(Special)—In a lengthy docket in Police Court today, before Magistrate R. J. Bubar, K.C., of Belleville, a number of cases were disposed of and judgments given. Ralph Phillips, who was allegedly taking fish illegally from waters in Prince Edward County, and who hindered Herb McAbe, fish and game inspector, from seizing the paraphernalia which was being used in the taking of the fish, pleaded guilty, was arraigned on a charge of "hindering an officer of the law in the execution of his duty" and was remanded for sentence for one week. Mr. McAbe, Robert Phillips, also charged with the same offence, had the charge withdrawn and he was bound over to keep the peace.

Shooting ducks out of season brought seven residents of Prince Edward County into court today. Mr. McCabe, the inspector, has been active among the poachers of late and has had considerable success in his efforts to run them to earth. Those who were fined for

CIVIC RECEPTION TENDERED MINERS

Acting Mayor Robbins of Toronto Extends Welcome

Toronto, April 29 (CP)—Tribute to the strong and courageous was paid today as Toronto extended welcoming hands to two Nova Scotia Draegermen who dared the shifting sands and roof of Moose River gold mine in rescuing two of the city's leading citizens. A civic reception was tendered Jack Simpson and George Morrell, rescuers of Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Stadding from the mine pit.

Controller W. D. Robbins, Acting Mayor in the absence through illness of John Sam Mollidge, welcomed the miners before a crowded council chamber, "saving the city" the acting mayor said as Simpson and Morrell were greeted by the throng.

Controller Robbins said he had heard in Nova Scotia "coal mined loses his life for every million tons of coal mined."

"I sincerely hope that this will bring about safety devices which will save that pain and make working conditions in the mines very much better," he said. "We have heard much of Nova Scotia and its production of coal and I hope that the people will use a good deal more of it than has been used in the past and that give more work to the miner as well as keeping the money in Canada."

INTER CITY VISIT MUCH ENJOYED

Picton Kiwanis Club Guests at Luncheon of Local Club

An inter-city visit of Picton Kiwanis Club was made to Belleville Club on Tuesday evening, at the Spencer Hotel, and one of the most enjoyable affairs, the two clubs have had for some time. The principal speaker was Dr. Strobridge, who gave an interesting address on the early life and records of Prince Edward County. Clare Newman, president of the Picton Club occupied the head table with the local president, Dr. Strobridge and there was in charge of the program for the evening.

The community singing was conducted by Harold Seldon, while Phil Biggs was the lucky man among the several fines imposed. Leo B. Biggs presided at the piano. Besides the visitors present from Picton, the Belleville club welcomed back many of the old members, who showed a masterly in forming the club in its early days, and who worked whole-heartedly for its success. Dr. Strobridge was presented by Past President Cliff Harland the handsome gavel given by hearty cheers for their presence.

District Governor to Visit

It was announced by Gordon Bonter, Lieut.-Governor Division Club would likely visit Belleville on May 19th and it was proposed that the Belleville club join with that club. The master will be the guest of Rev. Dr. J. Semple.

Bern a Buddhist

The noted Canadian Scottish was born in Central Japan in 1858, and is therefore 48 years old. His father, a business man of Kobe, once had the position of secretary of the Japanese Government's privy council. Dr. Kagawa's early life was largely one of many changes in his religious friend, says a biographer. He was taken like other children to the Buddhist temples and was versed in the Confucian classics, and was told to be a Samurai warrior, "which" but he had no model and he "longed for a philosophy of love with moral power." At the age of school age while living with his uncle he became acquainted with some missionaries and joined a Bible class, soon accepting Christianity. His first prayer was "Oh God, make me like Christ."

Work Among Poor

Disinheritance at the hands of his uncle followed his refusal to give up his new faith. Befriended by a Dr. Myers he entered college, read widely, attending his fellow-students by the independence and radical character of his thought. After a search for health a mystical experience where by faith he seemed to leap "Across the death-bed" the subject of his first novel, brought him to his feet again. He studied at Kobe seminary, gave himself to preaching in the streets and to the service of the poor in a slum district. He cleaned chimneys or ate out his allowance and shared his money as well as his room with outcasts of every description. By sharing his bed with a leper he contracted trachoma which has left him nearly blind to this day. "Psychology of Poverty" which led the Japanese House of Peers to appropriate large sums for abolition of slums in Japanese cities. He graduated at Princeton University.

He turned to social work. When in Jerusalem in 1926 he had another mystical experience, which led him to organize the "Kingdom of God Movement" an evangelical effort to increase the number of Christians in his country to one million.

He strongly supports the Co-operative Movement through which he believes world peace can be preserved.

KAGAWA VISITS CITY NEXT WEEK

Organizer of "Kingdom of God Movement" to Speak Here

Dr. Toyohiko Kagawa, who has been called one of the ten greatest living Christians and the most outstanding Christian figure of the Orient and one of the outstanding Christian leaders of the entire world will visit Belleville on Wednesday, May 6th, when he will on the afternoon address a meeting for ministers at St. Thomas parish house at three o'clock and in the evening will speak at a meeting in bridge street United Church to which the public is invited.

Dr. Kagawa comes to Belleville under the auspices of the Ontario Ministerial Association. He arrives in Montreal on Friday, May 1st and will spend four days in that city. He will go to Hamilton from Belleville and is to stay in Toronto for some days. During his stay in Belleville Dr. Kagawa will be the guest of Rev. Dr. J. Semple.

502 MEMBERS FOR NEXT SEASON

Reginald Stewart, Toronto Trio, and Soloists and Spirals Artists for 1936-37

Belleville Branch of the Canadian Concert Association completed its third annual membership campaign last night with a total membership of 502 enrolled for the season commencing in 1936-37. The results of the intensive work of the canvassers were very gratifying, stated Miss Leona Riggs today, while calls also as well as trios"; a joint program by Kenneth Sakoz of Toronto, violinist, Irving Green, Canadian tenor of the operatic style and Miss Spivak, violinist, who is concert-master of the Toronto Symphony Orchestra. Kenneth Sakoz has appeared in a number of recitals. He studied abroad.

The choice of artists for the next season is a good one. Outstanding is Reginald Stewart, whose name is familiar word to music lovers. The Toronto trio is famous, as are Spivak and Sakoz and Spivak have attracted much attention in the music world.

POLICE BLOTTER

Activities in and around local police circles proved rather normal during the past few days, no arrests for any serious offence having been made. A total of 17 transients were given a day bed upon which to sleep during the hours preceding 8 o'clock.

One of the transients to come to the police station staggered slightly when he approached the night sergeant's desk. The man was locked up and a charge of drunkenness was intended to be laid against him. This morning, however, police officials deeming it advisable to chase their quarry out of town. The police gave him a ride to Trenton and shake the dust of the city from his heels.

Members of the local detachment of the Motorcycle Patrol in this district report a clean slate in the matter of major motor accidents on the highways.

Sergeant Booth and P. C. Evans answered a hurried call to a James St. residence the last night where a dance had been in progress. Upon the arrival of the officers Mr. Reg Easton, the tenant, complained that two young men, James Storms and Gordon Asselstine, 312 Station St., had appeared at the dance and caused a disturbance, the former, it is alleged striking Easton.

Police were of the opinion that the altercations arose out of previous trouble. The entire trouble will be aired in local police court in the near future.

MRS. JESSIE BOWEN OF FRANKFORD, 94

Remarkably Active And in Continued Good Health

Stirling, April 29 (Special) — Happy birthday; with love; best wishes; and many other sincere phrases were the greetings, which accompanied the dozens of lovely flowers, that arrived all day at the home of Mrs. Jessie Bowen of Frankford, on Thursday last. For it was the birthday of this charming lady, who was upon the threshold of her ninety-fifth year as a happy and devoted citizen of the county of Hastings. All day long visitors from near and far arrived to express their personal congratulations and good wishes to this remarkable lady, who remains one of the most popular old host of friends in all parts of the county.

Celebrating the occasion of her ninety-fourth birthday in a quiet manner at her home in Frankford where she lives with her daughter Margaret, Mrs. Bowen didn't feel a bit tired after receiving guests steadily all day. When a representative of the press called late in the afternoon she was found ready to meet him and stretched forth a hand of welcome, that made him feel very comfortable and at home. We had seen this lovely lady on the occasion of her birthday last year so the formalities of an introduction were unnecessary. "How do you feel"—? was our first question. Well she answered "I feel fine, thank you. I did a little work today is not so bright as last year, but physically I am feeling fine." Mrs. Bowen still possesses an unusually keen memory, and her mind is still read the daily paper. The Ontario Intelligencer is part of the daily fare of Mrs. Bowen, who has taken it for so many years, that I have not the heart to stop without it

Have you any hobby of course? said our smiling hostess and before we left Mrs. Bowen had taken us before us a most unusual tea cup. For around the inside of the cup were hundreds of small checkerette of the friendly atmosphere within this home. Really encouraging under discussion in Toronto and Windsor along with other cities of the province where the struggle to place relief recipients in proper homes is being waged.

Moving in Windsor will be a great task if 500 owners have their way. They have given tenants notice to move out May 1 so persons willing and able to pay higher rents can move in. A group of more than 30 organizations, including chambers has come to the fore as an effort to solve the problem, taking under consideration a program of house building as a public works project.

Building reports from other centres show;

Brantford—Situation is very indefinite in construction work as of May Day moving practically nil. There is need, however, for at least 200 new small houses to overcome overcrowding.

Stratford—Little new building will be done. Building permits to the value of $13,140 have been issued, mostly for repairs.

Renters report a demand for medium-priced houses, the supply not sufficient to meet requirements. It is expected, however, more moving will be done this spring than for several years.

Kitchener—Building values for the first three months total $23,260 compared to $12,500 in 1935. The outlook is not very encouraging. Only work of any account is completion of new residences begun late last year.

L. Gal—There is little hope of reaching last year's figure of $288,-088, largest Gal ever had. There have been inquiries which might indicate some construction work, especially regarding houses in which there is marked scarcity for workingmen's homes and moderate rental dwellings.

Situation in Belleville

"There is a real scarcity now houses for rental in Belleville," said a Belleville real estate operator today. "What I mean is the moderate-priced type of single dwelling. Every day we have inquiries for such type of houses and we can never fully satisfy that demand. There is a steady demand for houses renting from $15 to $25 a month.

Belleville has taken up through the Chamber of Commerce the question of the formation of the Housing Act and there seems a growing interest in the undertaking of construction along this line will be undertaken.

Construction of small houses for moderate-priced rental is being carried on by several Belleville citizens. During the past few years has erected a number of these houses in various parts of the city.

SMALL RENTED HOUSES NEEDED

1931.

Sault-Ste. Marie; another Northern Centre, reports prospects better than for some years. Building permits issued up to the present month total $29,000 as against $29,000 in the same period in 1935.

New City

St. Catharines hopes for an improved construction year. A new large hall and theatre project will be erected at a cost of $150,000. And in Sarnia where operations have been practically at a standstill for several years revival signs are seen in the fact that several new medium priced dwellings for rental purposes has turned house-holders to sloth-ful activity. Building permits to the value of $18,000 have been issued. For March was $10,040, largest for that month since 1931, with the total for the first three months $34,-940, an increase of $10,180 over last year. Sarnia has also the struggle with an expenditure of nearly $100,-000.

Shortage of Houses

In Windsor, Brantford, Sarnia, St. Catharines, Niagara Falls, Guelph and other centres, the great necessity of small moderately priced houses for rental is being felt, especially facing a house shortage when industry engages in full production. Houses built under discussion in Toronto and Windsor along with other cities of the province where the struggle to place relief recipients in proper homes is being waged.

Trenton and District

Police Court

Trenton, April 29 (Special)—A Father and Children Banquet was held in the Hotel Gilbert by the Rotary Club. The Rotary father with the largest family was awarded a prize. The prize-winner was Rotarian Jimmie Holmes with Rotarian George Meade as close runner-up. Rev. Bert Howard was the Albert College, Belleville, was guest speaker. The speaker was introduced by President George Shenkier, who was chairman for the evening. Mr. B. Joyce and Mr. Bert Hubbard, sang a duet prior to the speaker. Robert Smithtin, and not Rotarian H. A. Bowerman tendered a vote of thanks on behalf of the children. During the evening, Sergeant-Major Whibley, R.C.A.F., rendered several vocal selections. Among the guests from Belleville were Mayor Hill, Mr. L. Lewis and Mr. Harold Armstrong.

A very successful card party was held last evening by the Knights of Columbus in their hall. Twenty-five tables of euchre were in play. The convenors for the evening were Messrs. J. F. Holmes, Thomas Whibley, W. Chouinard and F. Taverna. Prizes for euchre were won by Mrs. A. A. Farrar, Mrs. E. McDonald and Miss Mary Moore. The lucky prize was won by Miss Stella Chase. Lunch was served by the ladies.

Police Court

Police brought in Albert Casey and Ernest Tatro of Windsor. They had a 1936 Chevrolet coupe without lights, no permit and no ownership license. They had rented the car to go to a dance and had gone to Brighton. In charge of driving without a license was laid against them and they were allowed to go. They will appear in Windsor.

A local resident was up for non-support. He must pay ten dollars a week in to the court for the support of his family.

Two drivers who were fouled gambling with dice on the governor-general's birthday were fined costs and the Magistrate informed them they could have been fined the thousand.

Aubrey Heller of Toronto, paid fine and costs for reckless driving.

Two Frankford lads were up for theft. After hearing the evidence the Magistrate dismissed the case.

An Eganville resident paid five dollars and costs for speeding.

John J. Cooper, of Detroit, paid fine and costs for driving through the main street at fifty miles an hour.

A Kingston resident paid five and costs for speeding.

Two drivers were brought in on a theft charge and an assault charge, but were guilty only on the assault charge and will be sent to Reform School.

PRESENT BUDGET ON FRIDAY NEXT

Hon. C. A. Dunning Will be Giving Second Budget in House

Ottawa, April 29 (CP)—Parliamentarians who spent all last evening debating an item of $280,000 will begin to talk of hundreds of millions on Friday when Finance Minister Dunning presents his budget. It will be his second May Day budget. Six years ago he submitted his first and last budget on the same date.

The $280,000 item last night was in the special supplementary estimates and is to assist in re-stocking nearby fishermen. Fisheries Minister Michaud explained it would be expended in co-operation with the Provinces to find other callings for men who had once made a living from fishing and, owing to changed conditions, were no longer able to do so.

Objections were promptly registered from both the Atlantic and Pacific coasts. The strongest objection came from Robert Finn, Halifax Liberal. At first Mr. Finn was under the impression the vote would be used to assist fishermen who still pursued their calling. He claimed it was inadequate.

When he learned it was for a different purpose he appealed for a real measure of assistance for fishermen and pointed to the assistance given western grain growers in the way of a wheat board, fixed price, drought relief and rehabilitation as precedents.

T. L. Church (Cons. Toronto-Broadview) obtained an assurance the vote would apply to Great Lakes fishermen. He said he approved as it was an "advanced measure of protection" for fishermen. Liberals had not always believed in protection. It was time, however, the protection which extended to farmers and fishermen was given the industrial workers in cities, who were losing their homes.

The Fisheries Department was under fire from two British Columbia members. On the re-establishment vote A. W. Neill (Cod, Comox-Alberni) claimed the department was slow in answering letters, was impervious to suggestions and pursued a do-nothing policy. He urged expenditure for protection of the fish resources rather than on handouts to fishermen as the best way of assisting the industry.

'Dibbling' is Again in Season Along Banks of the Moira

Dibbling!

It's a word unfamiliar to most, but at night along the waterfront the ancient art of "dibbling" is being engaged in with increasing frequency by anglers among whom the word has spread that eels accumulate have come out of their winter somnolence and are filling their creels.

Flash lights and lanterns gleam and wink like fireflies along the rusty docks and cement wharves as patient fishermen take up their stands, bundled against the early season chill, as eels begin in their nocturnal sport which combines recreation with a little profit.

Patiently they sit, dangling tiny bobble lines with a single fat grub or worms, tempting the meaty pan fish swimming in the dark depths below. Patience is the word. Spasmodic but the patient and the noted hardy adherents of the game have found that ability to sit with legs dangling over the water so early in the season.

So far the catches have been light. The "run" has not commenced. Rising waters of spring freshets offer plenty of sustenance to the hungry grubs without necessity to worm laden hooks, tempting though they may be offered. With the increasing warming of the water the haul's will be heavier and more satisfying, but according to experts of the art, neither will the catch have that distinctive fresh and wintry flavor, gained by feeding on the winter's algae and plankton on which they survive when ice covers the bay. Then, in the depths of winter, are they at their best.

The equipment of the regular night fisherman of the wharf is simple. Only a bamboo pole, a can of worms, although in some cases secret bait prepared by themselves is used. No steel pole is needed here, nor expensive reel and silk line. The cord and gear of the gear would be too great. The steel rod would be too stiff and gives indication of the size of the fish hooked. Just a bamboo pole and heavy cotton line.

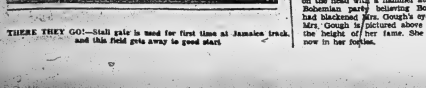
There is an art in "dibbling" as old timers will explain, and it's not just merely a case of hook-and-pull-out. The experienced angler not to struggle in the darkness with a well hooked eel, toughest of fish to release from the barb and sometimes most painful if sharp horns are ignored.

"You bait your hook, yes, and bait it plenty. Lots of worms," explains Joe Castle whose experience he claims is lengthy.

"Like this," he adds, twisting an imaginary couple of worms into a ball of fat, "and you cast a dull invisible hook. "And you cast a dull invisible hook. "And you cast a dull line with a sinker. If you're biting real good, you can file the barb off, but that's not necessary. Catfish are different, they're quicker.

"You kinda feel them tug at the line. Well, don't pull up then. Just wait for a little until they take a good hold. You gotta know how. When you think that he has it in his mouth, kinda ease the line up to the top of the water before he gets a chance to swallow the hook or really get hooked. Nine times out of ten he'll hang on like a bulldog right while you pull him up. When he hits shore he'll let go and then you don't have any trouble with him. Just throw your line back in and wait for another one.

"Mudcats are the tastiest fish there are," claims the veteran, "but they're cooked right."



Trout fishermen, trollers from boats and casters for wary bass may smile derisively at "dibbling." They may glory in bewildering reels, split cane rods, and dollar lines, but "dibblers" are satisfied, as nightly they demonstrate along the waterfront.

ANN'S HAT—Ann Sothern, one of Hollywood's queens, looks a bit piqued at having to display her new hat. In case you're interested in the chapeau, it is shallow of crown and made of creamy straw in "scoop" style. Its sole trimming is a great cluster of multicolored blossoms atop the charming bonnet.

SISTER SAVED HER—Little Dorothy Lawrence (above) slipped and fell while fifteen feet above bankment and into three feet of water near her home in Berkeley, Cal. Her sister, June, 10 years old, heard her screams, June slid down the bank and held Dorothy's head out of the water until help arrived.

IN SPOTLIGHT AGAIN — Once a beauty of international renown, Sylvia Gough of London has returned to prominence as chief witness for the crown in its murder case against Douglas Burton, 30, book reviewer. Burton is charged with the murder of Arthur Rose, 21, friend of Mrs. Gough. It is charged that Burton hit Rose on the head with a hammer at a Bohemian party following Rose had blackened Mrs. Gough's eye. Mrs. Gough is pictured above at the height of her fame. She is now in her forties.

About Bachelor Buttons

by

Dean Douglas

Kitty was making very good progress toward success in business and felt that all was well, except for one fact that stared her continuously in the face.

Kitty had fallen desperately in love with a man whom she had met once and not yet whose smiling eyes haunted even her sleeping dreams.

His was the face that appeared in all the advertisements for Bachelor's Buttons, the patent button that Kitty had put on the market and was selling in huge quantities.

The young man pictured on her buttons was so happy, so completely in harmony with the whole world merely because on his shirts, his pyjamas, his trousers and his coats there were those wonderful little buttons that put "all people in a good humored mood" because they were there to stay.

Kitty had gazed for hours at the handsome man with the golden mustache and heavy waving hair and the dazzling trimmed Van Dyke beard and thought she had never seen anyone so disinterestedly good looking.

The firm who had got up the advertising pages for Bachelor's buttons had certainly been in luck when they found the model for their pictures.

Kitty had written straight back to the town in the Middle West and secured the sole agency for the district for the Eastern territory.

And all during the months following, when her sales, begun in a small way, had arrived at most flattering heights, Kitty had kept right on advertising the young man on the posters.

The owners of the patent were glad people to deal with and had more than once complimented Kitty on the enormous sales her office was effecting.

All over her office were framed the various advertisements in which Mr. Buttons, as Kitty called him for want of knowing his real name, was postured. She felt sometimes that all was due to the way of success and the making of money if she was to go lovelorn all the days of her life.

She even went so fit as to prowl about some of the advertising offices with a view of picking up information as to where and how models were obtained and whether or not they were usually of the professional type.

Then one bright and shining morning Kitty had a long letter from the firm in the West who manufactured the buttons.

"Would Miss Woodrow be likely to come out and say a visit to the firm? We feel that we should like to make the acquaintance in a more personal way," of our Eastern representative and will gladly pay all expenses."

Kitty sat down and pondered over the letter. Certainly she would like a trip out through the West, and since she was feeling a bit jagged, she wrote back saying she would accept and would take great pleasure in meeting the firm.

When Kitty stepped off the train at Kankakon in her well-cut coat-suit and hose that are requisites to matched her soft hair and threw into strong relief the bright blue of her eyes, she smiled at the big chap who seemed waiting for her and her baggage.

"You are Miss Woodrow," he queried and Kitty realized that the young man meeting her had not expected—well—perhaps he had been looking for a more business-like person. "I'm John Vickers."

Kitty then smiled and held out her hand. So many letters had passed between these two that somehow the getting acquainted in person was not going to be difficult.

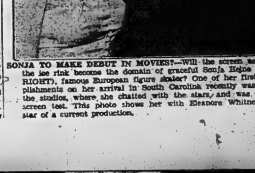
And much to her own disgust she realized that for the first time in two years her heart had leaped at the sight of a man. That urged had reserved all its leaps and bounds for the young man on the button advertisements. She felt truly fickle.

"You know," said Mr. Vickers, confidentially, "you were really the means of putting our firm on the map at all. We were just a little one-horse concern, trying to find the button my dad patented, when your letter came along. It's been wonderful the way you've made a go of it. I'm taking you straight to our house if you don't mind — my mother is wanting acutely to entertain you."

"I am more than charmed," laughed Kitty, and when Mr. Vickers laughed and she cast a keen glance at him she knew the whole story.

Young Vickers and Mr. Buttons were one and the same person.

Kitty's face must have reflected much of her inward elation for young Vickers almost gasped when he looked down into her eyes.



"I say, I do believe you're as glad to meet us as we are you," he remarked frankly.

"As a matter of fact — perhaps I am more so. Even with that quaint little Van Dyke beard and mustache — I should like to have met you."

Vickers laughed loud and long and very boyishly and happily.

"We didn't even have the price for a regular model—at that time —so they used me and I certainly felt silly about it all."

Kitty smiled softly up at him. "You needn't have," she said, and knew now that all was really well.

TELEVISION STILL NOT NEAR

An outdoor scene was broadcast the other day near New York and the television test was a success. Research engineers put on a "fire" at Camden, New Jersey, and the machine clicked and the sound was recorded. Television spectators a mile away saw the "fire". In a greenish-hued picture, five by seven inches on top of the radio set, they saw the firemen fight the blaze on the top of the roof one hundred feet away from the electric eye. Passing cars on the street and pedestrians in their haste were caught by the iconoscope.

The demonstration was a prelude to tests to be made in June in New York, this field survey to cost one million dollars.

But one of the experts says it is not certain when the television will reach the home. It is at least eighteen months away, it is safe to say, he remarked. Television today is the plaything of the research engineers but this demonstration proved that they were ready to take it from the laboratory to the great outdoors under a bright April sun.

LOWER RAILWAY RATES

Railways are reducing the fares for passengers on their lines about thirteen per cent. to bring them back to pre-war prices.

But the railways have a different situation from what they had in 1914, a new transportation factor has been evolved to handle the movement of people, namely the motorcoach, millions of individual driving the making of time connections when wanted, the fact that a car will accommodate not one but as many as five passengers or more—all things which have the motorcoach with the bus, a formidable rival with the railway coach. But the reduction in rates will no doubt tend to stimulate rail traffic, for some time past believe that the rates which have prevailed for years have been too high. Offsetting this has been the advantage of the week-end rate as well as the occasional excursion at a low rate. Will evan lower rates ultimately come than the general rate reduced as of June 1st? This is a question the public will ponder over.

STRIVING TO BE ACTIVE

Prof. Herman Waltier is retiring from McGill to begin a more intensive life at the age of 73 than he ever led before. He will travel Europe and America, grow apples and keep bees at his country home, deliver occasional lectures at McGill and begin to learn to speak Spanish. He was modern languages head at McGill.

Happy man who is going to make life interesting for himself! His is not the usual kind of retirement which consists in thinking of the end of life and virtually rusting out. Some men when they depart from their jobs are left stunned by poverty—no means of enjoyment, for most of them cannot carry on their old jobs in their later days. They have no hobbies and life becomes monotonous. Fortunately for the not of that kind, he has a burning zeal yet for those things which are yet unaccomplished.

THE FAST DRIVER

The motorist who is a speeder is a potential victim or cause of injury to others. He may consider he is a safe driver, but that is true only as far as the way is clear. The appearance of another car in his path puts the fast driver into a dilemma and the result is probable death to some one.

It is a fact that does not require to be proven that when cars meet, if they are going fast, the damage is going to be much more than if they were moving at moderate rates of speed.

So the traffic police are justified in picking up the speeding driver because in the emergency or the unforeseen moment he may be faced with a situation which can result only in accident by reason of his rate of speed.

More rigorous enforcement of the laws is to be followed not only in Quebec but in Ontario, to keep down the speedy driver who is a constant menace wherever he is.

It is likely there will be more driving on the highways and country roads this year than for some years and unless great care is used the accident toll is almost certain to rise. That is not a happy thought for sane drivers who wish to use the highways to which they have a right; that thought is distressing that through some foolish reckless drivers, the sane drivers and their parties may be hurtled into eternity in the flutter of an eye.

THE ENGLISHMAN

There's a land that bears a world-known name,
Though it is but a little spot;
Hey 'tis first on the scroll of fame,
And who shall aver it is not?
Of the deathless ones who shine and live
In arms, in art, in song,
The brightest the whole wide world can give
To that little land belong.
'Tis the star of earth, deny it who can,
The island home of an Englishman.

There's a flag that waves o'er every sea,
No matter when or where;
And to treat that flag as aught but free
Is more than the strongest dare.
For the lion spirits that tread the deck
Have carried the palm of the brave;
And that flag may sink with a shot-torn wreck,
But never float over a slave.
Its honor is stainless, deny it who can
And this the flag of an Englishman.

There's a heart that leaps with burning glow
The wronged and the weak to defend;
And strikes as soon for a trampled foe
As it does for a soul-bound friend.
It nurtures a deep and honest love,
The passions of faith and pride,
And yearns with the fondness of a dove
For the light of its own fireside.
'Tis a rich rough gem, deny it who can
And this is the heart of an Englishman.

The Briton may traverse the pole or the zone,
And boldly claim his right;
For he calls such a vast domain his own
That the sun never sets on his might.
Let the haughty stranger think to tread
The place of his home and birth,
And a flush will mount from cheek to brow
While he tells his native earth,
For a glorious charter, clergy it who can,
Is breathed in the words, "I'm an Englishman."

—Eliza Cook.

ETHIOPIA PROTESTS AGAINST THE USE OF POISON GAS BY THE ITALIANS. Poison gas is used to exterminate destructive insects, locusts and other pubic enemies, which is as it should be, but when it is dropped from the clouds to annihilate human beings that is quite another thing. The amazing spectacle of the Christian nations of the world being unable to come to an agreement not to use poison gas in warfare or permit any nation, Christian or otherwise to use it, is before the world today as an almost unbelievable fact. Not one time in the world's history there was a sort of glory and honor in war but poison gas, bombing planes and cannon which can throw a projectile seventy miles to crash in a church and kill worshippers—war on hospitals and hospital ships —modern war is worse than the General Sherman said it was—Hell. Let's take a leaf from the wisdom of the Chinese who, it is said, will only fight on fine days. When it rains and armies retire into the rain-proofs and wait for the sun to shine again before resuming hostilities. Truly interesting and more interesting if true.

MODERN AILMENTS ARE VARIED and have assorted names, and the most notable of human ailments to cause death, nowadays according to the press, are affections of the heart. Modern noise has been added to the enemies of health and is said to cause nervous disorders of a serious nature. Right Hon. Lord Horder, who is head of the Anti-Noise League of London, England, has arrived in New York City and will deliver a series of lectures in the United States and Canada. He is the guest of the League for Less Noise of New York City Lord Horder gave a radio talk Sunday upon the work of these associations and the necessity therefore. The aim of all should be to promote a happier and more efficient mode of living, he said. Loud, discordant, jangling noises cause nervous disorders and militate against a strong, healthy virile citizenry. Lord Horder is the King's physician and famed for his medical and surgical skill and knowledge. He told of the benefits he had to take ordinary peaceful nights since it was possible to silence the horns of the motor vehicles which formerly made night hideous. Since the campaign started in England against unnecessary sounding of horns accidents have been fewer, for the man who hitherto had been "travelling on his horn" suddenly found that he had to take ordinary precautions instead of depanding upon his motor horn to keep a path cleared for him.

REPORTER RESCUES KIDNAPPED GIRL—Slowly strangling to death in a closet where she had been taken by her kidnappers in an abandoned Virginia farmhouse near Leesburg, Hilda Utterback, 19, is shown, TOP, as Reporter Wire Finney saw her first aid, after the night of terror. HARRY ANDERSON FORMER EDITOR IN TORONTO DIES

Managing Editor of Globe For 10 Years Prior to Resignation

ACTIVE IN REFORM

Lately Appointed on Commission to Probe Penitentiaries Conditions

Toronto, April 29—(CP)— Harry W. Anderson, former managing editor of the Toronto Globe and member of the Royal Commission to investigate Canadian penitentiaries conditions, died in hospital here early today.

The 60-year-old newspaperman, who resigned from the Globe in January was operated on last Tuesday. He suffered definite improvement for three days but a heart condition complicated his illness and led to his death. Funeral arrangements have not been completed.

Harry W. Anderson was managing editor of the Toronto Globe for 10 years during which period he maintained the great traditions of that newspaper. But he was a star reporter rather than a great publicist. He was tremendously interested in the human side of politics, knew intimately and understood implicitly by the greatest Canadian statesmen of his period. He had his never could be interested in tariffs or economics or freight rates.

He carried with him his fellowmen than about dull things like customs duties and the rest of the national debt. He was zealous for the reform of Canadian penitentiaries and the liberal Government which then ruled by Sir John Willison and owned by Sir Joseph Pla-telle. He enjoyed the confidence of Sir William Ralph Meredith and Sir James Whitney, Ontario Conservative leaders of the period.

Fund of French Canadian

Anderson went to Ottawa for the Globe in 1911—the reciprocity session—and soon became a favorite of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Ernest Lapointe. Anderson was genuinely fond of the French-Canadians.

Mr. Anderson covered many important assignments for the Globe in his day. He was playing cards in the parliamentary press gallery early one morning, when a bulletin arrived, that the Empress of Ireland, crack liner of the Canadian Pacific Railway, had been rammed by a collier in the St. Lawrence near Rimouski.

Many Toronto Salvationists and others were drowned in the disaster. Anderson ran to the railway station and caught the last car of the Quebec-bound train as it steamed out of the depot at Ottawa. His graphic stories of the disaster, sent to the Globe and cabled to the New York Sun, brought him double space rates, and a $100 bonus and the offer of a high position on the New York paper.

Anderson also covered the New York end of the Titanic disaster when the great liner struck an iceberg on her maiden voyage across the Atlantic and hundreds of her passengers and crew perished as the ship went down.

He reported the famous "Bull Moose" Convention of former President Theodore Roosevelt when the Congress at Washington and the memorable speeches of President Woodrow Wilson, when the United States declared war on Germany.

Held Many Positions

Promoted successively to the posts or city editor, editorial writer, assistant managing editor, and on the resignation of T. Stewart Lyon in 1926, to that of managing editor, he lost none of the boy's delight in the big newspaper game, a loyalty to his paper and his staff and a wide and unfailing human sympathy were his outstanding characteristics.

No one who had worked with him in the nights when a big story, breaking late brought the whole cast of his office to take command. The giant built at the press desk, the blue shirt soaked with sweat, the soft voice, that was never raised giving directions, the blue eye aflame with the light of battle Harry Anderson was happy then and every member of the staff knew it.

In his ten years in the editorial chair of the Globe, Mr. Anderson shaped the paper's policy as nearly as he could to his own generous sympathy with victims of injustice. No good cause lacked powerful support, no underdog that needed a defender failed to get an instant and eager champion in the Globe's office.

To the early years of his editorship belonged the Globe's defence of Sir Adam Beck against opponents in both political households to halt life's works the Ontario Hydro-Electric System.

For Penitentiary Reform

Harry Anderson waged his battle for penitentiary reform in the faith that had directed his life; a faith that mercy should hamper justice for the poor as well as for the rich without any irreparable harm to justice. He resigned from the Globe in January last. His appointment, announced February 27, to the Royal Commission to investigate penitentiaries and recommend reforms was generally commended as a fitting recognition of his fight for reform. He had absorbed much information on the problems requiring solution.

Mr. Anderson was always a supporter of co-operative news gathering in Canada and from 1920 sat on the Board of Directors of The Canadian Press, where his colleagues valued his counsel and intimate knowledge of news in all its ramifications.

An ardent golfer, he was a member of the West Toronto Golf Club.

Unmarried, he lived in Toronto with his two sisters, Annie D. and Ellen M. Anderson. He was a Presbyterian.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food just decays in the bowels. It poisons your entire system and you feel sour, sunk and sullen. Nothing you eat can digest right. Gas bloats your stomach. You get constipated. You need the bile flush the body, and you feel and look like the world had soured.
A mere bowel movement doesn't always get rid of the constipation. You need to get the liver to pour the bile. Carter's Little Liver Pills are used by millions to relieve constipation, to get the liver to pour bile. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. Insist on them. Refuse anything else. 89

Do You Know That
Savage Razorback Hogs Contribute Their Bristles to Our Tooth Brushes?
The rugged life of the fierce wild boar, roaming the woods and fighting Asia and Northeast Europe, causes its bristles to grow long, thick and coarse. Ideal for tooth brushes. Also, turtle soup, and peanuts, the lot it can live for 500 years, raises about, harvest them to sell in stores.
Skilled hand laborers scrub the bristles clean and select a stout washboard. Then they are sterilized until almost tasteless, and the tips are trimmed off to the proper length for tooth brushes.
The whole process of manufacturing tooth brushes is so precious that yes, the utilization of the handle, shape and texture you desire.

Personals

Mr. J. V. Jenkins, Miss Marjorie Jenkins and Miss Janet D'Heath have returned to the city after spending the winter months at Miami Beach, Florida.

Mr. and Mrs. George N. Druce and Miss Jim Hudson have returned to Kingston after attending the funeral of the late Mrs. Joseph Lutton.

A pleasant incident took place at the C.N.R. Agency Tea Room when Mr. A. Jones, Locomotive Superintendent on behalf of his fellow-workers and office staff, presented Mr. C. R. Hickin with a beautiful leather Gladstone bag and in a few well-chosen words wished him long years of happiness after twenty-two years of faithful service. The recipient, who was taken by surprise, made a suitable reply.

Mrs. N. D. Finkle, 207 Foster Avenue, was hostess last evening to members of the Catholic Women's League Study Club. About twenty were present and spent an enjoyable and profitable evening. Rev. C. S. Walker was the speaker at the meeting and gave an interesting talk on the ancient origin of altar appointments of the Church. Miss Kathryn Gallagher gave a paper on the activities of the Toronto Newman Club "Guild." The appreciation of the members was expressed by the president, Mrs. A. B. Collins and the Study Club convener, Mrs. F. Fitzpatrick. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of the meeting.

Mrs. Thos. Holland, president of the local committee, and Miss Bessie Soutar, nurse-in-charge, attended the annual meeting in Ottawa this week of the Victorian Order of Nurses for Canada.

Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Roberson have returned to the city from London where they have been visiting their son.

Mr. George A. Reid returned to the city last evening after a very pleasant holiday in Rochester.

An enjoyable miscellaneous shower was held last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Talon, 19 Bleecker Street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gibson. The bride and groom received many lovely gifts. The evening was spent in games and dancing and delicious refreshments were served.

"Golden Jubilee" Dance a Success

In Johnstone's Academy last evening Camp Rob Roy, Sons of Scotland, entertained to a very successful Golden Jubilee dance at which a large number of guests enjoyed the splendid hospitality of the organization. The Grand March was played by the Pipers, Pipe Major Albert Johnstone, J. Ingram, W. Logan and R. Brown-ing, and the Grand March was led by Chief R. White and Mrs. White. Music for the dance was supplied by Tommy Mason and his Orchestra and the interesting program included many novel prize-winning events. The prizes were distributed as follows: Lucky Draw, Mrs. Bruce Brunner; Lucky Plate, Edda Grimson; Spot Dance, Gladis Cogle, and Jack Lawson; Balloon Dance, Mrs. P. Tiller and Miss Audrey Reid. During the evening much merriment was caused by the search for the identity of the mysterious Annie Laurie and Rob Roy. The former prize was won by Mrs. W. J. Pollveil and the latter by Clarence Downey. Dainty refreshments were served by the lady members of the Camp after which dancing continued.

ALMOST CRIPPLED with KIDNEY TROUBLE

Also sleeplessness, constipation, sour stomach, nervousness and dizzy headaches.

FRUIT-A-TIVES

brought relief in short time.

Says Mrs. A. Aubry, Montreal,—"I was troubled for years with liver complaint and dizzy headaches. I was constipated and almost crippled with kidney trouble. After taking Fruit-a-tives for a very short time my health greatly improved. I highly recommend Fruit-a-tives to anyone suffering as I did." Fruit-a-tives are the discovery of a famous Canadian doctor. They contain extracts of fruit and herbs. They cleanse all the elimination organs and their toxic effects help bring new energy.

Advice to the Lovelorn
By Beatrice Fairfax

In one day, recently, eight junior high school girls were missing from the city's homes. Distracted parents looked for them in every place they were likely to be found, and when the evening paper hit the streets the girls were reported to the police. This is always a painful measure, as people have a way of remembering that the girl who ran away from home and the police had to find her.

Acting fixer explains a good many of these disappearances. The warm weather is conducive to lastness—a girl is back in her school marks; she sees that she isn't going to make the next grade. Her white clothes are getting shabby, and there is no spring finery in sight. Her parents are too strict; they won't let the boy she likes come to the house. She never has any pocket money to go to the movies like the rest of the bunch. And sometimes there is an unsympathetic stepmother or stepfather. Or sometimes the girl has a book relating the all-conquering romantic life and adventurous days a runaway girl—and she imagines she fails will be equally kind to her.

Not often is tragic viciousness at the bottom of the wild impulse to rush away from safe boredom to what is as likely as not a terrible misery in absolute calamity.

Captain Rhoda Milliken of the Women's Bureau, which investigates such cases in Washington, says that he's an indefinite reason for leaving home in almost every instance. And parents sometimes when the time comes for these girls to cut the leash which binds them to the parental roar, usually they promptly coax other girl to go along too. Back of it is, of course, mothers and

Good Manners
By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Veils

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I've always understood that hat veils were worn three inches from the face after six o'clock in the evening. At the theatre the other night I noticed all of the most fashionably dressed women had their veils down, and was much surprised. Which is correct, or is there any set rule?

Lelia

All the rules that we used to have about the wearing of veils concerning the appropriate time of day and occasion, seem to have been discarded this season who veils are in such high fashion. Now veils are worn on the edge of the hats or just above or below the eyes or tied on the side or back of a hat at anytime of day or evening, according as the wearer wishes. Veils are, on morning hats, on afternoon hats and evening hats, and attractiveness determines their appropriateness . . . . . not "set rules".

Church Christening

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I are to be godfather and god-mother at a church christening. Will you please give me some information regarding the proper things to do, as to who should stand where, and to the altar, and so forth. We are Protestants.

Ida

When the christening party arrives at the church, the guests take their places in the pews that are nearest the font. When the clergyman receives the baby's coat and cap are removed, and he or she is taken by the god-mother to the font. The god-mother, with the baby in her arms, then stands directly before the clergyman. When the clergyman comes to the name-part of the ceremony, it is the god-mother who pronounces the name or the child and she should pronounce it clearly and distinctly. During the christening ceremony the father godparents or godparents should stand near the parents and the god-mother who is holding the baby.

After the ceremony at church, relatives and the godparents and other friends usually are invited to return to the home of the parents where luncheon or tea is served. Godparents always give a christening gift to baby.

Betrothal Announcement

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1.—I expect to be married during the summer. I have had my engagement ring for over a year. They was no public announcement of my engagement, due to the fact that the position that I hold would not permit it. Recently I have handed in my resignation; as the general public will know, I suppose some one else will fill my position. What I would like to know is, should my parents, since all my friends know of our engagement, have an announcement of my approaching marriage put in the daily papers, or should that be a public announcement announcement? How soon should this be done. If it is done, and how should it be worded? I think there should be some sort of an announcement as my position is a public one and many questions will be asked concerning my resignation. If this is not according to good etiquette, please tell me so.

2.—Should the immediate members of the bride's or bridegroom's family give the bride a shower?

L.

1.—Since all your relatives and friends know of your engagement, and apparently have known for over a year, and since they are the ones most concerned with such an announcement, it does seem thoroughly unnecessary to send an announcement to the newspapers. Your letter of resignation undoubtedly stated the reason for your resigning, and so that takes care of your business associates knowing of your engagement. Your mother and father, might, if you wish have a party in honor of you and your fiance . . . . . not an engagement announcement party.

2.—It is not considered good form or good taste for close relatives of the bride-to-be or of the groom-to-be to plan showers for the prospective bride.

(Mrs. Beeckman will be glad to answer questions on Good Manners submitted by readers.)

TEA—THE EYE-OPENER

We all have known, at one time or another, what it is to long for a little "shut-eye". In the middle of a dull party—or play—in most cases when it is quite out of the question to shut an eye. That is why the term "shut-eye" holds or has held at times, something of glamour for us.

But at the other end, most of us can easily manage to get an effective eye-opener. We recall days long past, when we took a full tumbler of youth we could lean back and drain it down. Alas—alack! But there's life in the old horse yet! Try a cup of tea. If you can have it brought to your bedside—well you're in clover. But if you're just "on" you can get up and make it yourself. Drink it hot and in a few minutes you'll be wide-eyed and ready for another day.

Of course it is nice to have a cape of sumptuous silver fox fur, but a nice substitute is a cape made entirely of the tails of silver foxes, at about one-tenth or the price of the more luxurious garment.

Come Summer and we'll be dressing in white piqué. A new evening ensemble is of white piqué, done on tailored lines. It consists of a dress with waistline jacket having long, full sleeves, gathered at the wrist by a tiny ball edge trims the jacket and the bottom of the skirt, and a bunch of flowers in white, yellow and light green are posed at the neckline of the jacket.

Competition For Small Child

Unequal Struggle Can Be Demoralizing For Him, Asserts Writer

By LISA GRENELLE

All night long Freddie dreamed that he was five years old instead of just three and a half—as big and as strong as Brother Alfred.

He would jump and struggle in his sleep to reach, to clinch, to wrap, as high as Alfred.

And all day long he trailed Alfred, aped his every motion, trumped and scorched and bowled himself into exhaustion and hysterics in a futile effort to be five years old instead of just three and a half.

The tragedy was that only unimportant, ignorant people like mother and father could know that it was impossible, that you can't ignore years like that. Both Alfred and Freddie thought you could; thought that a three-year-old, if he tried hard enough and had the courage, could keep up with a five-year-old.

So Alfred scorned Freddie for his failure, and Freddie scorned himself and tried again, only to fail again.

Health Suffered

And slowly the health and the happiness of Freddie began to suffer under the strain. It wasn't as cunning, even in watch, as it had been—at first. Freddie was losing weight and appetite. He stumbled around after Alfred with a sore and a white face, no more smiles. His little day drenched and tense against his still, bony sides, and no one was his friend. He couldn't wait to take up his lady bug or a bug or a fly. He couldn't wait to finish his cereal or even his dessert. Pleasure meant nothing to Freddie anymore neither did love, nor food, nor drink—only being five years old instead of three and a half.

Competition is healthy for a child after seven, if it is not too equal. Unequal competition, where the odds are so piled against him is bad for anyone. And competition of any kind is too stimulating for a child under five. He will try as hard as a child for him without it, if he is normal.

The strain of the futile struggle, the unbroken line of defeat in Freddie's struggle with Alfred, was breeding his spirit, undermining his health, destroying his nervous system, his peace of mind and his sense of security. It was undermining his belief in himself.

How Struggle Ended

Yet, how could this unfair and destructive struggle be ended?

The children might be separated. One of them might even be sent away on a visit.

But would that solve Freddie's problem? Even if he were to forget his ambition, become absorbed in some other interest, he still would remain doomed to keep on subconscious there would remain a defeat which had never been compensated for.

But Freddie's folk were wise folk. They sent Freddie to a nursery school in which the children were mostly somewhat younger, and almost all less advanced than Freddie.

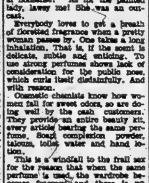
Here, through easy daily victories, the long line of defeats suffered under the reign of Alfred were compensated for. Freddie's confidence revived. He reasoned, he shall, he smiled; both mother and the kindly bear were reinstated in his affections. Once more Freddie found time for pleasure, for loving, eating, sleeping.

Perfume Should Be Delicate and Enticing

FAY PATTERSON

Her perfume is delicate, subtle and enticing.

(By Helen Follett)



Difficult it is to believe but there was a time when perfume was considered vulgar. Placing lavender beds among canisters and handkerchiefs was about as far as the perfect lady dared to go. Puritanical nonsense. As for the painted lady, lawsy me! She was an outcast.

Everybody loves to get a breath of foretold fragrance when a pretty woman passes by. One takes a long inhalation. That is, if the scent is delicate, subtle and enticing. To use strong perfumes shows lack of consideration for the public nose, which curls itself distastefully. And with reason.

Cosmetic chemists know how women fall for sweet odors, so are doing well by the cash customer. They provide an entire beauty kit, every article bearing the same perfume. Sleight complexion powder, talcum, toilet water and hand lotion.

This is a windfall to the frail sex for the reason that when the same perfume is used, the wardrobe becomes fragrant—and there is no loss. Find out what makes an appeal to your fastidious nose and stick to it.

Hair tonics are not to be despised. We've been off of them pretty much

AMNESIA VICTIM—Mystery still shrouds the strange disappearance and discovery of little Marilyn Miller, 10 years old (above) of Canton, Mass. Missing eight hours she was found near her home dazed, and with her legs scratched and bruised, in a small storage house which had been thoroughly searched only a short time before.

since the finger . . . . . were become a beauty institution. That's too bad. They contain astringents that close the scalp surface and discourage the inroads of bacteria. . . . . that are responsible for dandruff and other disorders.

Good comes from the friction necessary for their application. Veins and capillaries are stimulated, rendering on the job wake up and go about their business of bringing nourishment to the hair roots. The flesh glows and tingles, showing that repair work is going on.

Into the water splash smart bathing suits as new models are packing nicely in overnight cruise trunks. We liked one of rear silk printed in leopard-spot pattern. It has a halter neckline and loose fitting trunks. The suit is backless.

Precious Beauty is manifest in every line of a frock of mauve-gray marquisette with draped bodice ending in a chou under the chin. Sleeves are long, there is short skirt fulness and there are mauve tulips at the waistline.

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Biggar and Crawford Inc. Financial Service.

Ford of Canada has sold down to a new low since 1934. While part of the decline can be attributed to the generally weaker tone, the failure of the directors to take any dividend action has been one of the main contributory factors. At the annual meeting this week, Wallace R. Campbell, President, explained the reason for such failure. Uncertainly over the tariff prior to the bringing down of the Budget by the Finance Minister, with the heavy taxation is another important item. Ford of Canada last year earned $1.17 share as against $1.13 the previous year, despite the fact that unit sales increased from 44,-917 to 79,841. From the President's remarks, however, it would seem as if shareholders can expect dividend should no radical tariff changes be announced in the forthcoming Budget.

Advices from New York are to the effect that excellent buying has made its appearance on the present downside movement. Investors who were fortunate to get out at or close to the top are now coming back into the market.

Ford of Canada.

Ford of Canada "A" shares have not acted impressively on the down turn for the past month. The Street has known for some time that some one was selling the stock when the shares were hovering around 27. There is no doubt that those around Ford of Canada just now are thinking of the Budget within the next ten days. The report of the Tariff Commission may bring cheer to this company and to the shareholders.

The financial statement of Ford of Canada for the year 1935 was generally regarded as a conservative document and the remarks of the President at the annual meeting of shareholders held on Monday afternoon in which the whole question of dividend will be discussed at once the Budget has been brought down.

Forwelm Bank Accounts

Many people forget that they have money. Some thrifty persons have deposited large sums in chartered banks and either forget about it or die without informing their heirs of its whereabouts. Just take note of what happens. The bank returns laid before Parliament last February revealed that the sum of $1,019,619 was being absolutely guarded, pending recovery by owners. The new issue of Mac-Lean's Magazine carries the names of the individuals who are at fault in this connection.

Produce Prices on Montreal Market

Montreal, April 28.—Butter prices were again slightly easier on the Montreal Produce Exchange today. The egg market was steady to firmer, with prices unchanged. Receipts of unchanged. Receipts for the day were reported at the Board of Trade at 8,263 cases of eggs, 1,000 lbs. of butter and 200 boxes of cheese.

Butter prices ranged from 1-2c to 2c per lb. per lb. For No. 1 quality or 1 to 1, 1-4c.

The egg market, we graded shipments arriving in good shape, 1-4c to 1-2c per dozen firm on Atlantic, 20c for A-medium, 18-19c for B, and 17-18c for C.

Livestock

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—Good cattle drew keen competition here today as trade on the Toronto Live-stock Exchange got under way with a large number of calves weak. Sheep and lambs brought easier prices while hogs were steady to firm.

Cattle trade was fairly active with buyers bidding strongly on a limited number of top beef.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Livestock Branch were: cattle 770; calves, 490; hogs, 800; sheep and lambs, 300.

Medium to good steers and heifers sold from $4.50 to $5.50 on the cattle mart. Weighty steers ranged from $4.75 to $5.25 and choice handy steers and heifers brought $5.50. Good cows sold steady at $3.00 to $3.50.

Good and choice calves were in limited supply and sold steadily. Medium grades were not moving. The bull division was unsettled with indications of lower prices.

Yesterday hogs included unchanged and steady at $9.50 fed and watered, $9.25 to $9.50 off trucks and $8.75 off cars.

Sheep and lambs were offered but a few good spring lambs were sold at $10.25. Heavy lambs were lower at $9.00 to $9.50 and sheep were steady at $4.00 to $4.50 downwards to $1.50.

AGED MAN PRETTY VICTIM

Toronto, April 28 (CP)—Identification of a man's body in the morgue here by a freight train at the foot of Dufferin Street yesterday was still unknown in mid-afternoon today. The man's body bore a number of bruises and other injuries, spectacle case appeared the name and address of a man now living in Hamilton. He had told Hamilton friends he was "going away" but an inquest will be held.

Unknown Forced to Limit To Gain Win Over Andy Moen In Good All Round Card

First And Last Fall to Masked One in Torrid Scrap.

DUNLOP DISQUALIFIED

Steve Znoski Shows Plenty of Class While Bout Lasted

In one of the most thrilling bouts in years "The Unknown" wrestler, a massive bulk of humanity dipping the scales at 223 pounds, was forced to the limit by Andy Moen, the 231-pound Norwegian, in the main bout at last night's professional wrestling bout staged by Matchmaker Jack Corcoran, of Toronto, at the Belleville Arena. A comparatively slim crowd took in the three-bout show, but all left the Arena high in praise of the entire card, the two semi-finals, Dunlop, the self-styled villain of the mat from Toronto, reverted to foul tactics and was disqualified in his bout with Steve Znoski, the Polish Thunderbolt in the semi-final scrap, after Referee Wells had repeatedly warned Dunlop regarding shady fighting tactics. In the opening bout Buffalo Joe, better known as Chief Lynx, got even over his slower opponent, Antoine Parkin of France.

The main bout proved a thrilling battle from the out-set. The heavier "masked man" moved in on the Unknown wrestler, used his excess weight to wear the more agile Andy Moen down and finally win, but not until the Norwegian, by the use of the fighting spirit and the admiration of the 400 odd customers, who were well rewarded for their attendance. The Masked one opened purely on the offensive and though the fact Moen tried in vain to unmask him, was the first fall with a Chinese back-breaker hold, when he forced Moen to concede the fall or suffer more severe punishment. In a bold, that could not be broken.

Moen, Opens Aboard

The Unknown opened the second round by grasping the man's eyes, which aroused the anger of the Norwegian and with the result, that he clinched 'aboard the Masked gent and administered many punishing holds. Moen proved the aggressor in the middle stages, and in a shifting flurry of fighting tackles off the ropes, downed the Unknown and gained a momentary first session for the fall. Moen returned to be the aggressor and looked like the masters well in hand during the early stages of the final round. The crowd was in a frenzy when Moen all but unmasked the hated Unknown, and then Moen secured a real good between the ropes only to add to his sufferings by stretching the ropes. Moen then gained a full Nelson and it looked as though the Unknown was ready to concede the bout, when suddenly the Masked one planted a foot on the ropes in his own corner and with one mighty lunge hurled Moen to the mat and pinned the Norwegian shoulders to the mat, a reverse body press, to win the bout abruptly. Moen was by far the favourite with his great strength and agility that caught the eye of the fans. The bout was one of the fastest seen locally in some time.

In the semi-final Dunlop, the Toronto mat-villain, tried some of his rugacious stunts on Steve Znoski, the Polish grappler, much to his ultimate regret. Znoski proved too fast on the mat for Dunlop to crack as he retaliated first for the foul work of his foe with Dunlop. After nearly 23 minutes of rough tough battling between two masterful holds of humanity Dunlop again reverted to foul tactics as he kicked and used fighting tactics first he warned by Referee Wells and finally found disqualified and Znoski's hand, raised in victory, as the Norwegian lay groaning on the mat suffering from illegal attacks at the hands of Dunlop, prior to the closing of Dunlop. However the bout saw plenty of action and ferocious attacks on the part of both men. The highlight of the bout came when Dunlop and Znoski gained leg-locks and toe-holds at the same time. Referee Wells finally was forced to pry the two men apart.

Frenchman Too Slow

The preliminary bout saw the return to a local ring of Buffalo Joe, or Chief Lynx, as he is better known. The latter combined his rough ring attacks on Antoine Parkin of France, and after agonizing the Frenchman, with a series of elbow smashes fell on the prostrate Parkin to win by a body press. Buffalo Joe looked far the better wrestler the Frenchman being too slow for the cagy Indian.

The summary:—

Preliminary to 30 minute limit, one fall—Buffalo Joe 220, threw Antoine Parkin, 210, France, 18.44 minutes.

Semi-final—45 minute limit, one fall—Bunny Dunlop, 222, Toronto, disqualified for fouling Steve Znoski, 227, Poland, winner in 22.35 minutes.

Main Bout, one hour limit, two out of three falls—"The Unknown", 233, won first and third fall over Andy Moen, Norway, 231. Moen winning second fall.

Referee—Bert Wells, Belleville. Promoter, Jack Corcoran, Toronto.

Wayne Wright And Brevity are Ready for Test

By ORLO ROBERTSON
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Lindrith, N.M., April 29 (AP)—A low-headed boy, hastily dressed in a riding habit, lolled outside one of Churchill Downs' green-painted barns, occasionally his mount wandered over to a nearby paddock where another boy, not so neatly attired, was combing out a horse.

Scores of men walked past, paying little or no heed to the boy, except to wish him "Good morning." The horse attracted even less attention as he walked round and round the small circle, almost like a robot.

Suddenly a broad smile broke the boy's countenance as if he was dreaming. Then with a sigh of contentment he settled back into his chair with an air that said—All's right with the world.

And content he might well be for the boy was Wayne Wright; the horse, J. E. Widener's Brevity, Together they form the favored combination for the 62nd running of the Kentucky Derby Saturday.

Brevity is feared because of his great speed, Wright because, he not only "rates among the leading riders, but he's on a winning streak. Jockey's say, when a rider is hot, he's mighty tough to stop. Already the 21-year-old Kentucky, Idaho, blond has won three big stakes and more than $150,000 this year.

Mrs. Silas B. Mason's Red Oxd stepped into the picture more recently by whipping Mrs. F. C. Mars' Sangreal and Grand Slam from the Rennet Stable in the Derby trial of one mile. W. S. Kilmer's Swing Time was listed as a doubtful starter as the result of developing a high fever following his trip from the East.

A more definite line was expected today on the highly regarded trio trained by James Fitzsimmons, when the veteran trainer's assistant, George Tippash, sends his Wheelby Stable's Teufel, and William Woodward's Granville and Mercy out for a serious workout.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

Wrestling is a queer sport. Last week local wrestling fans left the arena registering disapproval of the night's show and demonstrated their feelings by stunning last night's wrestling card. Well, those to faithfully attend the grunt and groan business last night were amply rewarded for their attendance, as three splendid bouts were presented. Contrary to the week prior, last night's main bout, between The Unknown and Andy Moen, was just about the better. The fans saw plenty of action and that of an Moen actually tried to unmask the hoboded gent while the fans literally shook the rafters with shouts of encouragement.

O—O—O

Here and now we might state, that efforts are being put forward by Matchmaker Corcoran to get "Irish" Jack Donovan, of Boston, reinstated in Belleville next Friday night to meet The Unknown in the main bout of the evening. Donavan made a host of friends last night and one would just be about top to meet with the "masked gent". Personally we liked the manner in which Moen went to work last night. First he got his away weight in reach, but his aggressiveness won the admiration of the few fans present.

O—O—O

It was surely a tough last ev', when Al Dunlop tried to rough it with Steve Znoski, as the Polish lad was just about the strongest man we have ever seen in a local ring. Decidedly the better wrestler, Znoski gained contracts to appear in New York, Washington and Camden, N. J., next week when the man who defeated Unknown grappler, out of the ring he is a fine sort of a fellow to converse with, well educated and the kind of fellow you would like to meet. He told us he was a graduate of the University of Virginia and was wrestling with two express purposes in mind, "I want to win the heavyweight championship of the world and also I want enough money to further my education. I know the fans don't like my style of wrestling, but you see my parents aren't the richest people in the world and I'm out to make good all by myself," he explained as he added, "I don't ask nor give any favors of any opponent."

O—O—O

After the semi-final bout, when Dunlop was disqualified, he stormed into Znoski's private dressing room and all but ran into Referee Bert Wells. "Say, what relation are you to that guy (referring to Znoski) I guess, just a cousin, eh?" howled Dunlop at Wells.

O—O—O

Some years ago a softball league was organized in Belleville, known as the Wall Street League. All games in this loop were played in the early season, but as the days of the lizzy of a pre-season loop, Referee Wells today are being asked to revive the old Wall Street League with the idea in mind of creating a keener feeling among the softball teams and leagues in the community. Any softball team in the city may affiliate and enjoy a few weeks fun and recreation. A meeting to organize the Wall Street loop will be held at the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night. It is hoped that city teams, industrial and mercantile teams will all assemble on the call. In pre-season play was donated some years ago by J. T. Delaney and is still available for competition. Manufacturers Such a league would provide ample pre-season training for any softball club.

O—O—O

"Red" Doran, lanky defenceman of the New York Americans, is in town renewing acquaintances among his school-day friends. "Red" regrets the Amerks were rubbed out by the Leafs, but predicts a brilliant future for his team next season.

Down in Kingston the Limestone baseball club is receiving more pre-season publicity this season than has been the case in years, and there was a pup. Apparently it pays to lose money on a sporting venture in Kingston, that is if free publicity is desired. At any rate we understand today that everything is hotsy-totsy in the camp of the 1935 O. H. A. A. champions. Yesterday Secretary Thompson received communications from Kingston to the effect the Frontenacs would be officially represented at Saturday's O.G.R.L. meeting. "Our club will be ready for competition on May 24th. We are going to carry on as before with a home brew team," was the message received by Secretary Thompson yesterday.

O—O—O

With all of the other clubs in the O.G.R.L. very organized and ready for the fray, it remains to have the local club elect officers and complete their organization. A meeting of delegates to the league convention are in the minds of the league executive and will be announced on Saturday. The local executive will be Mr. Thompson's second such attempt, however, as he was unable to secure delegates to be with the Stanchel of the league. Secretary Thompson announced that a special annual meeting of the O.G.R.L. would be held in the Belleville Y on Saturday afternoon. Delegates from Peterboro, Napanee, Oshawa, Kingston and Belleville will be present.

O—O—O

If you enjoy gymnastics, tumbling and athletic displays, drop over to the Y.M.C.A. either tonight or tomorrow night when the annual Red Circus will be presented. Instructor Ralph Morden has worked long and hard preparing his various classes for the annual gymnastic display. Of course there will be fun and frivolity for all included in a full-length program.

O—O—O

Remember Frankie Whitehouse, the Peterborough boy of a few months ago or, as who turned professional? Well Frank has been re-instated to the amateur ranks and is now working in Peterboro and is casting lengthy eyes on the final boss position made vacant by the retirement of Fred Ash, 'tis rumored.

With Dick Mansell as master of ceremonies, a gala baseball party has been arranged for the opening of the International League baseball season in Toronto on Thursday. Bands, floats, baseball celebrities and the two contending clubs Toronto and Newark, will parade the principal streets and the Queen City prior to the opening of the season in that city.

O—O—O

All Babe, the fierce Turk, may have the heavyweight crown in some districts, but he's just another wrestler in the eyes of the New York State Athletic Commission. Yesterday the Empire State "commish" refused to recognize the heavyweight crown on the bald head of Ali Baba following his questionable win over Dick Shikat. Ali Baba also is "the dog-house" as far as the wrestling combine is concerned. Rumored locally heralded as Ali Hazen.

MANY FEATURES FOR "Y" CIRCUS

Gymnastics of All Sorts Will be Main Part of Program

The circus is on—keyed up—that's what you might call it as interested group trains hard for the next few days and go through their paces in preparation for the annual month "Y" circus and display of gymnastics which will be held next night. Parents are almost as excited over this annual event as the participants while the public are becoming more keenly interested in just what's what and who's who in this display of local physical culture talent.

One of the most popular tunes of the day—"The man on the flying trapeze" will naturally be the accompanying tune of the night, as the gymnasts vary their feats with aerial bars. Instructor Ralph Morden has been faithfully training his various classes at the "Y" for this annual and unique event and reports some splendid acts for this year's circus. Feminine physical culture pupils, as well as the juniors, boys and girls, will take in the lengthy program, that includes some 30 odd numbers, besides the funny, clown act. Of course some of the feats take but seconds to complete but the dexterity in which they are presented adds to the speed of the big show.

One of the feature acts is a special skipping act, put on by Pete Beach, athletic instructor at the Albert College. The work of Herb Burley, Fred St. Denis, Gord Wease, Geo. McWurter, Harry Monteriel and Bud Johnson on the parallel bars and the high bars are little less than breath-taking. While the pyramids of humans built by these young men into living statues are equally as good as remembered seen in much larger shows. There is the usual tug-of-war, free hand exercises and everything that goes to make up a real honest-to-goodness display of gymnastics as a "Y" circus. Special dance numbers are also included.

The displays are all put on by local talent and by members of the Y.M.C.A., all being a part of their year's training. The show is well worthwhile and interesting as well as educational. Seats are still available for both tonight's show and Thursday night's performance.

GOLF
BY ALEX MORRISON

Arthur J. Amm of Buffalo, N.Y., asked me to help him select some new wood clubs. Among other things he wanted my advice about the length of shaft he should use. This matter of length came to mind when he discovered that the clubs he had been using were much longer than usual.

Mr. Amm is about 5 feet 10, while I stand 5 feet 1. He couldn't understand why I used a club shorter than the little chaps' drivers of only 43 inches. The longest shaft in my wood clubs is less than 43 inches, and I hold the club with my left hand a couple of inches or more below the top of the grip. This makes it much easier to keep the ball straight. It also makes the wood club swing like an iron.

Some distance may be sacrificed when you try this, but I'm sure that you'll find a great advantage in direction. Long wood clubs may cause you a loss of greater power but it is not the kind of power you need.

HELLO! Hello there, Dad! Will you listen for just a minute? Remember way back long ago when you were a boy? You got a bike one day, didn't you? Remember how thrilled you were?—went riding "places" and doing "things" with "Freckles" and "Skinny" and "Speeder" and "Duke"?

Though they are all "big shots" now—bank managers, prominent merchants, professional men and captains of industry—still the incidents of your boyhood on a bicycle with them are among your happiest memories! That's right, isn't it, Dad?

Well! There's a "chip off the old block" in your house and he is just as anxious to own a bike as you once were. After all, boys haven't changed much since you were one.

So get your boy a bicycle just as soon as you can and let him enjoy the thrill and freedom and fun that only a bicycle can give. Don't delay because, as you know, boys grow up very quickly—become "big shots" and have to work and worry instead of laugh and play in the sunshine.

So help your son to enjoy a full boyhood by getting him a C.C.M. bicycle. I say a C.C.M. because it's the bike I first selected, and in all my years on the track I've never found anything better. The C.C.M. is a really beautiful piece of precision machinery. If it wasn't it would never carry me at top speed hour after hour around the race track and it's not my C.C.M.'s fault that "we" don't go faster.

C'mon, Dad. Buy your boy or your girl a bicycle and be sure it's a C.C.M.

So Long!

FAMINE MENACES CHINA PROVINCES

Floods And Bandits Responsible For Appalling Conditions Among Natives

Chungking, Szechwan Province, China, April 28 (AP)—A terrible famine menaces Szechwan and North Honan Provinces unless the preponderance of international dispute today with estimates of the number of persons facing death ranging from 10,000,000 to 30,000,000.

Chinese vernacular newspapers reported that some hunger-maddened victims were resorting to cannibalism and that other starving parents were selling their children to gain money for food.

The famine conditions were attributed to repeated floods and the disastrous incursions of Chinese Communists and bandits who have swept the country like a plague of locusts in the last month, devastating all in their path.

Soldiers of the civil strife have resorted to violence to obtain food for themselves and their families, it was claimed.

Bands of armed men, numbering from 1,000 to 2,000, are roving the countryside, terrorizing, plundering, kidnapping and killing.

"Famine infinity" is the grim phrase used in the report from the Chinese Dictionary. In some portions of Szechwan Province, for instance, once China's "most fertile area," more than 70 per cent of the crops have been destroyed by Chinese Communists, and millions have been unpaid and starving.

While millions of Chinese are starving certain death from starvation, other millions are facing "extinction" from which missionary doctors say must lead inevitably to their death, too.

The disaster in Honan Province, of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek's home state since 1930, when millions perished in a combination of floods and drought.

In Honan, once law-abiding Chinese have turned out hungry, have resorted to banditry in search of food and there has become almost non-existent there.

Has Now No Desire To Take His Life Accused Tells P.M.

North Bay, Ont., April 28.—(CP)—Admitting he had cut his throat with a knife in an attempt to kill himself, Frank Kocsynski, 27-year-old Polander, appeared guilty to a charge of attempted suicide before Magistrate Lee this morning and was sentenced to three months determinate and 12 months indeterminate.

"Did you cut your throat," Kocsynski was asked by Crown Attorney T. E. McKee. "Yes," he replied.

"Do you still intend to do away with yourself," Magistrate McCurry asked.

"Not any more," Kocsynski replied.

He said the reason he cut his throat was because he was sick.

COMMITTED ON 7 CHARGES

Guelph, Ont., April 28.—(CP)—Edward Johnson, last of the three youths who escaped from Wellington County Jail April 16, to be captured, was committed for trial today on seven charges. They include breaking jail, assaulting the turnkey and five charges of burglary.

Johnson, who was recaptured in Peterboro, over the week-end, waived preliminary hearing in all but the charge of breaking jail.

TO MILLIONS WHO SHOULD USE BRAN

Tests Show ALL-BRAN Corrects Constipation* Gently and Naturally

Since its introduction, some fifteen years ago, Kellogg's ALL-BRAN has been used by millions for its beneficial results to millions of people.

Realizing the important relationship between proper diet and health, the Kellogg Company has aided for some years research in leading university laboratories. These tests show that the continued use of bran is thoroughly satisfactory.

ALL-BRAN supplies soft "bulk" which absorbs water, and gently cleanses the intestinal tract. ALL-BRAN also furnishes vitamin B and iron. Use as a cereal with milk or cream, or cook in delicious recipes.

This tempting cereal may be enjoyed by you and your whole family. Two tablespoonfuls of Kellogg's ALL-BRAN daily are usually sufficient. Consult your doctor if you do not gain relief this way.

Help your family keep well. Serve Kellogg's ALL-BRAN regularly for regularity. Sold by all grocers. Made by Kellogg in London, Ont.

Interpretation of 'Theatre of War' Is Criticized by Hon. Earl Lawson

Ottawa, April 28 (CP)—The restrictive character of a justice department interpretation of a "theatre of war" was contended on today in the House of Commons by Hon. J. Earl Lawson, former Minister of National Revenue.

Directing the committee's attention to the section of the income tax act office, whose job had been to collect reimbursements from the beneficiaries of insurance policies issued to Canadians who were in military service when the war broke out, Mr. Lawson said this man had applied for

Rawdon and District

Rawdon, April 28th—Mrs. John Snarr entertained the ladies of Rawdon Women's Institute on Thursday and Mrs. R. McGee presided over the programme.

After the opening preliminaries the ladies enjoyed two roll calls for the March meeting had been cancelled.

The March roll call "If you could excel in anything what would your talent be" brought forth a number of interesting thoughts. The April roll call "A new flower or vegetable I would like to grow" proved of educational value.

Miss A. Hoover very ably dealt with the topic based on the theme "Flowers and Rock Gardens." Reading J. E. Pecks gave a brief address on Horticulture. Mrs. Geo. Watson delighted with a solo, Miss Carlyn Davidson read a selection and Mrs. John Heagle contributed a reading, and both were interesting.

Miss Lorelei Dracup delighted with a vocal solo. Mrs. Charles Dunham gave a timely selection and Mrs. Ed Todd read a paper "Devotion to Our Home." Mrs. John Raikie sang very effectively and Mrs. Carl Clancy exhibited a pretty star quilt, the ladies then joined in a merry exchange of flower seeds and slips.

Mrs. Snarr served a delicious fruit salad and was later tendered a vote of thanks for hospitality.

Mrs. Snarr received the prize ball, saying with relatives at Wellman's.

Miss Mina Dracup was a recent guest of Miss Lela Johnson.

Mr. and Mrs. Bert Bennett are recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. Johnson.

'INDIAN BROOM' IS 'FULL OF RUN'

Canadian Hope in Derby Does Mile and Furlong in 1.53 1-5 Easily

Louisville, April 28.—(CP)—Indian Broom, from the Vancouver Stable of Major A. C. Taylor, made observers look twice at their watches by working out a mile in 1.38 3-5 in capturing the $50,000 Kentucky Derby Saturday. The Canadian hope breezed the mile and a furlong in 1.53 1-5.

Indian Broom's sparkling effort took all interest away from the performance of Brevity, odds-on favorite.

Ridden by George Burns, veteran of the Canadian circuits, who, will be up Saturday, Indian Broom ran the first quarter in 23 seconds, was at the half-mile pole in :46 3-5, clipped the five-eights off in :58 2-5 and the three-quarters in 1:11 3-5. He finished out the mile in a hand drive before slackening.

"He ran the hell of a race," declared Burns after the workout. "He could have gone faster, if I had let him and let me tell you he sure did run."

Tappahannock, Va., April 28 (CP)—Dogs spelled a sodersmithian plus here. Strolling casinos and bookmakers reaped the wet concrete that aftermath plans were abandoned.

Fatal Plane Flown Against Air Rules

DETROIT, Mich., April 28.—(CP)—The airplane in which Lee F. Hickey, formerly of Hamilton, Ontario, and William Madyek were hurt fatally Sunday evening was being flown in defiance of Aeronautical regulations, it was declared according to S. B. Sheets, Assistant Director of the State Department of Aeronautics, who is investigating.

Hickey, killed in the crash, had a private pilot's license and Madyek, who was thrown clear of the wreckage and died in the Saratoga General Hospital a few hours later, had an amateur pilot's license.

State regulations specify that one of the two pilots in a dual-control ship must be at least a licensed transport pilot, it said.

"As the owner of a Dodge D-2 Touring Sedan, I am glad to tell you that I am getting more driving than my car two months ago. I am averaging 21 miles to the gallon of gasoline by my gas mileage records, and I was hesitant about purchasing a car.

"Floating Power has removed any doubts I had about the car. It has power and flexibility of the first car I ever had. I am delighted with the car in every way, and although it is far from being the most expensive,

"I am pleased with its riding qualities, and the hydraulic brakes have made it a particularly easy car to handle.

"All this is in addition to the economy operation which I would not have believed possible."

Current Attractions at Local Theatres

What Local Theatre Managers Have to Say About Current Offerings

AT THE CAPITOL

Two Features: "Exclusive Story", "East of Java".

Romantic and exciting at the same time is the new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer picture, "Exclusive Story," now playing at the Capitol Theatre, with Franchot Tone and Madge Evans co-featured in the leading roles.

Based on Martin Mooney's discoveries in exposing the notorious members racket in New York, it is a swift moving tale of the crusade and capture of these modern-day public enemies by a daring young attorney, with the help of a beautiful girl, herself the daughter of a racket victim.

Both Tone and Miss Evans are excellent in these roles. It is their first time together and, judging from their success, they will be teamed often again in the future.

Stuart Erwin plays his role of the not-so-dumb newspaper reporter with customary finesse and humor.

Joseph Calleia, the screen's number one "menace," gives a brilliant characterization of the steel-hearted "brains" of the ruthless gang.

"East of Java"

"East of Java," the film in which Charles Bickford, its "he-man" star, was nearly killed by a ferocious lion and was at death's door for days, is now playing at the Capitol.

Actual jungle scenes, treachery, bitter-sweet romance and real animal fights, man against wild beast, that made front page news all over the land when Bickford was clawed and bitten in the throat by a 400-pound lion, during production! This is "East of Java." Bickford plays Red Bowers, fugitive American gangster, who escapes British East Africa on a wild animal cargo schooner. A typhoon sinks the ship and leaves the crew on a desert island. The animals in the cargo also swim ashore. The lions kill the other beasts. They begin stalking the humans and three of the frightened survivors join an alpha of Cedric Gibbons give the action the [illegible] background. The huge pentagonal apartment in the publisher where much of the story takes place, is probably one of the most beautiful interiors ever created for the screen.

The supporting cast in every way measures up to the high standards set by the picture's trio of stars with excellent performances turned in by May Robson, Robert Cavanaugh, Alonzo Stewart and George Barbier, among others.

AT THE BELLE

"Wife Versus Secretary"

Three Powerful Stars, Gable, Harlow, Loy, In Faith Baldwin's New Romantic Delight

The "perfect triangle" has been found at last. It is made up of Clark Gable, the husband; Myrna Loy, the wife; and Jean Harlow, the "other woman".

Apparently Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer spared no expense to bring these great stars together to form the "perfect triangle" in its brilliant filmation of Faith Baldwin's best-seller novel, "Wife Versus Secretary" at the Belle today, Thursday and Friday, matinee daily.

Lawless in story, flawless in performance, masterful in direction, dazzlingly beautiful in setting and smart in dialogue, the new picture is the latest artistic triumph for the producers of such all-star hits as "Mutiny on the Bounty", "China Seas" and "A Tale of Two Cities".

Gable has never been better than in his present role of Van Banford, millionaire publisher. Jean Harlow is the secretary who indirectly starts but ultimately prevents a serious rift in the publisher's family and Myrna Loy is lovelier than ever as Gable's misunderstanding wife.

The story, in brief, revolves about the publisher who is devotedly in love with his wife, Linda. Insinuating gossip, however, raises Linda's suspicions regarding her husband's association with his attractive secretary. The drama swings from New York to Havana where Linda's telephone call discovers her husband's secretary in his room at an unconventional hour.

Her suspicions apparently confirmed, Linda leaves her husband. The subsequent denouement and outcome of the plot makes for a drama which reaches stirring emotional heights.

The cast is ultra-modern and the [illegible] settings designed by Cedric Gibbons give the action the [illegible] background. The huge pentagonal apartment in the publisher where much of the story takes place, is probably one of the most beautiful interiors ever created for the screen.

The supporting cast in every way measures up to the high standards set by the picture's trio of stars with excellent performances turned in by May Robson, Robert Cavanaugh, Alonzo Stewart and George Barbier, among others.

Clarence Brown's direction is comparable to his recent achievements with the poignant 'Ah Wilderness!" and the memorable Garbo production, "Anna Karenina." In "Wife Versus Secretary" he adds another notch to his record as an "all-time best director."

"Public Ghost Number 1," another very funny all-star Paramount comedy and Vitaphone Celebrities featuring favorite stars will be exhibited on the same program.

Remembers When Rowboats Used In Mine Rescue

Toronto, April 29.—(CP)—Leonard Amon, who remembers when they used rowboats in a Nova Scotia mine recent, stood beside the reporters and photographers today as two of the boys from his home town in Nova Scotia came up to show the big town folks what a couple of Stellarton Dragermen look like.

He was a bit puzzled about all this fuss over the Dragermen. Not, mind you, that Jack Simpson and George Morrell and the rest of the boys hadn't earned it down in the Nova River hotel, he explained, only they've been doing the same thing for years and nobody's heard anything of it up to now.

There was the big Allan shaft explosion of 1917, Amon was working in the nearby Albion pit then and he and Jack Simpson helped search through the fallen workings for the bodies of 88 fellow-miners.

"Why" he said, "all the Dragermen got that time was a couple of paragraphs. And that was one of the times they earned it."

That was when they brought the rowboats into the pits. The old shaft was flooded to check the fire's spread through the coal and the rescue men moved through the black levels in the dismal search for bodies. It was probably the first and last time a rowboat ever scraped the face of a Nova Scotia pit.

Jack Simpson was down in the pit in the search. Amon, as a Dragerman, was up above helping carry the blackened bodies to the improvised morgues. Morrell? "He was just a kid then, probably looking on."

Big and buff and with the speech of the Nova Scotia miner still on his tongue, Amon had a welcoming handshake for the two Dragermen as they stepped from the station this morning. The reporters and photographers rushed the pair off in a couple of seconds but a Stellarton reunion was the feature of the day. It's been ten years since the three met.

AUSTRIAN CLOSE FRONTS?

Vienna, April 29 (CP) — Havas News Agency said today there were unconfirmed reports here the Austrian government had closed the Tyrolean frontier and strengthened border garrisons in the belief a Nazi putsch is impending.

Official sources would not confirm those statements.

However, the agency said officials did not deny that troops movements had taken place.

BUTTER QUIET IN U.K.

Ottawa, April 29.— (CP)—Butter was quiet on United Kingdom markets, according to cable advice received today by the Department of Agriculture.

New Zealand and Australian sold from 96 to 97 shillings per cwt. ($3.00 to $3.22 cents).

Something new for the wedding gown is a new off-white, with a slightly mauvish cast. We saw this used for a lovely gown in crepe marocain made with a pointed inset girdle of pearls to match the pearl tiara head-dress. A high neck, softly gathered sleeves and double train are other features of this gown.

15,000 Members Lost By British Baptists

(By Thomas T. Champion)

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

LONDON, April 29.—(CP Cable) —The Baptist body has lost 15,000 members in the last five years, and five times that number of attendants at Sunday Schools," declared Ernest Brown, Minister of Labor, speaking at a Baptist Convention today. Meanwhile new areas are crying out for churches and schools.

The convention adopted a proposal to raise £1,000,000 in the next five years.

First Purse Snatch Reported at Campbellford

Campbellford, Ont., April 29. — (CP)— For the, first time in the town's history a hold-up was reported to the police. The victim was Miss Blanche Wallace, elderly citizen of Campbellford, whose purse was snatched and who received rough treatment from the thief, Chief of Police George Hardy is investigating.

Going Spanish includes the adoption of the bolero. A new bolero frock is of navy blue sheer wool with yellow plaid lining the ruffled front of the bolero and making a vestee effect.

THIS PICTURE COST AMATEUR PHOTOGRAPHER HIS LIFE—Ernest Vost, 70-year-old camera-shy prospector, was driving his burros along a road at Morgan Hill, Cal. Dr. Jasper Gattuccio, San Jose dentist and amateur photographer (inset) was driving by in his car. The dentist focused his camera on the picturesque old prospector and took the above photograph. The enraged Vost dashed at the dentist, ran back snatched a shot gun from his cart, took careful aim and fatally wounded Gattuccio. The old man is held for the slaying. This picture was developed by police who had taken Dr. Gattuccio's camera from his car after the shooting.

BEARS TENTH CHILD IN DERBY RACE—Mrs. Ith child in 18 years has been born to Mrs. Hollis Timleck of Toronto, one of the leading contenders in the race for the Millar fortune. The child, a healthy girl weighing four pounds three ounces, is the tenth child born to Mrs. Timleck since October 31, 1926, the date on which Mr. Millar died, leaving $500,000 to the mother in Toronto who had given birth to the greatest number of children between his death and his tenth anniversary. Mrs. Timleck claims she has her birth places her in first position for the prize. She is shown above with six members of her family.

ONE WAY STREET

JOSEPH McCORD

When Jean reached home she found John and Madge occupying the front steps.

John Junior, himself now, was a full head taller than Jean. He had her red-brown hair, but wore it combed back in heavy waves. His high forehead in the lamp plainly was a matter of pride and much care. His eyes, unlike his sister's, were gray. Despite the coolness of the May evening, he wore no coat, and his soft shirt collar lay open. An unlighted cigarette trailed from one corner of his sullen young mouth.

"Pick up a late sports on your way?" was his greeting.

"I forgot you like to see it," Jean admitted. "There's an earlier edition if you care for that." She held it out to him as she waited for him to move aside and let her pass.

"Forget. You mean you've been standing on your way home and can't pick up a thing? I vanished the final scores." He lowered his voice. "Join me half a buck for tonight, will you?"

"Haven't you any money?"

"Think I'd ask...Sorry. If I did? Want to go to a movie?"

Jean glanced quickly at Madge—but the smaller girl was intent on a game of jacks and seemingly indifferent to the conversation above her curly head. "I'll see," she decided. "Maybe I'll go home...Oh, and treat. Let me in now, please."

John shifted his position grudgingly.

"Hello, Murray," Jean was calling a moment later. "Sorry I'm so late." She pressed a swift kiss on her mothers forehead as she met her emerging from the kitchen, a steaming dish in her two hands. "Can I help with things?"

"Everything is ready," Mrs. Sawyer reported, smiling a fleshed welcome. "But you might see if Peggy can find a stopping place. And Madge's face and hands of course."

"Oh, Jean! Can you do percentages?"

This despairing appeal from Peggy starting pathetically from the depths of a big chair where she was huddled over book and tablet, "I can't make head or tail out of this old stranger."

"I'll have to study it a little, chicken," Jean answered, rumpling the student's hair, "It's a long time since I tried to take a look at it after dinner. Make yourself pretty now and call John and Mildred as you go by. There's a good girl."

Deeply immersed in her own thoughts and the memories of an unpleasant day, Jean ate her dinner in silence. She paid almost no heed to the chatter of the two youngsters or the efforts of her mother trying to soothe John Junior's dissatisfaction with life in general. He had spent the day, so he explained with gloomy attention to details, in search of a job. No good.

"Never mind, dear. You are sure to find something. You mustn't be discouraged."

"Pal chance," was the sulky retort. "You know why, too."

Jean's one idea was to get away from the confusion as soon as might be. She had a great desire to shut herself in her small room and think things out in an orderly manner. The encouragement she had received from San Gamble seemed to be waning in the home atmosphere. There were many things to consider before she reached a final decision. She found herself rather hoping that Don Browne would happen in after dinner. If the opportunity presented itself, Jean believed she would tell him about Mr. Cannon. She had learned to respect Don's judgment, in spite of the fact that conclusions always were hastily arrived at.

"Jean, dear."

She glanced up with a sudden start. The children had left the table. Only her mother sitting there, a puzzled expression in her quiet eyes.

"What, Mumsy? I'm afraid I was wool-gathering."

Mrs. cut in the kitchen with I just's something to tell you."

Jean pushed back her chair with a sinking heart. It was a continuation of fresh trouble. Something had happened.

"Yes, Mumsy. What is it?" she asked a trifle breathlessly.

Mrs. Sawyer dropped into a chair near the stove. Jean was conscious that a change had come over her mother. There was a strange light in her eyes. The corners of her mouth trembled as she tried to smile reassuringly.

"It's your father, Jean.....I've had a letter."

"Mumsy! What do you mean. He's not—all right, isn't he?"

"Yes, dear. Quite all right. Your father is coming home!"

"Daddy Jack?....." Jean's voice failed. She stood staring down at her mother as she spoke slowly left her face. "Home?" she managed faintly. "You mean, Mumsy, he's ashed in four years were tricking down her cheeks. "I've been doing everything I could to help and.....now he's coming back to us!"

"There!" Jean heard herself speaking mechanically. "How soon?"

"I don't know exactly. Mrs. Sawyer's voice seemed to be coming from a great distance. "But it will not be long. He's coming back!"

Jean felt only a fresh clutch of fear at her heart. Daddy Jack coming home.....now. When she had not dared to think, she had hoped to do such great things for his sake. If only that had not happened the day.....until she knew. Oh, no. She mustn't think that! She mustn't.

"Mumsy!" She leaned over and caught the small figure in a fervent embrace. Her own cheeks were wet but she managed to laugh shakily. "I just don't seem reasonable! I know how you.....Oh, I do know, darling! I'm so.....happy! Just think of having Daddy Jack here with us again!"

"Is that anything to cheer about?" grumbled a young voice from the door. Jean whirled to confront her brother.

"Johnnie! You must'nt!" She thrust out an arm as if to ward off a blow aimed at her mother.

"Why mustn't I?" the boy demanded hotly. "What's he ever done for me, I'd like to know? Goin' to be great having an ex-con around here. Everybody kiddin' me!"

Jean flew at him and caught his arm in a fierce clutch; pushed him into the dining room, and closed the door.

"How dare you!" she demanded in a low, even voice. "That was contemptible! Can't you think about Mumsy?"

"Huh!"

"We've got to help her all we can and.....Dad."

"Dad!" was the bitter retort, But John Junior had the grace to lower his eyes and voice. "A fine break, all right. A fine break. Are you goin' to let me have that four bits?"

"Yes," Jean returned wearily. The strength seemed to be going out of her knees. "Just a minute. I'll get it for you."

"Want to come along?" His tone was more conciliatory.

"I'm too tired. Go on and.....have a good time."

Jean paused at the foot of the stairs. Perhaps she should go back to her mother.....try to apologize for John.....make her realize how sure she was glad. But not for a little time. She must have solitude. And Mumsy must not be told of the trouble at the store. Not tonight.

As she sank weakly down on the side of her bed, Jean Sawyer knew that she had seen life change once more within the hour. After today things never would be quite the same again.

She buried her face in a small pillow that lay on the foot of the bed and let the tears come.

INSTALMENT VII.

Mindful of Edythe Cannon's promise to send for him, Mark Sturges employed the greater part of the following Sunday afternoon with scanning a huge sheaf of newspapers, giving close study to the display ads. of the big-city stores. Sometime after five, he dressed himself for the Arden Terrace excursion. When he had finished, he stood at his window smoking a contemplative cigarette. Lowering clouds promised an early twilight.

He looked forward to the next hour with some misgiving. He had not encountered Spencer Cannon since that ultimatum across the magnate's desk. Mark speculated thoughtfully as to his reception awaiting him. Perhaps the old gentleman would be frankly hostile, now that there had been time to think matters over. It was evident he was not accustomed to being bearded by underlings in such a fashion; He might even have an ultimatum of his own up his sleeve. One couldn't tell what was going on behind those brick eyes.

And there was Miss Cannon herself to reckon with. After all, she was the one who had started the affair. It was to be hoped the flaw-

THE TARZAN TWINS (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

When the panther rushed at him, Tarzan leaped into a tree, as if he had been released from a catapult. Had he not been straining to see his search for the Tarzan Twins, he would have finished the fight with the beast on the ground. But now he resorted to strategy.

Before the giant cat could follow him into the tree, the ape-man leaped down upon the beast's back. A few seconds later the panther lay dead, its jugular vein severed by Tarzan's hunting knife. And now once more the Jungle Lord took up his discouraging search . . .

Dick and Doc stood anxiously watching the excited conversation between Intano and Galla Galla. "I'll bet a dollar to a double-headed doughnut that these guys are up to no good," Doc whispered. "Old Feather Duster there is pumping the chief full of very bad ideas."

Doc was right. Galla Galla was smiling now with fiendish glee and nodding approval. "Wise Intano tamo! When Tarzan dies, according to your plan, we shall have a great feast of celebration." The chief smacked his lips. "These young ones should be very tender."

fication, Sturges followed him to the curb where a huge roadster waited. The guest dropped into the low seat and watched the driver as he deftly set the car in motion.

"Nice boat," he offered amiably. "Foreign, isn't it?"

The chauffeur gave him a quick glance from under the visor of his cap.

"Connie, m'sieu," he vouchsafed.

"What will the co?"

"One hundred ..., without difficulty."

"Looks it," Sturges squinted admiringly along the big hood. Rather expected the fellow would put the answer in kilometers....always difficult for him to put into miles. He inflated slightly in his seat that he might study his companion. This good-looking young man interested him. Might be worth while to try to draw him out.

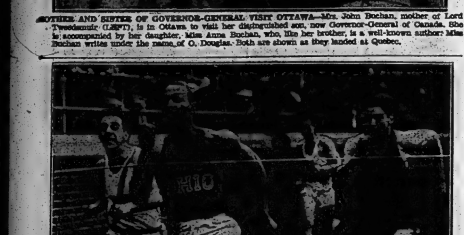
"Do you like it here in the States?" he hazarded for a start.

"Very well, m'sieu."

"What part of France do you come from?"

"But my home is in Brussels."

"Really? Charming old city."



"M'sieu' has been there perhaps?"

"Several times. What is your name....If you don't mind?"

Little Benny's Note Book

Today in school Miss Kitty was telling us about self sacrifice, saying, People who sacrifice their own intrists for the benefit of their fellow beans are called martyrs and they are humanity's greatest heroes. It is more blessed to give than to receive, and those who sacrifice themselves are the most blessed of all because they give the most. Now how many of you stored, is other words they see so much candy they lose their taist for it, although such a thing may seem somwhat improbable to you, Miss Kitty said.

Which is did, seeming as impossible it seemed impossible, and Raymin Levy waved his hand, saying, The men that take your little at the movies sacrifice themselfs by just standing there watching other people going in to see the show and never get a chance to see it themselfs even if they're crazy about movies.

No doubt they are cheerfully admitted free of charge on their day off, Miss Kitty said, and I waved my hand saying, Ginny pigs are self sacrificing because they leave dockers experiment in them to find more new diseases for their pet-lents.

That comes a little closer but ginny pigs are not people and furthermore they scarcely can be said to have any voice in the matter, Miss Kitty said. If you had said the docter himself, exposing himself to deadly germs in the interists of science, you would of come still closer to the truth, and now we will go on to the spelling period.

2 DEPARTMENTS IN GOV'T MERGED

Northern Development Dept. Thing of Past in Two Months

Toronto, April 29.—(CP) — The work of merging the various branches of the Department of Northern Development with Departments of Highways and Agriculture began today and will extend over a period of two months, when the Department will have been abolished completely.

The long-rumored abolition of the department was announced by Premier Hepburn yesterday "without fear of political repercussions." Hon. Peter Heenan, who held the portfolio, will remain in the cabinet as Minister of Lands and Forests.

Mr. Hepburn said the road activities of the abolished department would be taken over by Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, and the Agriculture activities by Hon. Duncan Marshall, Minister of Agriculture.

No indication was given in the announcement as to what would happen to the employees of the Northern Development Department. "That's up to the Minister," Mr. Hepburn commented.

OPEN VERDICT IN DEATH OF R. DUNN

72-Year-Old Man Appears at Preliminary on Murder Charge

Simcoe, Ont., April 29.—(CP)—Lafayette Hannigan, 72-year-old pensioner, will appear before Magistrate Livermore today for preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering Robert Harold Dunn.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned an open verdict, finding Dunn came to his death "through a punctured wound of the neck causing a hemorrhage from the large neck vessels inflicted by some person or by some means unknown."

Hannigan is alleged to have caused Dunn's fatal wounds by stabbing him in the neck after Dunn, 40-year-old father of three children, went to Hannigan's room to quiet the old man.

Hannigan, according to evidence of Dr. R. S. Oppenge, at the inquest said Dunn had struck him. Other witnesses told of hearing conversation between Dunn and Hannigan and the finding of Dunn's body in the hall.

DOG IS FAITHFUL TO DEAD MASTER

Attempts to Drive Away Fireman From Fire Which is Fatal to Cabin Owner.

Guelph, Ont. April 29.—(CP)—Charred remnants of a body, believed to be that of William Place, 56, lay amidst the scorched debris of his shack, converted from a street car, in Wellington Place today, while police, crown and fire department authorities pressed an investigation into a fire that cost his life.

A few feet away from the bits of scorched bone and viscera which once were a human body lay Place's dog, which last night hampered firemen after it emerged from beneath the raging inferno of heat and tugged furiously at the end of its long chain as it endeavored to drive away those fighting the fire.

The dog, maddened by heat and excitement, was shot.

The blast furnace heat of the fire curled the metal posts of the old street car and even fused glass found in the ruins. The body was completely unrecognizable.

The head was completely gone, legs and arms were stumps, and the front of the torso was burned away.

'Business Good' Says Builder Of Wooden Ships in Glass

Veteran of Army of War Years is Travelling Artist

Roy La Rue, thrice wounded veteran of the Great War, during which time he served with the 154th Canadian Battalion, makes his living selling wooden ships in glass bottles. One of the last survivors of the ancient and patient art, La Rue a visitor to Belleville, today, described business as good.

"It takes patience and a little skill, and my nerves haven't been any too good at the best," admitted the miniature constructor to a reporter of The Daily Ontario Intelligencer, showing some of his fine samples. Cleverly built, with glue, sawed it out. Then I put it in paper and bits of wood and string, the ship models would go credit to the best ship's designer.

Finding himself incapacitated for heavy work following his discharge from the army at his home in Cornwall, La Rue turned to the more easy but nerve straining task of assembling and building small boats and houses, castles and farm scenes within the glass bottles. Retailing at from 40 cents to one dollar the works of art find ready sale.

"One of the best sales I ever made was to Dr. Locke at Williamsburg," admits the travelling artist. "I sketched a picture of him down with well known name. One of his chief efforts upon which he expects to start work soon will be a the bottle. Dr. Locke was so tickled when he saw it that he gave me five dollars for it.

I did have to get up early this morning and await around for him, though.

Belleville was described by La Rue as a city with "a soft heart". "People have been pretty good here and I've been able to sell quite a few of these," tapping a large bag in which his interior decorated bottles were carried. A bottle containing mounted pictures of the Dionne Quintuplets was one of the chief samples shown.

"It's a job you can't hurry. You've got to be patient. You need a steady hand," explained La Rue, detailing the finer points and the theme that goes into the making of the models in wood and cardboard.

For sometimes in detail La Rue haunts libraries where he gains first hand information of the lines and construction of old time boats with well known names. One of his chief efforts upon which he expects to start work soon will be a miniature of the well known liner Queen Mary.

Camrose, Alta., April 29 (CP) —Funeral of Pocess, former Indian buffalo hunter and guide who claimed to be 128 years old, was held here yesterday. Believed to have been the oldest man in Canada, Pocess was baptized by Father Lacombe as Jean-Baptiste Lapointe.

Grenville, Ga., April 29 (CP) —Cecil Perkerson mourned today as lost his only hunting kitty cat, the only creature of its kind, he claimed, and one which he fears cannot be replaced.

The goat, which followed the hounds regularly, hasn't returned from a run of 15 days ago.

Movements of Emperor Mysterious For Some Days

ETHIOPIA UNCONQUERED

Italians Dominate High Plateau Overlooking Addis Ababa

Addis Ababa, April 30 (AP)—Emperor Haile Selassie returned to his capital at 9 a.m. and went indoors today into consultation with Cornelius Van H. Engert, Minister-resident and Consul-General for the United States.

Until his sudden return to the capital, viewed which Italian troops were pressing in a long military parade, the movements of the Emperor had been a mystery to the public.

After talking to Engert, Emperor Haile Selassie received the Associated Press correspondents and declared: "Ethiopia is not defeated. It will carry on its fight to the last man."

Before the Emperor came back to his palace capital his throne was put into a panic by the reports that the Italians were

Rome, April 30 (AP) — Rallad Graziani today laid today that Marshal Pietro Badoglio's troops had occupied the high plateau leading to Addis Ababa and were within artillery range of the Ethiopian capital.

An unconfirmed press dispatch said Marshal Badoglio's Italian troops had reached Addis Ababa at 10 a.m. today.

KING FUAD BURIED IN ROYAL MOSQUE

Wailing Cries Mix With Sound of Planes at Royal Funeral

Cairo, April 30 (AP)—King Fuad I, 67-year-old constitutional monarch, was entombed in the royal mosque today after being borne from Abdin Palace, on a gun carriage draped in the Egyptian flag through the heart of his capital.

Two squadrons of Egyptian Army planes circled over the procession in which no women participated, save for the motor cars carrying the wives of the ruling aides.

Meanwhile in London, his son, the 16-year-old Farouk, left London by train for England had been the subject of his accession to the throne of Egypt.

Armed Well-Dressed Robbers Hit Teller's Cage at Bogota, N. J.

Bogota, N.J., April 30 (AP)—Five gunmen escaped the Bogota National Bank shortly after noon today, covering several employees and customers, and got away between $18,000 and $20,000.

The robbers, all well dressed and all carrying guns, obtained their loot from the cashier's vault in the teller's cage.

They forced the employees and five or six customers into the back of the bank and made them lie face down on the floor.

They escaped in a car parked outside.

$6,000,000 Bridge Plans are Approved

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)—Plans for the proposed new high level bridge across the first narrows of Burrard Inlet at Vancouver have been approved by the Government, it was learned here today. The Lion's Gate Bridge Company will undertake the work at an expected cost of all told of approximately $6,000,000.

The bridge will connect Vancouver with the municipalities on the north shore of the inlet and will provide speedy communication between the city and a series of parks and drives.

people the things that would help them, and saying these things vividly, with a remarkable economy of speech."

Kipling's final return to England after years in India and America, his stay in the latter country being embittered with conflicts with literary pirates, was with the assistance that he found at Burleigh, still, the answer to his quest. After the war he came to Sussex as the gracious English home where he lived his days. He worked throughout the war and after the war he was on the War Graves Commission, working together and also His Majesty, the late King.

Kipling was a moralist, a magician, a man of keen sensitiveness, of keen feeling and with the ability to translate into beautiful words the keenest feelings he experienced. He was a master of the artist, a colorman with words.

To those who read and call Kipling dated, Mr. Kyle said that he is not of any age but of all time. He had the power given to very few to take the limitation of his experience and make of it something of universal application.

As a short story writer he was par excellence for this generation. He could put something worth matchless economy of language, into life, that was not apparently in life before. He reached across the border—he brought to his readers new facts and sensations because of his immense power to convey those impressions with such an atmosphere. By reading from his works, Mr. Kyle illustrated the points he had made concerning the writer.

"Captains Courageous" was for Kipling an increase in height. It was a direct effort and after it he could go back and write "little stories." Mr. Kyle gave in a most sympathetic manner readings from his poetry and prose.

"A surely the verdict of our own age," he concluded, "will not anticipate only a little the verdict of posterity that here was a great man a genius in the world of letters. We are not compelled to value to the last inch his achievement. We know what he meant to us, for we do know that we can begin to ignore and we shall not be the poorer naught common in the earth."

Dr. A. Gibson Inspects Entomologist Bureau

Dr. A. Gibson, chief entomologist of the Dominion Entomological Service, Ottawa, was visited this city yesterday made a complete inspection of the local laboratory and new addition which is expected to be opened soon. As yet no field work has been undertaken by the local staff, although placements of corn borer parasites are expected to reach a heavy total this season.

POLICE BLOTTER

Local police authorities today are searching for an alleged cheque artist, who has been circulating worthless cheques in Belleville recently. Two merchants complained they had cashed cheques for nearly dressed man, the cheque bearing the signature of a well-known person about town. Later the signature was found to be forged. Moreover, "With warnier winds blowing tramontana are apparently sleeping out-of-doors whenever possible," explained Sergeant Hall this morning when a general falling off of tramontana desirous of sleeping accommodation in the police detention was noted. Only nine transients applied for a night's lodging last night. The high number to sign the register any one day this month was 36.

"Y" CIRCUS IS MUCH ENJOYED

Demonstrations By All Groups Prove Highly Entertaining

Laughter, thrills and excitement reigned supreme at the Y.M.C.A. last evening when the presentation of the annual "Y" circus and display of gymnastic skill by drawn the man of the flying trapeze, breath-taking pyramids and rolicking tumblers all added to the general amusement of the circus, that will be repeated at the "Y" again this evening.

Demonstrations of physical culture by the various Y.M.C.A. classes including girls, junior boys, boys, intermediates and seniors, special dance acts were presented by the pupils of Miss Mary Forster and Miss White to add to the colorful design given by local talent. The circus opened with the customary grand march that introduced the various acts. Instructor Ralph Morden under whose guidance the circus was staged, acted as ringmaster and announcer.

Twenty-nine acts in all composed the lengthy program that was completed with speed and crowned with success. Especially of note was the splendid work of the "Y" seniors in their athletic presentations and their fine build high bars. The troupe included Herb Burley, Fred Wilson, E. McCarrol, Bud Johnson, Bill McMurter and Gordon Jones. The human statues of Burley and Johnson also brought rounds of applause. The silence of this act was the plus that stood rigid in posture and covered with bedsheets added to the beauty of the act. The girls' boisterous dance number of Misses M. Maclean, Margaret Griffin, Rena Salisbury, Grace Sheppard, Lois Wallace, Mary Lou Archer, Ina Dupuis and Marguerite Scott presented a splendid skit that was roundly applauded and appreciated.

The funny forms Bill Bonnetrait, Don Ridley, Doug. Mills, Jack Wilson, Dawson Boyd and Elton McMurray added comedy and end of the program in a splendid manner while Walter Beasley's skit of King Tut proved highly amusing.

Assisting the circus were special dances from Miss Mary Forster's class including Joy Campbell, tap dance, Ruth Hagerman, acrobatic dance and Rhoda Simmons, special dance. Misses White, Elliott and Mastin also gave a pleasing dance number of Miss Marsbeth Stobie, Mary Lyle and Ellen Cameron.

The entire "Y" circus will be repeated tonight with added features.

SCADDING'S FEET ARE IMPROVING

Injured Into Magill's Death Will be Removed Thursday

MOOSE RIVER, April 30.—The death of Norman Magill, Toronto barrister, who died in the arms of Dr. A. Burke Robertson in the Moose River Gold Mine, will be resumed tomorrow in the mining village's temporary morgue. It will be attended by Deputy Minister of Mines Hormisi MacKenzie and other officials of the Department.

Today at Halifax it was reported that Scadding's condition was good. "He is doing very well. His pneumonia is good. His feet have shown very definite improvement," the doctors stated.

Steady improvement was marking the convalescence of Dr. Robertson, his attending physician. Dr. Ian MacDonald reported.

His only discomfort was from his feet and that condition was not considered at all serious, Dr. MacDonald said.

Letters Written by Mr. Geo. M. Jones Conveying Impressions of His Travels Across The Continent to The Land of The Golden Sun

No. 3

Hello New York, good-bye Buffalo!

After four days of cold, wet weather, we left Buffalo for New York, a city we have learned to love after five consecutive visitations. But nevertheless Buffalo is no mediocre city.

While there we went to the theatres and enjoyed immensely two wonderful screen performances, namely, "The Great Ziegfeld" and "Little Lord Fauntleroy." Both are the screen and its marvellous sound accompaniments produce such superb productions, nothing else does, come to a weary world. We all have loaded ourselves down with overwhelming verse and burdens, and a merciful Providence has provided a medium whereby we may lose ourselves and smile for hours on end. We commend the two screen productions for all our friends.

But we went to church also in Buffalo and heard a startling evangelistic service. The pastor was once a renegade insurance agent, who had been soundly and assuredly converted about fifteen years ago by the late eccentric Billy Sunday and it was a clear case of "like father, like son." The old deceiver Satan both above and below the bell. Among many other startling statements he said that the unpardonable sin of many officials, present-day pastors was the obvious fact that they had nothing to say and that they had no call. At the conclusion of the service, he made a magnificent plea for recruits as Saviours of the Cross, and some responded readily. This led to the following question in the writer's mind: Should every baptized person be followed by an invitation to Christian fellowship and service?

The next morning reminds us of another unusual subject that was brought to our attention while in Buffalo. Collectors of stamps for Buffalo and vicinity were given a convention of their collections in one of the central hotels. Naturally we attended and some very interesting people and lessons somewhat a centre of interest because we produced from an inside pocket the first stamp issued by Canada in 1851, the 3 penny beaver, the 6 pence Prince Albert and the 12 pence (young) Victoria, all present day prices worth a fortune.

Many topics were discussed with intelligent men and women but only two can be briefly referred to here.

1. Canada has little reason to be proud of her stamps as only about five per cent. are perfect. This matter was fully explained in our last issue.

2. Canada is loyal to the British Crown and always prints on her stamps portraits of her rulers and those of their present relatives. This is praiseworthy but why not also those of the King of Kings. Would it not be inspiring and thrilling that all Christian nations should reserve one stamp for the glory of the King of Kings, for example, depict some scene from the life of Christ or even from the Old Testament as a testimony to the all Highest? It would be incorrect for the accusation that professedly Christian nations and people are not really sincere if it is true that "by their fruits you shall know them". The writer admits that such suggestions occasion much thought but they are set forth as he received them.

The street cars of Buffalo are noisy, rattling, unheated, bone-shaking at ten cents per trip or three for a quarter. The New York street cars, comparatively speaking, are models of comfort. This system of transportation is gradually disappearing in favor of the busses.

Our trip from Buffalo to New York (428 miles) was over the same route as that followed by us just a year ago, but with such increased interest that we now believe in the assertion that no one sees everything on the first visit. From Belleville to midway in New York State, we saw tracts of snow on the uplands, and not a single cultivator of the soil due to the wet, sodden condition of the land. Then gradually as the south after that (after midway in New York State) we saw more, and heavier, tractors and cultivators in action, grass fields greener and greener, and trees and willows were bursting into leaf. Indeed, the northern half of New York State has good farm houses and buildings as compared with Ontario, but after that southward everything looks prosperous and well kept, due no doubt to the proximity of large cities such as Elmira and Scranton.

It was Monday, and everywhere stacks of money and items fluttered gaily in the wind. Four years ago on a trip from London to Edinburgh we pointed out this same feminine constancy and expressed the opinion that women are happily the same all over the world. They wish to begin the week properly, for cleanliness is said to be akin to godliness.

A TIP TO MOTORISTS.

If the reader ever makes a trip from Buffalo to New York city it is his own motor car, require the way to Elmira and then leave it there. Follow the highway which parallels the Susquehanna River to Scranton or beyond that point. The mountains which in New York State are numerous far surpassed and is only comparable to the Trossachs or the Tweed in Scotland. The writer was particularly delighted at this point, for, like the Susquehanna, we could easily imagine that we were standing at Scott's favorite spot on the Tweed River in Scotland so great was the resemblance.

For over a hundred miles from beautiful Elmira, we were in sight of the majestic Allegheny Mountains. Then came the Blue Ridge Mountains, really a part of the former. This last was so beautiful, yet so distinctive gave the writer much concern as to its cause and origin. After much inquiry and research in New York, he discovered that the magical blue haze was due to smoke, perhaps from innumerable illicit whiskey stills so common in the famous Kentucky Mountains for centuries or perhaps due to a perpetual mist. Whatever the cause, it was a present realization.

If it is true, whiskey at least has one good point; it produces a scenic beauty that none can dispute.

Our trip from Buffalo to New York was made on a beautiful, warm, bright day, such as we had not known for several weeks. This in itself was a delightful feature of the trip. On this journey we were by no means hurried as in order that we could see the country through which we passed. As usual everywhere in Canada and in the United States, the highways are closely indented with signs of all kinds, much to the detriment of the splendid landscape (such are not allowed in the British Isles and on the continent). A few of these sign boards struck us as unusual and original:

1. Where will you spend eternity?
2. Repent.
3. No hospital here—drive with caution.

Within seventy-five miles of New York we met a rest stop. We heard the crowing of frogs for the first time this year, and we realized that Spring had really come at last.

Soon after that like Washington, we crossed the Hudson River and said to ourselves, "It will not be long now".

NEW YORK

A short time before midnight the lights of New York came in sight as we flew along, and we felt like weary travellers that were returning home. A taxi rushed us in a few minutes to our favorite, hospitable Hotel Times Square, where we were all welcomed as old friends by the manager.

We have never seen, during the past five years of our visits here, so many people coming and going. In this greatest and best of New York's most modern and efficient hotels, one of the best in every way we have known throughout our travels, we highly recommend Hotel Times Square, first class in all its visitors to New York.

Again we are convinced that you can do more with one hundred dollars in New York than in any other place in the whole world except of course in Belgium. Bargains in theatres, food, clothing, amusements and accommodation of all kinds. The late multi-millionaire, Russell Sage, had the habit of reducing the price in himself by telling waiter a good part of those could be purchased for two dollars with the personal assurance that this was returning favor for favor. And so it is in New York. Use your pride downstairs and you will buy at "Macon Brun" or at "Maison Pollete", where half of your purchase price goes to maintain the dignity of the establishment. Or, if you are thrifty, you can begin at less ostentatious stores for half the money or even less. It is only remembered that you are in the world famous New York city and where it has extinguished a career by trying to keep up with the so-called "Upper Ten".

The writer can buy Canadian used stamps cheaper in New York than in Ontario, and the explanation is very simple. Every day junk wagons driven by decrepit horses pass our hotel windows loaded with sacks of waste paper and proclaiming their search for "rags, bones and bottles" along a suspended wire at the rear. The swaying of the moving wagon rings the bells merrily and from time to time a child appears with a few rubbish to give away. In this manner envelopes and wrappers in offices are disposed of as worthless. The junk dealer sells the material, and stamps collectors. In this way New York is one of the best and cheapest stamp markets in the world.

NEWSPAPERS

When in London, England, four years ago, the writer often strolled along Fleet street, where the mightiest newspapers in the world are published. The wonder of every newspaper is the rapidity with which genuine pictures which give a summary of the world's most vital news. This is now the practice in New York, especially with the New York Times, whose windows in front door to our hotel. They slogan is "all the news that is fit to print."

CITY TOILERS

We paid a visit to the various unemployment offices on 6th Avenue and found as before large crowds, chiefly young people, seeking some kind of employment. We often walk along Broadway between 2 and 9 in the morning, and there we find in the evening hours thousands of people going to or from their work. The writer finds this a fascinating study because from his half century association with young people, he can divide the men into three classes:

1. The doomed fellows because of habits, heredity or environment, a large majority.
2. Those who will attain average, medium success.
3. The five per cent. who will become the future Fords, Edisons, Rockefellers or Vanderbilts.

It would require too much time and space to explain how easily these three classes may be recognized, but it is a characteristic study.

We also find it interesting to observe young New York toilers at breakfast. As a rule they consists of a cup of coffee, a roll or cake, or at most a bun or sweet cake of some kind in addition. There is no danger of stoutness on this diet but does it seem sensible or reasonable?

NEW YORK'S GREATEST SIGHT

Nassau Street is connected with Wall Street, all of which are in the financial district of New York, second only to a similar district around the Royal Exchange and Bank of England, London, England, well known to the writer. Nassau Street is very narrow, only twenty feet wide, with sidewalks ten feet wide on each side. Between 12 and 2 noon each business day, thousands upon thousands of young people, mostly men, in narrow street, compactly from side to side both street and sidewalks, to such an extent that it is difficult to move about without bumping and jarring. These are the toilers who mean the offices that at least to some extent rule the world. Half of the employees are released in each office from 12 to 1 and on the stroke of noon Nassau Street is packed. Many of the best restaurants in New York are to be found in this district and from our observation we conclude that customers are very prosperous. For two hours one day recently, we observed this great throng (many thousands) of office people, chiefly young men and women in about equal numbers. We now wish to record certain conclusions:

1. Not one of the thousands was smoking. We understand that certain good authorities have stated that women in about equal numbers.
2. Ninety per cent. appeared to be just average as to ability and efficiency.
3. One in a thousand revealed possibilities of immortal greatness.
4. The rest were just driftwood.
5. Their clothing (attire) is of small salary, perhaps ten to fifteen dollars a week.
6. Very, very few could be called handsome like most of the boys and girls so much admired in Belleville, and to a great extent similarly throughout Ontario.
7. Never did we see a single smile, or the least indication of gaiety either going to lunch or returning. It was just a long funeral march. When young people are sober and grave, they are sad indeed, and it is to be as it should be, but for lack of information we cannot give fuller details in this particular.

FOLIES DE FEMMES

Like London and Paris, New York is still famous for its theatres, and as everywhere else the screen and talkies have almost completely banished all other forms of entertainment. Old theatres are being transformed in various ways and the most recent as well as the most popular is the "Folies de Bergere" (Follies of women), just a bit of artistic France transported to Seventh Avenue and 50th Street. The interior of an old theatre is fitted up beautifully as a night club. The main part of the ground floor is covered with tables, which have a considerable elevation from front to rear. There are also galleries supplied with tables. One thousand guests can be taken care of at one time. The decorations and lighting are very beautiful and remind us of the "Queen of Bermuda" on which we sailed a year ago for Bermuda. All the lighting is enclosed in panels, pillars and ceiling and is very soft of changing hues. The effects are so modern and so different that it is impossible to say more. The stage is lower than most of the auditorium and is used by the guests for dancing when the show is not on. Two orchestras alternate, one for the show, and one for the dancing.

From seven to eight an excellent dinner is served with intermittent dancing by the guests. Then a real Paris show follows in which beautiful women, adorned in furs, feathers and then less and less are to be noticed, play the leading part. Even this has appeared as the war was driven from the Garden of Eden only much more beautiful. There are two such performances each night, with dinners, at full capacity always of over a thousand at an average charge of around five dollars each. Beyond a doubt it is the greatest present success in Broadway and in any sense of the word. Every guest is supremely impressed with the loveliness and ability of women in general.

There is still much more to follow concerning New York.

FASHION NOTES

Mrs. James reports that the chief styles in New York are much the same as in Toronto but she adds a few that are different and that are just coming in vogue:

1. Black dresses with white trimming and long capes to bottom or dress though some are short.
2. The same in navy blue.
3. Some suits with cape effect where cape forms a part of the suit.
4. White silk pancake caps (coat and shirt) worn with large wine color hat and V-shaped scarf like hat, also gloves and handbag to match. White shoes are worn with a little touch of red.
5. White silk suits mentioned in 4 are also worn with large cinnamon brown hats and other accessories to match. The white shoes show a touch of brown and the face powder is a dark tan shade.

Best wishes to all.

MINTO

Minto—The Misses Marjorie and Miss Clemens spent the week end under the parental roof.

Mr. and Mrs. Ken Belcour spent Sunday at Mr. Fred Cook's.

Miss Edna McMaster has returned home after visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Paul, in Thurlow.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Wright and Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Haywood spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Bill Warren at Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. Poe Hagerman and Mr. and Mrs. John R. Hagerman spent one day recently at Mr. and Mrs. Albert Hagerman's.

Miss Josephine Sine spent Saturday at her home here.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morgan spent the week end with relatives in Kingston.

Mr. and Mrs. George McMaster and family were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Alex Bateman on Sunday.

On Thursday evening of last week a large crowd from the Hamilton Young Peoples' Union journeyed to Sidney and spend a social evening with the Young People's Union here. The meeting was opened by chairman a hymn after which Mr. Turner led in prayer. Miss Leah Carr read the scripture lesson. A hymn was sung. Mrs. Pitchett gave a very pleasing solo. Mr. Poe Vanderburg gave the topic entitled "Friendship". Miss Annie Cooke gave a reading entitled "Rudolph". A duet was sung by the Misses Art James and Flory Sine. Kathleen Johnston gave a reading. Mr. Delbert McGrady gave a guitar selection. And a hymn was sung after Mr. Delbert Sine put on a contest. The meeting was closed with the benediction. The Salem ladies then served lunch and then the National Anthem was sung, after all feeling that a pleasant time had been spent together.

Dickens' Granddaughter Found Unconscious, Dies

London, April 30—(AP)—Ethel Dickens, 71, grand-daughter of Charles Dickens, died yesterday. The daughter of Dickens' eldest son, Charles, Miss Dickens was a playwright.

She died in a hospital to which she was removed after being found unconscious in a Chelsea apartment.

Police took possession of drug tablets they discovered.

CHAIN STORES APPARENTLY ARE NO RESPECTORS OF LATITUDE OR LONGITUDE, away up on the rim of the Arctic ocean is a chain of stores operated by one Boris Magida, a stocky, bright-eyed little Jew. His half dozen stores are spotted along a thousand miles of the Arctic ocean, on Alaska's Kotzebue Sound, in Eskimo villages named variously Deering, Candle, Shishmaref, Kobuk, etc. Trader Magida comes out each year to buy goods and market his furs which he takes in trade from the Eskimos. The business has been conducted for twenty years and must be on an honest basis, says the Arctic trader or the Eskimos would trade elsewhere. They will travel unbelievable distances to trade where they desire, as much as 500 miles by dog team. Credit sometimes extends as far as fifteen years. Eskimos and white customers bring in furs, gold, seal oil and reindeer meat to trade for canned goods, clothes, hardware, needles, anchor, liquor. Last year Trader Magida did $90,000 worth of business, and another $15,000 was taken in by Kotzebue Sound Literage Co., which he also owns. This enterprising business man to whom fifty degrees below zero and lower hold no terrors, was born 48 years ago in Vilna, Russia. At 18 he sailed from Hamburg for Candle, Alaska, to join his brother Sam, who was working in a chain trading post owned by Herbert Greenberg. In 1915 the brothers bought posts at Kiana and Kotzebue, started a chain of their own. Brother Boris enlisted in the U.S. Army in wartime, thereby gained U. S. citizenship. After the War the Magida abandoned their post at Kiana and founded others along the coast. Sam Magida died in 1929, and his widow, known as Queen Bess in Nome, later joined Boris in the business.

THE KING IS DEAD, GOD SAVE THE KING. Another King is dead and another King takes the throne. King Fuad I, of Egypt, has answered the call of that Grim Reaper who is no respector of persons, and his son, Crown Prince Farouk, 16-year-old student at an English Academy will succeed him as ruler under a board of regents named by his father before his death and placed in a sealed envelope. At the age of eighteen the young King will take full charge unless something has happened in the meantime to unseat him. The job of ruler of Egypt is no soft one under present circumstances, for there is a rumble of revolution going on which portends trouble—little or BIG, who knows? Great Britain has vital interests in Egypt, in the Suez Canal and in the route to and to India must be kept open. Italy has thrust into this disturbed zone of British influence more disturbance in its determination to annex Ethiopia through force of arms. Italy is a disturbing factor in Egypt there being a large number of Italians in that country, all said to be aiding and abetting and inciting against Great Britain. However, the Old Land with a thousand years of diplomatic experience behind it may be depended upon to at least hold what she has.

MR. DOOLEY IS DEAD—a dang good man as his friend, Mr. Hennessey would admit were he around to interrogate. Many newspaper readers will remember with pleasure the dialogues between Mr. Dooley and Hinnissey as reported by Finley P. Dunne, one of the bright boys of the reportorial group in Chicago in the budding days of Bill Nye, Booth Tarkington, Eugene Field, M. Quad, James Whitcomb Riley, Peter Dunne Finley Peter Dunne achieved if not immortality at least more or lasting fame mostly for the fun they created and the laughs they generated by medium of words typed on that movable type is almost a thing of the past, and a line of type is nothing but a slug, a hot one at that, there does not seem to be any humor in it. However, what we started out to say was—Finley P. Dunne (Mr. Dooley) is dead, died in New York City the other day of a cancer. Peace to his ashes, he was a dang good reporter and a real man.

The Intelligencer has received from Mr. R. A. Lister, formerly of Belleville, now cashier of the Lompoc Valley Bank, Lompoc, California, an illustrated booklet showing scenes in the beaches of Lompoc and the surrounding district.

What a blessing it will be when all the wooden sidewalks in this city are replaced by concrete walks. Surely Belleville never made a better investment than when concrete walks were put down in some parts of the city. We can appreciate them better after a short trip over the cruel and rickety old wooden walks which still remain on some streets. They can not be removed too quickly.

CHEESE BONUS IS DISCONTINUED

1 1-2 Cents a Found Will No Longer be Paid Manufacturers

Ottawa, April 30 (CP)—The cheese bonus of 1½ cents a pound which was effective for the last six months of 1935, will be discontinued, Agricultural Minister Gardiner announced last night. One reason was the tremendous increase in exports to the United States under the new Trade Treaty.

The bonus was introduced by the Bennett Government with the object of diverting milk from butter to cheese in order to keep Canadian butter from the export market and consequent lower prices. In the six months, $1,100,000 was paid cheese manufacturers with the amounts for production increasing one per cent.

In the first three months of 1936, with the Canadian-American Trade Agreement in force, exports increased from 65,900 pounds to 2,711,700 pounds. In March alone, exports were 1,836,200 pounds, compared to 14,700 last year.

Picton and District

Picton—Workmen are busy putting in shape the grounds of Old St. Mary's Anglican Church, now in charge of the visiting lady interesting among the graves there, where many of the most prominent people of pioneer times in the County are buried. The choice and handsome old stone of the tombstones are most interesting and beautiful, especially from the antiquity of the older particular. Here the grounds are well cared for and are one of the beauty spots of the town.

Mr. Vernon Lockwood has purchased a very modern enclosed delivery truck, that makes a fine appearance for its work.

First Mate Russell Brown left Picton early in the week for Port Williams, to join Capt. Thos. Lighthall on one of the boats of the Fair-bairns line for the season.

Mrs. Boyce supplied the music for dancing, and a very enjoyable evening was spent. On Tuesday, when fifty young people gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James Hood and tendered a miscellaneous shower to Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Mahaffy who were recently married, about twenty-five gifts were received by the popular young couple. Lunch was served at midnight after which dancing continued till two.

The Whitfal Gas Company of Montreal were Picton at a banquet at the Royal Hotel on Thursday evening last. Over two hundred consumers, business men, and prominent citizens enjoyed the chicken and wonderful programme staged by outside talent. This banquet has become a yearly affair, and the hosts spare no effort to make it a success.

Mr. Manley Dayton had an eye removed in P.M.O. Hospital on Monday in an effort to save the sight of the remaining eye. Mr. Dayton has been a student under investigation by the Institute for the blind for some months.

Mr. and Mrs. John Grinsted of Napanee and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Jubey of Trenton spent Sunday with Mrs. Jubey in Picton.

Ven. O. H. Holmes, B.A. Archdeacon of Prince Albert, spoke in St. Mary Magdalene Church on Sunday morning, touching on his work in the outlying portions of the diocese. He also addressed the ladies' auxiliary club on Monday evening in the Parish Hall. While in Picton he was guest of his sister Miss Prince Holmes, Bayley St.

The ladies of the United Church are making preparations to attend the Missionary Rally in the Arcories on Thursday, April 30th, when Prince Edward Lodge No. 10 celebrate its one hundred and twenty-fifth anniversary, and when three hundred guests are expected from lodges from neighboring districts.

Home and School Club

Addressing the Home and School Club at their April meeting in the Legion Rooms on Thursday afternoon, Dr. C. E. Stothard, M.P.P. for Prince Edward County described educational changes as seen in the Mary St. School since 1876, when the school was first built. It consisted of two rooms. The building was ter by 30' and had 12 windows. Before 1891 an addition had been added and there were 4 rooms. Since after this the west block was built and in 1909 the York St. School was required and both and in 1920 the present building was opened. Last year two new classrooms, modern laboratories and corridors were added with the equipment for Manual Training and Household Science. The pupils in public school every effort now to improve the lighting of the older rooms, where the eyesight of the pupils' tests unfavorably as compared with tests taken of pupils who have attended the new. In a special class 70 per cent of the pupils have eyesight below standard and have special lighting. The inspector praised the teachers, particularly those who taught Manual Training, Art and Music. Three teachers are especially trained to handle exceptional pupils in Speech Defects, Speech Training and another has succeeded the Misty of Visual Defects. The speaker commended the piano and violin classes in Wellington Consolidated School which have made surprising progress. He also advocated a change in report cards, that would show a pupil's progress from time to time without comparing his work with other pupils. House Pension Committee Hears Briefs From Association

Ottawa, April 29 (CP)—Briefs by smaller associations of ex-service men who were unable to appear before the Parliamentary Pension Committee were read today by J. T. Thorson (Lib., Selkirk), chairman of the steering sub-committee. The Disabled Veterans' Association of Windsor, Ont., and the Canadian War Disability Pensioners in Winnipeg were among these groups.

The latter body urged no pension deduction be made for unrecorded pre-enlistment disability, that in the event of meritorious pensions, the word "meritorious" be defined, and that the "benefit of the doubt" clause be given a wider application than at present.

Jones asked: "What's the use of boasting about the Queen Mary as one with watertight compartments when the company owning her is itself a watertight compartment, a tremendous leak, is heading for the rocks on shore?"

Amputation Necessary After Arm Mangled

North Bay, Ont., April 29 (CP)—Falling beneath the wheels of a northbound Toronto and Northern Ontario train on which he and several others were riding the rods on Tuesday, Fred Mills, Edmund Dalhow, 20, of Lyndon, Ont., near Beaumont, had his right arm and shoulder so badly mangled amputation at the shoulder joint was necessary.

Dalhow has considerable blood before he could be given first aid and his condition at the time of the amputations in the civic hospital was critical, according to Dr. A. E. Feeney. He rallied through the night, however, and his condition today is greatly improved.

DISCUSS PLANS TO TICKLE APPETITES

Parliament to Induce More Inland Canadians to Eat More Fish

OTTAWA, April 30.—(C.P.)—Inland Canadians could be induced to eat more fish, assembled fishermen would be happy and busy, according to Matthew Wellington Dickie, Colchester member of Parliament.

The House of Commons yesterday discussed plans for building up supplies of resident of Central Canada and the Prairie Provinces with orders of fresh saltwater fish as well as other measures to improve the lot of the fishermen. The practical result of the discussion was approval of a vote of $50,000 to aid in re-establishing ready fishermen and one of $20,000 to help expand sales of fish in foreign and domestic markets.

Conservative Leader Bennett, who was born in New Brunswick, told speed most of his life in Calgary and Ottawa, told the House Immigrants did not know the value of good fish and if a means could be devised of laying down fresh fish in good condition in inland cities the domestic market would pick up.

Part of the $300,000 vote would be used for advertising. Fisheries Minister Michaud told the House that A. W. Neill (Cod. Comox-Alberni) had a low opinion of the advertising ability of the Fisheries Department. He said a few months ago thousands from Pacific papers as horrible examples. They referred to the unpleasantness of fish. The rest of the afternoon was spent discussing an appropriation of $600,000 for agricultural settlement and re-settlement in connection with relief. It failed to pass and will be debated again today.

Or the motion to be placed on the land under the relief scheme $5 per cent have remained. Labor Minister Rogers, told the House. He regarded this as an enormous high percentage.

Miss Agnes Macphail (U.F.O.-Lab., Grey, Bruce), said it was ridiculous to place unemployed on the land when most inland farmers were being driven from the land. J. F. Pouliot (Lab., Temiscouata), criticized colonization schemes in the provinces of Quebec and J. S. MacNicol (Cons., Toronto Davenport) told of a personal survey he had made of rural settlements in Northern Ontario.

2ND THURLOW

2nd Thurlow—Mrs. Donaldson entertained the Quinte Branch Institute at her home on Thursday evening to a pot luck supper. Four large tables were arranged in a pleasing manner, to which a large crowd sat down to do justice to the good things provided by the hostess and members of the Institute. After supper all gathered in the living room where a splendid programme had been arranged for. Mr. J. F. Hill, M.P.P. acted as chairman for the evening. Those taking part were as follows: Mr. Tulk and daughter, song; Mr. Fred Mitchell, Harry Orlin, song; Mr. Archie Greatrix, reading; Mrs. Fred Haight, solo; Mr. Sidney and Mr. Orval Mitchell, Arnold Mitchell, reading; Messrs Arnold and Fred Mitchell, a duet; Mrs. Geo. Connors, read a report of the Institute convention held by F. Hill moved a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. J. Donaldson for opening their beautiful home for the entertainment. Mrs. J. Garbett, Oakland, moved a vote of thanks to Mr. Hill and all those who took part in the programme. The meeting closed by singing God Save the King.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Mitchell attended the funeral of the latter's cousin, Mr. W. J. Barker of Wartworth on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry O'Neil visited at Mr. D. Whalen's on Sunday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. Ross Sprague, Big Island visited on the latter's cousin; Mr. Douglas Atkins on Sunday afternoon and evening.

Mr. and Mrs. R. M. Mitchell and Lally spent the dinner hour on Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Kelly.

Mrs. Kiely of Stoco is spending a few days with her daughter Mrs. D. Whalen.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Keene and family spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Frank McCabe of Kingsley.

Miss Laura Snider is spending a few days with friends in Peterboro.

STIRLING

St. Paul's Young People's Union held their regular meeting in the church parlors on Monday evening with the President, Miss Lena Dorr, in the organization, in charge of the devotional period and opening exercises. The theme was response with a song service followed by a responsive scripture reading and the Lord's prayer in unison. The remaining portion of the meeting was under the direction of the fourth vice-president, Miss Dorothy Eggleton. Mrs. Ted Pratt, secretary, gave the report of the previous meeting and the next number was a sacred solo by Mrs. Harold Detlor, accompanied at the piano by Miss Dorothy Eggleton. The main feature of the evening was an address on "Temperance" by Mrs. Pratt, temperance expert and to add interest to his splendid address Mrs. Pratt exhibited several diagrams and charts of the various types of hook-ups used. During the address he reviewed the history and progress of radio since its beginning.

This was a most interesting and educational address and the manner in which it was delivered rendered a long and careful study of the subject on the part of the speaker who continues to add to his radio knowledge by extensive study. The entire organization was grateful to Mr. Pratt for his fine talk. The final number on this interesting program was a "banjo solo" directed by Miss Dorothy Eggleton and the meeting was brought to a close with the Mizpah Benediction.

DUG UNDER RAILS 4 FEET AN HOUR

man said it was perfectly all right and they weren't afraid anyway. So it was finally decided to let them work in view of the emergency.

They followed it until 15 opened up to a shaft—the deepest—and then ran at right angles to it. This was the one that struck gold in. The roof had subsided until it was down against the tracks that ran along its floor, and the men were digging through this fallen material."

They were making "air headway" along the tracks, Mr. Sutherland went on, until they found their way blocked completely by a boulder, huge and, in the publisher's words, heavier than the largest safe in the world.

But they didn't retreat far. Just back to the mouth of this caved-in slope they went, and there they tried to tunnel. Instead of trying to reopen the old passageway, they decided to dig completely under the railway and its ties, instead of being the foundations of the rescue road, were to be its roof.

Fresh men from Westville's International Coal Company had arrived, meanwhile, and both groups, with relief miners from Drummond Colliery, slashed into the soft and treacherous rock. Sometimes they moved 30 to 36 inches high and from two to three feet wide, they crawled along.

What was considered a good progress, Mr. Sutherland said, was 15 feet in four-hour shifts—four had gained feet an hour. At this back-breaking labor, the four-man crews worked all the time, one man actually scooping out the earth and the other four passing it back, in turn, lieving him as he bred.

Days of this, and then last Wednesday afternoon the word came up that they were through to the other side. "That was incorrect," the publisher asserted. "The story went around that they were through because they had come to an opening, but after a few feet they again found their way blocked by timbers and twisted steel rails."

Verbal immaterialities.

There was verbal communication between rescuer and rescued then, he proceeded, but they could not be seen. Instead, "The miners had to crawl around this obstacle and continue their escape path. It was somewhat midnight and then they finally dug their way into actual contact with the rescuers.

The report that Dr. Frank Davis, Nova Scotia laborer, was the first to be made contact with the two in the afternoon was given by Sutherland. Mr. Sutherland explained. Later it developed that what Minister of Mines Michaud had told him and what the Draegermen had made contact with the falling pair.

In the stress an confusion of the moment, he asserted, it would seem to have been hard to prevent the erroneous report. It was remarkable, he added, that the men had considering the difficulties under which they had struggled, and said, "At all events," he declared, "this one was overshadowed by the joy that arose when rescue finally came."

That it did come was due, Mr. Sutherland emphasized, to the unflagging hope, courage and energy of the grimy men who did. "Their one ambition was to rescue those men," he asserted, "and they gave of the best that was in them."

Board Room Gossip

As supplied by Bigrar and Crawford by Financial Service.

General Motors purchase of Cresley Radio's auto-radio plant is regarded as a signal that most GM cars will have receivers next year as original equipment in 1937—and Crosley won't be the lone one to expects to add several new lines of automotive equipment. The growth of the use of the radio in automobiles has been an important factor in the earnings of the radio companies.

Interest in the mines is expected to be stimulated by the report that the efforts of the Federal Government to develop new mining districts.

Gold

The scarcity of gold, which had a certain section of American and European economists all a flutter for short a time ago, and which ides had a strong bearing on certain policies of the United States, is further away than ever. The annual report on gold production from 1926-1935 inclusive in 1926 to 31,000,000 in 1935, the increase being entirely outside South Africa. The survey says that the increase in South African output should be in 1937, that within five or six years South African output may approach the 14,000,000 ounce mark, more than 4,000,000 above the 1935 output. In addition, large prospective increases in Russian production are claimed. If it be assumed that production increase as expected in these two countries, the world output may be at the rate of gold in 1940 may well exceed 40,000,000 ounces. In 1926 it was 20,000,000 ounces. The increase in the value of gold, since the markup in value of gold, makes it certain that more than enough will be on hand to finance all the credit needed for any conceivable expansion in commerce. Indeed the gold foundation of a worldwide inflation of credit is being laid.

Anglers Prepare For Trout Fishing

Local fishermen who have been engaged during the past several days in overhauling fishing poles and tackle will find good fishing in their favorite trout streams when the season opens when they take the field on Friday, opening day of the trout season, in the opinion of Herbert McCabe, County Game Warden of this section.

Although streams are fairly high and swollen, it is believed that the trout have come through the winter and spring in good shape, in spite of the threat of muddy water and abnormal flood conditions, in the opinion of the Game Warden.

TORONTO INDUSTRIALS CLOSE

Toronto, April 30—(CP)—Following a 1935 gain of 40 per cent for the year, the industrial list of the Toronto exchange tightened up in the last hour today and closed with a very narrow margin of losses over gains. At early afternoon moderation ranging up to 1 1-4 points were showing in the list, but there was not of the slump on the leadership of Pantepec which pushed up to 4 1-2 for a gain of almost a point. Liquor stocks erased their early losses and the metals and Mining Consolidated finishers closed with moderate net gains. Recession practically all day in Dominion Textiles and building stocks.

Pantepec rose to 30 3-4, a new low for the year but it came back around 22 for a net gain of 1 1-2 points. Distillers were also closed on top. Nickel had about 3-4 of a point to the good.

Weak spots in the utilities were Shawinigan, Power Corporation, Union Gas and United Fuels Pref. and in the steak losses of 1-3 to 1-2 were such as Bell, Steel of Canada shares, Pressed Metals and Dominion Bridge. Hamilton Bridge Pfd. showed a gain of 3-4.

WALL STREET CLOSE

New York, April 30—(AP)— After a sharp selling spasm, in which many issues dropped two points or more for the year with losses of one to around four points, stock market prices today established sharply irregular tendencies.

Business that improved included Du Pont, Montgomery Ward, U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Consolidated Edison, Kennecott, Southern Pacific, Northern Pacific and Delaware and Hudson.

American Telephone was again a feature spot, adding two points to its six-point slump of Wednesday. Oils were off as much: Johns-Manville, General Motors, Douglas Aircraft, American Smelting, Loew's, Case and Westinghouse were down as much as a point.

The late tone was irregular. Sales approximated 2,000,000 shares.

TORONTO MINES

(Closing)

Toronto, April 30 (CP)—The Mining Market churned about with some violence today and finally straightened out 1-32 to 1-4 on the climb in the last hour. Profit-selling soon after noon brought prices to lower levels, following the accumulation of new lops for the movements in the early session. At the end of the third hour of trading losses were cut to fractions, but these were reduced or erased in the final phase. Trading was heaviest in the secondary golds.

McIntyre lost about 3 points and Lake Shore 2 points, with other fractions.

Little Long Lac backed up 40 cents and made very little recovery and Pickle Crows and Central Patricia had 30 to 35 cents back but recovered less than 10 cents each. Net losses of 1-4 to 1 point were showing at the close of McWatters, Siscoe, Kirkland Lake, Beattie Malmour and Buffalo-Ankerite. Macassa, Lava Cap and Sullivan closed higher. Lake Shore sold at 53 3-4.

Noranda dropped ¼ and prices were slightly lower for Hudson Bay, Ventures and Sherritt.

Steam Heat, Light For Young Robins

Port Erie, Ont., April 30 (CP)—The two youths who made a lengthy and successful flight to build a nest on the ledge beneath the window of the government offices on the Peace Bridge, have become parents of three baby robins.

Their nest is on a wooden bracket, 30 feet above the traffic circle lights and steam heat from an open ventilator keeps them warm and cozy. The robins raised quintuplets and triplets last year, when they too were helped by Peace Bridge employees in placing their nest between girders.

$32,280 IN RESCUERS' FUND

Toronto, April 30 (CP)—The Mine Rescue Managers' Fund today reached $32,280, Dr. F. L. Bigger, National Red Cross Commissioner, announced. He urged all subscribers to speed up donations as the committee in charge hopes to close the contributions by the end of this week. The fund is for the miners who saved Dr. D. E. Robertson and Alfred Sandberg from the Moose River gold mine.

GREENBERG OUT

Detroit's First Sacker Fractures Wrist at Washington

(By Scotty Reston)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

When the major league baseball season rolls down to the World Series, the experts may point back to yesterday's ball games in explanation of the final result.

Most significant in a day of astonishing happenings was Hank Greenberg's collision with Young Jake Powell of Washington Senators in which the big Detroit first baseman fractured his left wrist. How the Tigers are in the desperate position of having to answer the question that has been thrown at them six the past two seasons: What will happen to your club, when your luck breaks?

Manager Cochrane is expected to recall from Milwaukee Rudy York, young first baseman, who looked so good in the Tigers camp this spring. If York does not come through, Cochrane likely will do what he did last season in the World Series, when Hank was out because of trouble with this same wrist; shift Marvin Owen from 3rd to first and try to plug the gap at third with Herman Clifton, a courageous player but an inferior hitter.

Parmelee Stars on Cher

Outstanding among a series of superlative pitching performances in other games was Leroy Parmelee's 17-inning 1-0 victory over the Cardinals over New York (Giants). Turning the Cards and the Cubs to batsh it out for this year's Baltimore League pennant, the experts have agreed the success or failure of Parmelee will be the success or failure of the Cards. Yesterday's performance should throw some light on the question.

Though he lost, Carl Hubbell's exhibition against the Cardinals stands out, next to Parmelee's all the most remarkable job or the day. He gave the Cards only 13 hits in the 17 frames, and in a pretty good pitching when you face 40 members of the St. Louis crew in an afternoon.

Other outstanding pitching performances of the day were Pete Appleton's two-hit 3-0 victory for Washington over Detroit, and Bill Lee's four-hit, 1-0 win over the four-hit pitching of Van Lingle Mungo of Brooklyn Dodgers; and Lefty Gomez three-hitter over Cleveland Indians, which dropped the tribe from first to third in the American League. The score of this one was 6-1.

Reds Set in Lead

While so many extraordinary things were shaking the stars, Joe Cronin's Boston Red Sox defeated Chicago White Sox 5-4 to regained first place in the American. Cronin counted on Wes Ferrell to turn this trick, but it was Ferrell's Wes' brother, Rick, did the job by whacking a double with the bases were loaded to drive in the winning run.

The only game in the Majors was played by the Phillies and the Pirates and was ended in a manner all in the 11th inning when Pitcher Bucky Walter hurled three wild two men to fill the bases and in the process got him the balk of forcing wild and hit Gus Suhs, Pirates' 11th baseman, in with the winning run. The score was 10-9.

IF TRACK HEAVY GRAND SLAM WILL BE HARD TO BEAT

(By Orlo Robertson)
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Louisville, Ky., April 30.—(AP)—If you can thrill to the talk of pushing your way through crowded streets and packed hotel lobbies, stand the pangs of hunger, while waiting seemingly hours for a ham sandwich, or smile as loaded taxicabs fly past with your weary feet crying for a rest—then you belong in Louisville for the 62nd running of the Kentucky Derby Saturday.

The Derby fever, which annually grips this city, today was spreading like an epidemic as railroads, aeroplanes, and automobiles poured their passengers onto the scene of the great turf classic.

Even the threat of a typical Derby Day, with either rain, a heavy track or both, failed to dampen the enthusiasm of the incoming mobs which quickly joined in the festive occasion. Rain, which started falling early yesterday morning stopped shortly long enough last night for the colorful parade and then continued.

B. Ramsli Potts, trainer of Grand Slam, wore one of the biggest smiles, for the Bonnie Ace moves up many pounds over a heavy track if the rain continues and the going should be heavy, then in all probability the Detroit-owned colt with up the post position choice with J. R. Widener's Brevity.

Both Indian Broom and Brevity's mud-running ability.

Although there was no getting away from the fact that their best performances Brevity is "the horse" several of the other candidates rallied strong support.

Indian Broom also commands attention due to his world record performance and a workout Tuesday, in which he went a mile in 1:38 2-5).

SOUTHERN TEAMS MOVE TO NORTH

International Season Opens in Toronto Today

(By the Associated Press)

Following the old custom of the International League, a holdover from the days when the circuit was been the circuit's "northern" and "southern" sections was somewhat greater than the usual distance, up to Syracuse Gap, the big minor loop begins the second stage of the 1937 campaign today with the "second opening" in that city.

So far the southern teams, playing on their home grounds since the season started on April 13, have had all the better of the argument, Baltimore being hampered by cold weather and rains at Syracuse and Albany, the two cellar-dwelling Northern teams, rolled up 25 victories in 16 for the other group.

Starting today, when the League-leading Newark's Bears are slated to face at Toronto and the other Southern Clubs to follow suit, the season goes on the other foot, Baltimore, in second place, visits Buffalo; Syracuse plays at Rochester and Albany at Montreal in the other games.

Bears Play Toronto

The Bears, who put together a great streak of 11 straight victories and won eleven out of thirteen games on their last stand, run right into one of the toughest aggregations of the lot. The Bears won every series at home but gained only a 2-1 edge over the Maple Leafs and Montreal Royals. Not only do they face the difficulty of playing on strange fields for a while but right at the start they encounter a team which has won its last five games for a quick jump into the first division.

Greenberg Out Month With Fractured Wrist

Washington, April 30.—(AP)—Mickey Cochrane, pilot of the world champion Detroit Tigers, today faced one of his toughest managerial problems—how to win ball games without Hank Greenberg.

The lanky first baseman—voted the most valuable player in the American League last year—will be out of the lineup for at least a month with the wrist fracture he suffered in yesterday's game with the Washington Nationals.

Admitting his team sustained a setback worse than a string of losses when Jake Powell, first Washington centrefielder, collided with Greenberg's outstretched arm, Cochrane added optimistically, that the club's pitching and hitting would keep it near the top of the League.

HOW FOUR TOPNOTCH JOCKEYS GET READY FOR THEIR RACES—An integral part of the racing game are the lithe, hard-hitting jockeys. Most race-goers know them only by their deeds on the turf, or track as it is, but the candid camera, interested in the "boys in silks" invades their sanctum at Jamaica, L.I., and gets these exclusive pictures. At the TOP it catches Silvio Coucci, brilliant Bronx booter taking a nap amid stable paraphernalia, while waiting for his mount. The other 4 LEFT to RIGHT are: Eddie Ligenbergen, tapping out his note on the typewriter; Ray "Sonny" Workman, reducing his weight by .03697 of a gram through the medium of a shave and While "Smoky" Saunders, taking his favorite riding gear before tossing it across a new mount, that's just a symbol for Jock. Workman has been the most successful financially in the present season.

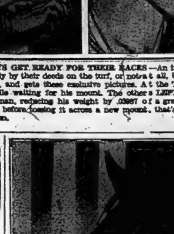
Yesterday's Stars

(By the Associated Press)

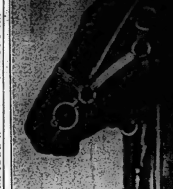
Lefty Gomez, Yanks—Tumbled the Indians from first to third place in the American by letting them down with three hits.

Bill Lee, Cubs, and Van Lingle Mungo, Dodgers—They pitched four hitters against each other, the former winning 1-0, and the latter losing when his hit driving in the tying run hit a runner in base and retired the side.



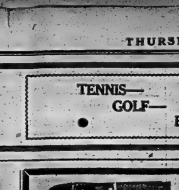
Pete Appleton, Senators — Gave the Tigers only two hits and won 3-0.

Rick Ferrell, Red Sox—His single with the bases loaded drove the Red Sox to a win over Chicago and put his team in first place.



Lloyd Waner, Pirates—His double paved way for Pirates winning rally over Phils.

Dusty Rhodes, Athletics—Shut out the Browns for eight innings and finally won, 7-4.



Leroy Parmelee, Cards—Pitched six-hit 17-inning ball game to beat Giants, 3-1.

BREVITY LISTENS FOR THE DERBY WHISTLE—Ears pricked, as though waiting to hear the "Boots and Saddles" chorus, Brevity, husky three-year-old son of Chance Shot and Nimble Nell, is all stall after a brisk daily workout over the Kentucky Derby course at Churchill Downs. This overwhelming favorite to win the derby on May 3, is being worked most carefully by Trainer Pete Coyne.

TONY POLLREIS HEAVY HITTING FOE McLARNIN—The heavy sanding makes a good target for Tony Canzoneri's "Sunday Punch" as he trains for his May 5th meeting with Jimmy McLarnin. Tony is confident that he will succeed in conquering the "baby face" wallop from Vancouver, but several experts, including Barney Ross who has met Jimmy three times, think that Tony can hardly give away weight and expect to whip the Vancouver boy.

Ted Lyons, 17 year veteran pitcher, bought one for $3.50 and says it's the best he ever used in his life....Is it sports journal No. 1?....Ditto for Clark Shaw and Bender for the derby.

Eddie Brannick, new secretary of the Giants, is coming along as a wise cracker....The other day he called up the Brooklyn Club and demanded extra police protection for the Giants....who do you think is running this club?" asked the person on the Brooklyn end of the wire....."That's what everybody wants to know," shot back Brannick ....it took a trip to Washington, two lawyers and a roll of greenbacks to get Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn fireball, the Spanish fighter, from the Yankees.

Original Composition Is Sung at Citadel

During the programme that was given under the auspices of the C.F.P. Legion in the Salvation Army Hall on Monday night of this week entitled "The Spring Review", an original composition, words and music written by Eric C. Naylor, was sung by Mrs. (Adj.) Gennay and Mrs. (Major) Smith of Kingston, as a duet. The title of it was, "The Song of Encouragement". This composition has been broadcast twice, but since then has been revised and was the first occasion it has been sung in Belleville.

This young man has several other compositions to his credit, both words and music.

Maybe Belleville sports followers are the same as those all over the world, but repeatedly we have been faced with sport customers who continually kicked either the officials of the pastime or the participants. Outwardly it would seem that those of the minority only attend sporting functions to find fault and to ridicule those who are striving to give the patrons some little amusement. Whether it be hockey, baseball, wrestling, softball or ping pong, these self-same personages seem to delight in giving the pastime the well known "bird" and then after the press comes out to give the participants a break and endeavour to elevate the sports in general then the sports writer comes in for a general rasping.

All of this leads up to one of two things: either sport should be eliminated from the community and then force the silhouette (the knockers) into submission or let those who know so much about the various phases of sport assume the responsibility of sponsoring them, especially from a financial angle. Perhaps this is somewhat of a personal attitude as numerous sport stars have given us the well-known "bird" relative to the so-called conditions of hockey, wrestling, baseball and softball in our midst, claiming that the reason sport is on the decline in Belleville is simply because we have not ridiculed it through the columns of the press. Perhaps they are right, but we have a slightly different angle on the subject.

When we first commenced publishing a daily sports column in this paper we happened to meet Jimmy Toronto and naturally paid a visit to a valued veteran friend, our late Lou R. Marsh. We had known Lou since pre-war days and enjoyed many a chat with him. He had been elevated to the esteemed position of sports editor of one of the home-town newspaper. "Boy, you've got a rough and tough road ahead of you," said Lou. "Occasionally you'll get a pat on the back, but more frequently you will be faced with trouble aplenty. In a small community your duty is to assist in the promotion of local sport to the best of your ability. Of course constructive criticism never did hurt at any time, but then you'll have to be careful not a trip to Washington, two lawyers and a roll of greenbacks to get Burleigh Grimes, Brooklyn fireball, the Spanish fighter, from the Yankees.

Then came the statement we have always remembered and have tried to live up to in our small way. After giving us a severe lecture on the fundamentals of sports writing Lou concluded with the following statement—"My boy, my person-al friend, but it takes a good man to boost sport under adverse circumstances." Please don't forget we have always remembered that statement. Then when he had finished his sports sermon to a green boy, who is still willing to learn, Lou said, "I hope you make good." A better friend to the young sports reporter than the late Lou Marsh never drew breath. His passing will always be regretted by those breaking into the game who asked his assistance.

CURRENT SPORT

DAY BY DAY

The executive of the K1-Y softball league is slated to meet in the Y.M.C.A. on Friday night following which a call for contending teams will be made. Team managers desirous of entering competition in K1-Y softball circles should immediately communicate with the desk at the "Y". Play in the various categories of the K1-Y loop will commence in May. Team managers are not expected to attend Friday night's gathering, but should have their entries in the hands of the officials as soon afterwards as possible.

In the meantime activities towards forming senior ball in Belleville are being carried on by a committee of five. Some who volunteered to assist early in the season have passed from the picture but thanks to the series the work of organizing is still being carried on. Citizens interested in the uplift of senior ball will later be contacted and it is hoped that Belleville will be able to field a team of local players sponsored by the citizens.

Some months ago our Peterboro sport scribbling contemporary seemed set on doing his many utmost giving dirt credit, which is known in the realm as paragraphing, of course his scribbling seemed to considerably as we knew he was a keen sport provider, but from the many goodness gracious, if we like to call it that, we could not see the kick City Scribbler was getting at the depths of [illegible] however, Which doubtless proved that old adage "people who live in [illegible] houses shouldn't throw stones" was not without its merit. Last week we covered a football meeting in Belleville, at which Mr. John Ferguson and Harold Bailey, two O.R.F.U. officials, spoke. We thought the remarks of both in this paper a resume of Mr. Bailey's talk on the C.R.U. playing rules was good, but Peterboro, while it appeared behind it we didn't read, word for word, the same remarks printed in the Peterboro press. Monday, there seemed to be mistake on our part, as the changes were not handed out by any of the papers of the Peterboro press. Stirling and District

Stirling, April 30—Over a hundred guests were present at St. Paul's Layman's banquet, which took place in the church parlours on Wednesday evening, April 22nd. This was the first banquet of its kind to be held in the church in the last four years and the excellent dinner, served by the ladies of St. Paul's Women's Association, along with the speaking programme arranged by committees in charge, each had their part in making this one of the most successful in the life of the church. The tables were prettily spread and decorated in an unusually artistic fashion with cut flowers and the added colour of many lovely salads. The many different appetizing dishes were so numerous that the tastes of all guests were more than satisfied.

At the conclusion of the dinner Dr. C. H. Wall proposed the toast to the King Queen and Royal family and following the singing of the National Anthem, the toast to the guests was proposed by Mr. F. H. Ketcheson. The response was given in a most interesting fashion by Mr. W. J. Martin, one of the oldest members of the church. The toast to the Church was proposed by Mr. F. W. Rowland and was responded to by the pastor, Rev. Mr. Ellis. Mr. Ernest Higginson, Chairman of the Board of Public Utilities Commissioners of Canada, Musical numbers which added variety to the programme were rendered by groups of vocalists, organ and piano solos, and also the first a chorus by a male quartette, which included Don Williams, George Griffin, Jas. Matheson, Jr., and Ernest Higginson, with Miss Clark. The other musical number was a group of selections by Mr. F. W. Rowland, R. A. Pringle, Joseph Jones and Mr. C. H. Cluis musical director and choirmaster.

The speaker of the evening Mr. Ernest Davis of Kingston, Chairman of the Board of Public Utilities Commissioners of Canada was then introduced by Rev. R. F. Rowland and delivered a most interesting address on the activities of that particular department of the church.

The appreciation of the men and boys of St. Paul's United Church for this fine address was expressed by Mr. Ernest Davis, Mr. F. Linn who rose to thank the speaker in the unexpected absence of his brother.

Thanks to all those who had contributed their time and talent to make the evening a success and in particular the ladies for their co-operation in providing the splendid dinner were also expressed by the conveners of the various committees.

St. Andrew's Guild Meeting

The regular meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Guild was one of unusual interest on Monday evening with the program, which was directed by the Social Department, under the leadership of Mrs. Winnifred Ward, taking the form of a hard time entertainment. The members attending garbed in the costumes of poverty and want, some very amusing and original costumes were displayed. The evening opened with the usual opening service with Mr. Duncan Montgomery officiating as chairman in the absence of Rev. Mr. Roy Juby led in prayer and the scripture lesson was taken from the 3rd, Chapter of Luke and read by Jessie Johnson. Miss Gena Spry gave the secretary's report of the previous meeting and Mr. Roy Juby presented over a report of the financial standing of the organization at the present time, which was most encouraging and the objective set at the beginning of the season being already reached. Mr. Roy Juby then offered a pleasing solo, and for old fashioned group of the evening was the spirit of the song Miss Winnifred Ward provided as accompanist. The impromptu address on the subject "My idea of a Hard Times Party" was given by Miss Gena Spry created a deal of amusement and the duet rendered by Roy Juby on the subject an "Old Fashioned Wife." Mr. Harry Ward, in his capacity of convener of the social committee was next called on in his assertion that "Women are Necessary Evils" and the pros and the negative side of the interesting subject was taken by Mr. Harper Rollins who put forth many undeniable points to prove the superiority and indispensability of the two.

The committee in charge of this interesting program made a ruling that all those in attendance should in the required hard-time costume and the result was a display of results of this street provided a wide array of languable and original makes and the prize for the most original costumes on display were awarded to Mrs. Harry Ward and Mr. Lorne Johnson. The final number on the program was also a number of group games after which all enjoyed the novelty of a hard time lunch.

Car Is Damaged

When a car driven by Stanley Chin, a Chinese, and having as passenger W. Marsels of Picton ...swerved off the retour over the Murray Canal last Tuesday morning early and crashed into two guard posts set in loose earth, the two posts opened making a slight chan- ...ing up the front of the car was rather badly damaged, a crowd which included Sydney, a bit of a thrill. The accident took place in the small hours, but after midnight Mr. Chin driving north was unfa- ...miliar with the road, and when he ...reached the beginning of the de- ...tour failed to detect the warning signs. Accordingly he followed what appeared to be the highway, drove over the top of a snow fence which was lying flat upon the pavement and then seeing his mistake and ...applying some washout or extension ahead, swung his car into the soft shoulder to bring it to a halt. The shoulder has never been driven on and it pulled the car into the fence, causing the crash. Neighbors arous- ...ed by the sound came to the scene, ...late traffic halted also, police and ...wreckers were called to the scene, and Mr. Chin explained his mis- ...take. He admitted driving fast, but added that had the snow fence been standing upright as originally plac- ...ed, he would not have come to ...grief. The car was towed to a Tren- ...ton garage for repairs. Subsequent ...news accounts stated that the driver ...escaped to avoid "the exciting blaze ...of publicity" which the arriving blaze ...by the glare of the headlights just ...as Constable Jackson arrived by ...chance. Also incident took ...place more than a hundred yards ...from the canal in a spot where it is ...quite impossible to see water and ...difficult to discern the canal bank. ...More than a score of pupils of ...the local school are to go to Wooler ...Town Hall on Friday evening or this week to take part in the Music Festival arranged by Miss Flora Macdonald, music teacher in a number of Murray Township schools.

Gravel was being placed on the road from the highway toward Wesley's Bay on Monday. A parties- ...larly bad place near the Corrigan home is now repaired, much to the pleasure of motorists who were forced to pick their way for a hun- ...dred yards through it. The gravel was drawn by truck and the party headed by O. V. Westfall.

Bible Contest

Community League was held in the United Church Hall on Thurs- ...day evening of last week as usual with Miss Lucille Weller and Mr. Lyn Green as programme organizers. The meeting was opened with the ...singing of a hymn followed by ...scripture reading and prayer con- ...ducted by Rev. E. F. Sanders, of Clarence. The minutes were read by the secretary, Miss J. Green, and were followed by the roll call. Two new members asked to be se- ...cured, Madelon Barker opened the programme with a reading and was followed by an interesting set of riddles given by Mrs. C. Weller, the president, Mr. A. Norrington, then ...held a series of personal reminis- ...cences of the training given men at military camps to combat against aerial attacks at close range. Mr. Sanders followed with a very in- ...teresting Bible contest called "Bible Baseball" sent to him from the Wellington Y. P. S. Two captains were chosen, Mrs. J. Hearns and Mrs. P. Green "choosing up sides" as in baseball, and then the game began. Questions read by the op- ...posing captain were answered by members of the other team and each correct answer entitled the runner to advance one base. Thus four correct answers were required to send in one run. After an hour of interesting fun the contest ended with Mrs. Hearns' team winning by one run. Lunch was served and the meeting was closed. Program for the next meeting will be provided by Mrs. D. Stapleton and Mrs. Will Taylor.

An epidemic of garbage dump- ...ing on the Trenton highway has left the maintenance superintendent, Mr. Asa Whannacher Jr., with a problem on his hands. Apparently the fact that the road has little night traffic after a certain hour has given some careless people the idea that it is an easy way to get rid of tin cans and old bottles.

Mr. Robert Harris is confined to his home. His friends wish him a rapid recovery.

Mrs. Harold Herrington, critically ill in Belleville General Hospital for a long time, is now quite im- ...proved and although unable to re- ...turn to her home as yet she is pro- ...gressing nicely.

Mr. Will La Tour is setting out several thousand trees secured from the Dominion Forestry branch.

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon.—The farmers are extra busy these days. A num- ...ber have sowed part of their land. The recent warm rains have started the Fall grain and meadows grow- ...ing fine. The ladies have mostly completed their house-cleaning.

The Young People's Union visited the Salem Young People's Society on Thursday evening. Mr. Charles Moran was chairman for the meet- ...ing and Mrs. W. Pitcher contri- ...buted two guitar solos; Miss Leah Carr read the Scripture lesson and Mr. Elmer Post gave a reading; Miss Anita Cook gave a humorous description of a husband; Mr. Del- ...bert McCurdy gave a guitar solo. A dainty lunch was served at the close of the meeting by Salem peo- ...ple.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fargey and Barbara were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Hughie, of Clarence.

Mrs. R. Chambers, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Chambers of Stirling, the Misses Barbara and Ruby Wood of Prinbos, and Mr. Fred Adams, of Thomasburgh, were Sunday even- ...ing visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Ashley.

ONE WAY STREET

by JOSEPH McCORD

Delcrieck.....Henri Delcrieck
The young emigrant's attempt to attract slightly at these friendly overtures, Mr. Cannon bought the car last year when she was touring on the Continent. I am engaged to marry her Sir Hugh.

"I see, Stirgus," his eyes narrowed, "Why not Sir Hugh's sells" again? Her man evidently lapsed into English in his casual moments. Queer.

Nothing more was said until Henri Delcrieck's car to a stop in front of his employer's residence and sprang out.

"Thanks," Mark said shortly as the door was opened for him. His eyes were busy with a survey of the Cannon mansion.

It was a long, house of three floors with the basement extending well above ground level. The structure was rather narrow and appeared to me faced with dressed stone. A massive light post stood with two crooked lions ornamenting the posts, led to the front door and its ornate iron grille. In the dim glow of a vestibule lantern, Stirgus located a push button.

His ring was answered by a quiet elderly man who muttered formal greetings as she relieved him of his hat and topcoat.

"Here", proved to be a softly lighted drawing-room, furnished in close intervals with gold chairs and settees upholstered in rich brocade. Facing the arched doorway from the hall was an imposing mantelpiece of white marble, surmounted by a soaring mirror in a heavy gilt frame. Paintings encased in massive borders filled most of the available wall space. The illumination came from a chandelier suspended from the centre of the ornamented ceiling, sparkling with festoons of crystal beads, prisms.

Mark selected one of the more substantial chairs in the room, and looked about admiringly.

"Quite a hut," he mused. "The old gentleman's still expecting me, at all events. Maybe he's dusting the drawing chamber. Cream or lemon in your hemlock?"

This last speculation was interrupted by a quick movement at the far end of the room. Miss Cannon entering.

She advanced with a little grace ful step, one hand held out in greeting. Stirgus eyes took in the slender figure in its trailing gown of crimson velvet, the snowy shoulders and arms, the sleek head gleaming the soft glow from the chandelier. The long red ear-rings. Eyes accented by dusky lashes inscrutable.

"I am so glad you came, Mr. Stirgus."

Mark acknowledged Blythe Cannon's greeting with a murmured "Thanks." Had there been some doubt as to his accepting the supper invitation then? The suggestion gave him more assurance.

"I wonder if you wouldn't rather come back into the library. Dad thought it was only this afternoon and had a fire put in there. It is much cosier."

Without waiting for a reply, Blythe led the way from the room. Mark discovered that the velvet gown displayed it's wearer's beautifully molded back nearly to the waistline, so that was her idea of a family supper costume.

Miss Cannon motioned to a deep-cushioned couch facing the fireplace in which several logs smoldered. "Do make yourself comfortable," she drawled. "You'll find cigarettes within reach of the seat arm. I'll be back in a few minutes."

Stirgus was about to offer the box to his hostess when he noticed that she already was supplied. A long ivory cigarette holder was held in the fingers of her left hand. As she stood with one bare elbow resting on the mantel shelf, Mark observed in the post appreciatively. He smiled slightly while he caused a flame from the lighter.

"What amuses you?" came an abrupt question.

"I was thinking you were rather unfair."

"Unfair? What do you mean?"

"I'm sure you said this was to be informal.....and here you are in a dinner gown. Would I have time to run back to the hotel and change?"

"Don't be absurd. I slipped into this old dress because it is more convenient.....and comfortable."

"Just the same, you look marvelous."

"Why, thank you! Do you always say such pretty things?"

"Only when I'm inspired. I've a reputation for being rather rude."

"I don't believe it. Tell me....."

Blythe left her point and dropped gracefully on the couch beside him. That faint scent of gardenia again. "Are you nice to people who work for you? At the store, I mean?"

"I've not been accused of it."

"I wonder." She regarded him through her long lashes. "I've been hearing a great deal about you, you know."

"Fact"

"Only yesterday, Dad was telling me you had..... Oh, here he is now."

Mark was vastly relieved at the wedding jewelry of Spencer Cannon, rumbling more than ever a pepsin in his high ball-coat, merry walstcoat and spats, Blythe's last remark had suggested unpleasant possibilities.

"How are you, Stirgus? It is very nice to have you here with us."

Cannon extended a meat pink hand, then grinned his unbelieving eye. To his daughter. The corners of his mouth flickered as he continued: "You should have called me, my dear." He backed his bulk close to the fire, "I believe I must have fallen asleep."

The last remark also were addressed to Blythe, as nearly as Mark could approximate the focus of the old gentleman's. If the old didn't play pokes that ancient and honorable pastime was being deprived of championship material.

"Of course you did," the girl agreed lavishly, she turned to the guest with a slight smile. "Dad is always sleepy after at the Sunday afternoon nap. We takes one to fortify himself against the evening sermon."

"Fair enough," Stirgus assented gravely. It seem that a dinner service was on the program. In addition to being exceedingly thirsty, he might account for two hours or so to good advantage. He looked about with the air of one who is taking his bearings.

Dark panelling on walls and ceiling contributed to a somewhat gloomy atmosphere, but the long table itself was a thing to thrill. Its white cloth gleaming dully under the soft light from the candelabra that loomed out of the shadows at either end of the room. Above one of them was the antlered head of a moose, suggesting that the animal might have thrust its body through the wall and been too bewildered to escape. Its glassy eyes rather heightened the illusion.

Stirgus repressed a smile as he tried to picture his rotund host in the role of a big-game hunter.

Cannon and his daughter occupied the ends of the board, with Mark marooned at a halfway point on the damask stretch—an arrangement which required the almost constant presence of a third in case that the viands reached their ultimate destination.

After mumbling a lengthy grace, Cannon began ale yesterday the while he conducted an uninterrupted monologue between mouthfuls. Mark listened politely, Blythe was more and more bewildered by Blythe's silence. He wondered if it indicated boredom or if, by any chance, it was the result of Cannon's dominating presence as head of the house. Recalling the episode in the office a few days before, Mark was inclined to believe the first conjecture was correct.

INSTALMENT VIII.

Gorham was Spencer Cannon's theme. He evolved a dreary outline of history, with the city's substantial institutions and revered customs paraded at length for the newcomer's benefit.

"You will find us progressive, Stirgus ... But solid and conservative always. Gorham never encourages the....radical." An unbidden sigh emphasized the last word, leaving the victim with an impression that some personal message was being relayed. He acknowledged it by turning and addressing himself to his hostess.

"And what do you do, Miss Cannon, by way of contributing to so much progressiveness? Do you go in for politics.....women's clubs and that sort of thing?"

"No indeed. I have no ambitions of that height. When I am at home, I do the usual things. Bridge..... gossip."

"Blythe, my dear," A purring admonition from the head of the table. "My daughter," this to Stirgus, "is too modest. In addition to her own social activities, she is obliged to act in an official capacity for me, of course."

With the conversation safely in hands once more, Cannon took care not to relinquish it until the meal were to an end.

When the three returned to the library, the host resumed his position before the fire, the fingers of one hand toying suggestively with his watch chain.

"I make it a duly never to miss morning or evening services," he announced, "I hope you young people will accompany me."

Before Stirgus could voice polite acquiescence, Blythe interposed. Freed from the oppressive atmosphere of the moose-guarded dining room, she seemed more assertive.

"I am not going to change again," she remarked pleefully from her corner of the couch. "Mr. Stirgus is going to stay and keep me company while you're away."

Mark found himself half hoping to hear some objection. There was none. Instead, Cannon made ready to leave, paueing long enough to suggest: "Then I will hope to find you both here."

"Of course." Stirgus spoke cheerfully as he rose to his feet. At the same time he stole a furtive glance at the clock, resolving privately to be well on his way home before the worshipper reappeared. "If not," he added, "I will see you tomorrow. It was very kind of you to have me here this evening."

"Sit here by me and talk," Blythe commanded, when her father left the room. "We haven't had a chance to get acquainted yet. Dad makes it a rule never to discuss business on Sunday," she added irrelevantly.

Stirgus had a strong desire to suggest that the ordained had prevented no particular handicap, but thought better of it.

"Of course." Stirgus spoke cheerfully as he rose to his feet. At the same time he stole a furtive glance at the clock, resolving privately to be well on his way home before the worshipper reappeared. "If not," he added, "I will see you tomorrow. It was very kind of you to have me here this evening."

"But don't go really think you should entertain me! After all, I'm a stranger here, ... trying to find my way about."

Mark had the feeling he might have explored a more inane remark, but it would have taken a long time to perfect it. He felt ill at ease in Crouching close together on the filthy floor of the hut, they could hear Zoplngas talking to the guards: "Scaling through the great forest, I came upon Tarzan. When he asks if you have seen the two young bwanas, direct him to the Vale of Death, the Valley of No Return!"

In the other end of the village, Galla Galla was issuing eager commands to a group of warriors. "Scaling through the great forest, until you come upon Tarzan. When he asks if you have seen the two young bwanas, direct him to the Vale of Death, the Valley of No Return!"

TODDY By GEORGE MARCOUX

THE TARZAN TWINS (Metropolitan Newspaper Feature Service)

The chief issued a few curt instructions to Zoplngas, who stepped forward and drove the boys roughly along the village street toward its far end. There the savage halted before a hive-shaped hut with a single opening, on each side of which squatted an armed warrior.

Zoplngas motioned Dick and Doc to enter, and as they dropped on their hands and knees to crawl inside, he accelerated their speed with the sole of a calloused foot and sent them sprawling into the darkness, which was only a bit less thick than the foul stench of the den.

Insurance Companies Battle Insurance Act

Ottawa, (April 30—(CP)—An attack on the measure amending the Canadian and British Insurance Companies Act was launched today by Canadian Life Insurance Companies and the Independent Order of Foresters.

The insurance companies protest the proposal to increase from 80 to 85 per cent the maximum proportion of the profits derived from participating policies issued by the Canadian Head Company apportionable to policyholders.

RELIEF FIGURES

Outlook Promising

The Border City's outlook is promising with relief figures down 22.2 per cent compared to 23,156. Since February 1, 2,300 have been removed from the lists, due to seasonal work and the government's drive against the chiselers. As navigation gets under-way and farm work progresses further decreases are expected, also considerably through work on the Livingston Channel.

The Ford Motor Company's Windsor plant has hired 4,000 men and the Chrysler Corporation of Canada reports an increase in employees of 500 over last spring, bringing the number to 2,000.

As construction operations speed up, Hamilton's unemployed decline. Welfare Commissioner A. E. Kappele reveals there are 4,971 families receiving assistance, while last year at this date 6,007 were cared for by the city. The Commissioner declares increased employment has caused the drop in the number of relief recipients and families in costs, being $127,000 under the 1935 total for the same months.

In the Niagara Peninsula renewed industrial activity has appeared to help allay the jobless ranks. St. Catharines reports the larger factories are working full time; textile and auto factories humming and the electrical industry making a strong comeback. The number of men placed in jobs has jumped 30 per cent. over last spring.

Increase of Women Workers

Figures for women workers show placements have increased 19 per cent. in St. Catharines, where it has been estimated 30 per cent. of the population is receiving financial aid from relief, Old Age Pensions or Mothers' Allowances.

Welland contractors face heavy demands for estimates for building with marked activity in the suburbs. This April there were only 977 persons on relief rolls against the 1,549 last April and the "purge" to eliminate the chiseler is hoped to cut further into this figure. Welland plans discontinuing relief to single men as the end of April.

An exception to the general trend is found in Niagara Falls, statistics indicate more families obtaining aid than at this time last year, but city heads declare the "purge" will produce a decrease, which will be furthered by the new irrigation opening. Last month 416 families were on relief compared to 371 for March, 1935, and relief costs jumped $4,159.

Kitchener's figures for the first three months of 1936 were 3,461 compared to 4,131 at the end of the same period in 1935, the decline due to improved economic conditions. Brantford had 1,393 fewer relief recipients at the end of March, 1936, the total being 5,330 against 6,713. . . .

More Farm Help Needed

Farm help requirements and tightening of administration removed 275 from Stratford's total and sliced costs by about $500. April 1 reports gave 1,965 persons as receiving relief while at the end of March there were 2,050 compared to 2,397 in the same month in 1935. Relief costs were $19,305 compared to $19,855.

Steady improvement, even during winter months, appeared in Galt, March statistics showing 1,253 on relief, 394 less than last March.

Sudbury may close its relief offices this summer as half of the budgeted relief fund is spent. Aid is being given 1,235 families as compared to 2,000 at this time in 1935, but the city heads fear as new construction drops off this fall increased applications will bulge the total. North Bay notes a jump of 300 in the relief list, 2,201 now receiving aid compared to 2,911 in March last year.

Little Benny's Note Book

We was sailing breakfast and ma said to pop, How about dinner tonite, Willyum, it's been a long while since we've eatin in a restorant.

That's rite, I set in to remember that when I count my blessings, pop said, and ma said, I mean I'll be downtown this afternoon and it would be a simple matter for me to call for you at your office and go somewhere for a nice cosy bite.

That's a good idea, how about coming home for it? pop said, and ma said, O well, I suppose we can manage.

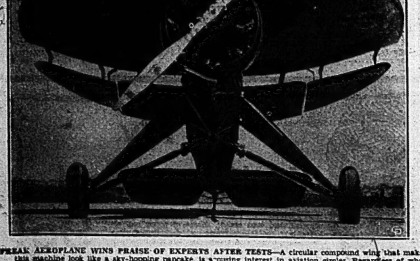
We've been managing pritty well for the passed good many years, for Pete sake, pop said, and ma said, But what I mean is, Willyum, Nora is all prepared to do a little spring cleaning and nateraly the house may be slitely on the disarranged side.

Yee gods, it was ony about a week ago that I had to fight my way to the dining room through an almost impassable tangle of furniture and all the food seemed to taist like soap, pop said. What did you call that? he said, and ma said, O, that was just a sort of preliminerry.

Just a little practice, I suppose, pop said, and ma said, Now dont worry, I told you we can manage. If the cleaning takes up too much of Nora's time I can easily open some cans at the last minnit, she said.

It sounds easy, but you mite cut your finger, you'll be liable to call me after all, pop said, and ma said, But Willyum, dont misunderstand me, I assure you we can manage.

Yee gods I thawt you wanted to eat downtown, pop said, and ma said, O well, all rite, don't make a fuss about it for land sakes.



And before you knew it downtown she went back in the kitchin and told Nora to be sure and give the front roon a little dusting.

PAYING OF JAPANESE PREMIER CONTINUES HIS STONEMASONRY—Perhaps the tenacity of Ideas, the persistency of policy in parleys, were inculcated in Koki Hirota during his boyhood. He was a stonecutter. The family business continues under the supervision of his 57-year-old father (RIGHT), with the active work falling to the lot of Koki's brother, Tokumon, 1,287. The two are chatting happily over the recent appointment of Koki Hirota as head of the Japanese cabinet. The father's name is Tokuhei Hirota.

MAHATMA GANDHI RECOVERS FROM SERIOUS ILLNESS—Mahatma Gandhi, who has been seriously ill in Delhi, has recovered sufficient strength to enable him to resume his tours throughout India. He is shown here (right) talking with acquaintances.

FREAK AEROPLANE WINS PRAISE OF EXPERTS AFTER TESTS—A circular compound wing that makes this machine look like a sky-hopping pancake, is arousing interest in aviation circles. Regardless of what one might say about its beauty, none can say anything against its airworthiness. Tested At Glenville, N., it could not go into a sidestip or tail-spin, thus offering an unusual margin of safety.

Anglo-Italic Tension Eases at War's End

Rome, April 30—Marshal Pietro Badoglio, commander of the Italian expeditionary force in Ethiopia, reported today that Sasa Banch, the gateway to Ethiopia's second city of Harar, had been taken by storm.

Sasa Baneh was taken yesterday, he said, as a climax to many days of bitter fighting.

His report came as authorities here said tension between Italy and Great Britain was relaxing and that the danger of a European war resulting from the Italian campaign was diminishing.

Badoglio said that detachments of the southern Italian army had entered Bullaleh, northeast of Sasa Baneh.

NOTHING IN MOVE

Vienna, April 30—(AP)—An Austrian military force of about 1,450 men has moved into the Alpine region near the southern border of Germany, Vienna officials said today, to engage in regular spring manoeuvres.

A war office authority emphasized that there was nothing unusual in the nature of the exercises.

BOAT AND CREW SAFE

Chicago, April 30—(AP)—Coast guard headquarters announced today that the fishing boat H. Weberhill, missing for two days with four men aboard, had been found and was being towed to port. Its crew was safe.

Duke of Connaught is Grand Master 36th Time

(By Thomas T. Champion, Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, April 30 (CP Cable)—The Duke of Connaught, who will be 86 years of age tomorrow, was proclaimed Grand Master of the United Grand Lodge of Free Masons today for the 36th time.

His Royal Highness is in excellent health, and recently paid a visit to the liner Queen Mary, which he closely inspected.

THE ANIMALS CAN AFFORD TO LAUGH AT HUMANS—Safe from war threats, income taxes and other joy-killers that we human being have devised to make things difficult for ourselves, these happy subjects of the animal kingdom are giving us the laugh. Zero the zebra rolls out a streamlined snicker, while below him Leo the little lion chuckles at our discomfiture. Bom the bear, Horace the horse, and Harold the Hippo let out reminiscent guffaws at the humor of it all. And why shouldn't they laugh? Three square a day on a platter, and all they have to do is look pretty for the zoo visitors.

BOATS HEAD OUT THRU FOG

Cleveland, O., April 30—(AP)—Witness reports to the Hutchinson fleet, which has several boats attempting to push through ice floes near Port Colborne, Ont., said the fog had lifted and that the ships were slowly making headway.

"Wife Versus Secretary"

Clark Gable, Myrna Loy, Jean Harlow

Married in the HM of the Season

Clark Gable as the husband, Myrna Loy as his wife, and Jean Harlow as the lovely secretary who innocently finds herself in the reluctant and public role of other woman provides one of the greatest screen "triangles" in the history of romantic films.

It has been achieved by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the new and popular Faith Baldwin story of modern metropolitan romance, "Wife Versus Secretary", which opened to capacity audiences at the Belle last night.

In this new and up-to-date theme, Clark Gable justifies himself as one of the three international box-office champions of the screen, selected by a nation wide pole of exhibitors. He further proves his ability to rank with the best actors among the stars by stepping from such rugged characters as Mutiny on the Bounty and Captain Gaskell in "China Seas" to his latest performance as the modern business executive in "Wife Versus Secretary."

As Gable's wife, Myrna Loy displays her ability to portray the ideal screen wife of a modern man as successfully as she did William Powell's ideal wife-partner in several recent films.

Jean Harlow, too, departs from her usual types of roles to play Gable's secretary, the sage yet lovely-by-nature confidante who eventually prevents the total wreckage of his happy home.

Direction of "Wife Versus Secretary" was under the expert guidance of Clarence Brown, whose genius has made such delightful entertainments of Greta Garbo's "Anna Karenina," Joan Crawford's musical pastoral, "Ah Wilderness!" and Marion Davies' trial of Van Sanford, wealthy magazine publisher. As Van Clark Gable is happily married to Myrna Loy, who never dreams of his being jealous of Gable's secretary, Jean Harlow.

Gossip and warning and sly insinuations begin to reach the wife, warning her she should urge her husband to discharge his pretty secretary. When Gable refuses to promote his secretary to a higher executive post, he and his wife have their first quarrel.

The quarrel is patched-up and Gable flies to Havana for a rest. While he is away, a big consolidation deal arises. After he has gone the secretary uncovers something her boss must know immediately and follows him to Havana.

During a late-night telephone call to her husband, the wife gets the secretary on the telephone in his room. This is the last straw. The wife leaves the husband. She takes passage on a Europe-bound ship, where the secretary finds the runaway wife to tell her she is a fool...that the husband loves only his wife and if she goes to Europe she will lose him forever.

The wife reconsiders, returns to her husband's office and he takes her in his arms. Harlow, as the secretary, is reunited with her best friend, Dave, and she knows she has completed a secretarial job well done, that or preventing a divorce in the family of her boss. Two excellent short treats precede the feature.

AT THE CAPITOL

Two Pictures With a Real Sock-"Exclusive Story" and "Fast Company"

Straight from the day's headlines and as significant as an "extra" is "Exclusive Story," dramatic new Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer production featuring Franchot Tone and Madge Evans, now at the Capitol Theatre.

Written by newspaperman Marion Mendery, one of the most sensational yarn crusaders of the time, it is a story shaped from the yellow journalism headlines, many of them written by the author himself.

Primarily a dramatization of Mooney's own interpretation of the notorious "Policy Racket" practiced in New York and other metropolitan centres, the new picture weaves in its plot themes from three major news events of the year.

They are the "Policy Racket" in the Morgan Candy Fire and the front page activities of Federal "G" Men.

The fire disaster and the nationwide roundup of public enemies are incidental to the love affair, the stature of the vicious Harlem racket.

Love is the motivating force in the scene by scene, the production and history of a "Policy Racket" is told—in effect the education of citizens, its ruthless pilfering of the poor, and the part played by newspaping in the wake of internal gang wars.

Franchot Tone plays the role of the crusading newspaper attorney, Madge Evans of the daughter of a racket victim, Stuart Erwin the city reporter, Joseph Calleia the chief gunman.

"East of Java"

Packed with action which went from gunplay to shipwreck and from typhoons to human beings, human beings and wild beasts, Universal's thriller of the islands, "East of Java" which opened last night at the Capitol Theatre.

Love interest was supplied by Bickford, who carried off the honors in beautiful Elizabeth Young, and Frank Albertson was also featured her, at the same time hating the brutish and at times almost animal-like strength of Bickford, disciple of the doctrine of the "survival of the fittest."

The story opens with Bickford, a fugitive from "G" men because of gangster activities in the United States, reaching the port of Simba Sao, British East Africa, because he knows a warrant for his arrest and extradition is awaiting by every steamer.

Photography is excellent, taking advantage of the unusual backgrounds which lend to credulity on the part of the audience.
